The stuck aspirin finally dissolved independently and the shopping continued without further incident, except the little boy followed Pat through 3 stores, begging her to repeat her imitation of Donald Duck being flushed down the toilet.

When the middle-aged mother and her 21-year-old daughter returned home, they told the old father they hadn't been able to buy anything because they couldn't read their shopping list after the mother had tried to drink out of it. The father wasn't a bit surprised.

Erma Bombeck

It's no use for me to diet. I know that now.

All those years when my knees rubbing together whispered "No, no," but there was a "Yes, yes" in my mouth, I fought the battle.

All those years when I lost ten pounds every Monday (five in my neck and five in my bust), I hung in there.

All those years when I embraced cottage cheese as a formal religion, I gave it my all.

But after yesterday, I have to admit, I'm beaten. I'm fighting the battle alone.

It started in the morning when I faced the refrigerator with my hand over my heart and once again pledged allegiance to hunger, I poured myself a half glass of tomato juice mixed with half a glass of buttermilk and tossed it down. I felt virtuous.

At lunch, I threw down a cup of boullion and pretended celery was wicked.

I had dinner ready to serve by 3:30 in the afternoon. It was well-balanced and would be totally satisfying. Broiled fish, an oil-free salad, asparagus and an apple.

At 4:00 p.m. I looked at the dinner again. It looked pale, so I surrounded it with a fruit salad with coconut in it.

At 4:30, with nothing to do, I rolled out a pan of biscuits to pop into the oven.

By 5:00, the asparagus looked naked without a sauce, so I opted for a Hollandaise.

By 5:30, I was furious. How dare my husband be late and force me to obesity? I added whipped potatoes to the meal.

By 5:45, as I stood watching the driveway, I got a horrible feeling. How could you possibly serve dry whipped potatoes? I added a pan of gravy.

By 6:00, the fish looked terminal. I decided to get my husband's mind off the small main course by giving him a robust appetizer. I rolled out those little butter, cheese and flour things stuffed with olives and popped them in the oven.

By 6:15, I sliced the apples and covered them with a pie.

At 6:30, my husband walked into the kitchen. "I'm home!" he shouted brightly.

"You animal! You don't care about other people at all. How they look. How they feel about themselves. If I go to my grave with pantyhose around my hips, let it be on your conscience!"

He pretended he didn't know what I was talking about.

Letters to the editor

James Novotny urges closing of tax loopholes soon

To the editor:

The capitolistic way of life is founded on a profit by exchange, that is not always creative. The fact of ownership, that has a value in a great variety of forms, that are all represented by money. This puts a value on money by a privilege of ownership and thereby creates a money market, that was acquired in a legalistic privilege of profit by the accumulators, that claim they are entitled to a fair return on their inflated investments. These are uncontrolled values by the power of possession and investment for profit in a hodgepodge of values that are excessive and often not creative. This becomes a prosperity by inflation and develops a condition of hardship by money in a super abundance by nature.

This is supposed to be the will of the people or is it a will of the wisp and a philosophy of well wishers who believe in God but worship money, power and wealth. The free enterprise or so called profit incentive of free capitolism, that claims government interference, but actually created its own problems of instability as history has proved many times over in business cycles and the misery of unemployment, and the reason for labor unions, government supported welfare, unemployment insurance, social security and subsidized capitalism with an added benefit for surplus profit by public supported tax exempt school bonds and many other opportunities for profit on public debts. The plain fact of credit input by government has to be controlled by taxation on excessive incomes otherwise there will be no monetary stability. The people should have the right to request an issue of money as a credit of performance for welfare and public work whenever the need may arise and refund its values by taxation on incomes that in general would benefit by a creative expansion.

The present shift of taxation and limitations by some advocates may not make or improve economic conditions, as constitutional government is involved in the welfare of the people and if state or local taxation does not fulfill these needs an increase in federal income taxes may follow. This may be an improvement as many capitalistic investments are not locally owned but generate their income from many locations and divisionary profit investments that affect the economy of the whole country, closing income tax loopholes are more important than many people realize.

Ostling continues comments on property tax procedure

To the Editor:

Pursuant to my last letter regarding taxation and assessment, I submit the following on the appeal process:

The local board of review usually meets in March. The dates may differ according to charter so watch your local newspaper for the board of review notice. In order to carry an appeal through the entire process, the starting point must always be at the local level.

Once you've decided to appear before your board of review you should be prepared. You will have to decide how much time and effort you want to spend preparing for your appeal, but if you honestly feel your property is improperly or unequally assessed, the appeal process can save you tax dollars.

You will have to show the board of review members why you feel your assessment is unjustified.

One way to support your claim is to compare the assessments of other property that is similar to yours. You can obtain this information either by asking the owners of other properties or by checking on assessments in the files located in your city or township. It also helps to have all of the information about your property with you when you appear before the board of review.

If you do not receive satisfaction from the board of review, you have the right to continue your appeal to the State Tax Tribunal; but remember you must have appeared before the local board.

The deadline for filing an appeal with the Tax Tribunal is June 30.

My next and final letter will cover the appeal process to the State Tax Tribunal.

Sincerely,
RALPH OSTLING
State Representative

CHARLEVOIX COURIER

405 Bridge Market Mall Charlevoix, Mi. 49720

Meet Charlevoix
...Captain Jack Bradley

An Important part of Charlevoix is the water which surrounds it and the shipping industry which operates on the Great Lakes.

This week the Charlevoix Courier spoke with Capt. Jack Bradley of the Medusa Challenger about the life of a Great Lakes sailor.

COURIER: What are your responsibilities as captain of the Challenger?

BRADLEY: As captain I have complete responsibility for everything that happens on the ship. I have three mates who work directly under me and a chief engineer who has three assistants. In all there are 26 men in the crew.

COURIER: What is the work week like for the crew members?

BRADLEY: The men work four hours on and eight hours off.

COURIER: What about the captain?

BRADLEY: The captain is on all the time!

COURIER: Where do you sail on the Great Lakes?

BRADLEY: We have loading ports in Charlevoix for Medusa Cement Company and in Petoskey for Penn Dixie Cement Company. We transport bulk cement to Detroit, Milwaukee and Manitowoc in Wisconsin for Medusa and to Detroit and Chicago for Penn Dixie.

COURIER: How do you keep the cement separate if it's all in bulk?

BRADLEY: The ship has eight cargo holds and they are marked so we know which cement is in what hold. We have carried as many as seven different kinds of cement for both companies in one shipment.

COURIER: What is the capacity of the ship?

BRADLEY: The general capacity of the ship is 11,000 tons.

COURIER: How old is the Challenger?

BRADLEY: The Challenger was built in 1906. It's a pretty old ship. Medusa bought it used from the Inter Lake Steamship Co. It was an old iron ore carrier and they converted it to a cement carrier. Because of the alterations and repairs, it had quite an overhauling and it's been kept in good repair since then.

COURIER: How often does the Challenger go in for repairs?

BRADLEY. Last fall it went in for the U.S. Coast Guard dry dock inspection which it has every five years. It was in good shape at that time. Any repairs that are needed are done by the shipyard under the supervision of the marine inspector division of the Coast Guard and the association of shippers. During our winter layup a lot of maintenance takes place on the ship, too. And of course general maintenance goes on all year long.

COURIER: What is the shipping season for the Challenger?

BRADLEY: I'm supposed to begin work Tuesday. In 1977 we began on March 23 and we finished Jan. 16. Last year we made 100 trips, that was a record for our ship.

COUBIER: How did you get involved with sailing?

BRADLEY: My mother is from Beaver Island and my step-father was in the old lighthouse service which is like the Coast Guard. So I've always been around the water in this area. But I got a job because I knew a ship's captain. When I graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1939, I went to work for the Illinois Central Railroad. In 1941 I was looking for a job and I asked my friend who was the captain for one and I've been on the Great Lakes since then, with the exception of two years I spent with the Navy in the Mediterranean.

COURIER: Who did you work for?

BRADLEY: From 1941-1955 I worked for the M.A. Hanna Company out of Cleveland, Ohio. We hauled iron ore, coal and stone. I had worked my way up to first mate and then they began to sell ships and reduce their fleet and I began to ga backwards. Sa I wrote some letters up here to get a job an the Penn Dixie ship the John Galster. In 1955 I got a job as third mate and the following year I was made first mate.

COURIER: What happened next?

BRADLEY: In 1967 Penn Dixie quit running its ship and Medusa started running the Challenger. I was the second mate on that ship and Gerald Left of Charlevoix was the third mate. His nephew, Francis Left, works on the Challenger now. As the captain and the first mate retired, I moved up and then became the captain.

COURIER: Are there any Charlevoix residents in the crew of the Challenger?

BRADLEY: There are three in the crew from Charlevoix and two from Petoskey.

COURIER: What is the longest you are away from home?

BRADLEY: The longest is about three days. When the boat is docked here I come home. I have a hotline to the ship in case anything goes wrong, but otherwise I spend my time at home. It takes us about 30 hours to get to Detroit and then we spend about eight hours unloading.

COURIER: Have you ever wanted to sail the ocean instead of the Great Lakes?

BRADLEY: No, the ocean has no fascination for me.

COURIER: What's the difference between sailing the ocean and the Great Lakes. Are the Great Lakes more dangerous?

COURIER: You have short, heavy seas on the Great Lakes and it's violet when the winds get up to 60 or 70 miles per hour. In the ocean you can run before a storm. On the lakes you go just so far before you run out of water.

COURIER: Is being a sailor as much fun as the books make it out to be or do writers romanticize it?

BRADLEY: The sea stories take a little license. Although you know the old saying, 'I'd rather be on a steamboat than working.' I'll probably get in trouble for saying that because it is a lot of work on a ship. People think all we do is sit on the dock and that's not true at all. We're a busy operation.

COURIER: Do you get criticized a lot about the pollution created by the Medusa and its operations.

BRADLEY: We do get some of that from time to time Medusa and many other companies have worked hard in the last few years to clean up some of this pollution. I've noticed in the last 20 years that the lakes are visibly, noticeably cleaner. Oh, there are certain companies that won't make an attempt to clean up just like in the City of Charlevoix there are some people who throw cups and papers around. But I think most companies are trying.

Mt. McSauba closed for season, needs repairs to reopen

Mt. McSauba ski hill is closed for the season.

Recreation Director Dwight Boss said the state inspectors closed the hill down because it couldn't pass the inspection for a certificate of operation. The ski hill has been operating all season without the certificate from the state.

Boss said the poles and pulleys holding the rope tow need to be replaced before the ski hill can qualify for a certificate of operation for next season.

Boys State delegates will be announced in the near future.

Community mental health services in Northern Michigan are observing their sixth anniversary this week.

The program has come a long way since it was established under Public Act 258, Harold "Sam" Kaufman, director of the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board, said.

When the mental health board was established only one mental health clinic and two small workshops for the mentally retarded were located in the four-county area covered by the board. Emmet County had the clinic and the workshops were in Charlevoix and Cheboygan counties. Otsego County had no mental health units established in it at that time.

The mental health program now boasts two divisions, the Developmental Disabilities (mentally retarded) Section and the Mental Illness Division.

Under the developmental disabilities programs, administered by Paul Krepel, are the Bergmann Center in Charlevoix and the Lamplighters in Cheboygan. These two sheltered workshops were parts of the program on a small scale in 1972 and have now been combined with two other sheltered workshops in Gaylord and Petoskey and the Charlevoix House, a residential supervised home.

A staff of 26 people runs the various workshops and supplies services to 100 clients.

The mental illness division is coordinated by Jerry Wilson. This program has expanded to include area counseling centers in Otsego, Gaylord, Cheboygan and East Jordan in addition to the Petoskey Counseling Center.

In addition to the new counseling centers, a new position titled life consultant / aftercare worker has been established. Lillian Bergmann holds this position and works with people in their homes after they have had counseling.

Kaufman attributed the growth of the mental health services to the actions of the people on the mental health board.

Action rolls at Pinewood Derby

Excitement was high in the Charlevoix Elementary School gym Saturday as 40 Cub Scouts gathered for the annual Pinewood Derby.

The young men pitted cars they had designed out of wood against each other in several heats of the annual race until only the four top cars remained. Tim Berry, who placed first, will lead the group of four Cub Scouts to the District runoff in Pellston April 8.

Also attending the runoff will be second place finisher Phil Peterson, third place Brian Phillips and fourth place Charlie Steele.

TIM BERRY took first place in the annual Pinewood Derby races Saturday at the Charlevoix Elementary School. The club scout will now go on to the District runoff in Pellston April 8.

Parents Council looking for talented local people

Do you have a special talent or interest you would like to share?

If so, the Parents Council of the Charlevoix Elementary School wants you.

The Curriculum Committee of the Parents Council is in the process of updating the Charlevoix Community Resources Guide, which provides a listing of all area resources available for classroom or field trip use.

"Many area people have special talents, hobbies or technical skills which would enrich the educational program of our school children," Marilyn Friedly, a committee member working on the project, explained. "Where tomorrow starts today"

WAYNE CHARLES acts aggressively with his opponent during this match. The invitational wrestling tourney was open to all students in the area and Northern Michigan and was sponsored by the middle school and the Youth Activities Program.

DON DeMITCHELL puts on a good show during his second match of the day as he attempts to roll his opponent over for the pin. This was the second meet of the year for the young Charlevoix wrestlers.

Wrestling hits middle school

COACH NORM PROBERT yells instructions to Jeff Zednicek during one of his wrestling matches Saturday afternoon. Probert organized the tournament especially for middle school aged boys. Students came from all over Northern Michigan to compete in the meet.

MATT LANDON was one of the Charlevoix Middle School students participating in the invitational tournament Saturday at the Charlevoix High School gym.

CHUCK KLOOSTER of Charlevoix struggles to get out from under his opponent in this match. While Klooster was wrestling, five other matches were also under way for the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade students.

MANY WRESTLERS AND SPECTATORS attended the middle school wrestling invitational Saturday at Charlevoix High School. Cheers could be heard throughout the gym spurring the young wrestlers on.

IN LOVING memory of our wife, mother and grandmother, Mabel Supernaw, who passed away five years ago, March 28, 1973. She bid no one a last farewell, she said goodbye to none. Dearly loved and sadly missed by husband, children and grandchildren.

PUBLIC NOTICE
Northwest Michigan
Regional Planning and Development Commission
2334 Aero Park Court
Traverse City, Michigan

NOTICE: The Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission has prepared a proposed Clean Water Plan for the ten-county Northwest Michigan Region pursuant to the requirements of Section 208 of Federal Water Pollution Control Act Amendments of 1972 (Public Law 92-500). In 1976 the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission was designated by the Governor of Michigan to be the Areawide Water Quality Planning Agency for the Northwest Region. The Commission was awarded a grant from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to develop a clean water management plan designating the agencies that will have various roles in maintaining high water quality in this Region. The objective of the program is to preserve the good water quality of the Region through preventive measures rather than through the far more costly future actions to remedy lake, stream, or groundwater pollution problems.

This proposed Clean Water Plan will affect units of government, related agencies, and citizens in the Region as follows:

a. It will designate communities and agencies as management agencies for carrying out portions of the Plan.

b. It requires certain local actions to help preserve the good water quality of the Region.

c. It will determine eligibility of communities for future facilities planning and construction grant funds.

The Commission will hold a series of public meetings to explain the Plan, to receive comments on it, and to answer questions. These meetings will be at the locations and times indicated below.

Date: April 3, 1978; Time: 7:30 p.m.; Location: 4-H Center, Emmet County Fairgrounds, Charlevoix Avenue, Petoskey, Michigan.

Date: April 5, 1978; Time: 7:30 p.m.; Location: Manistee City Council Chambers, City Hall, 70 Maple Street, Manistee, Michigan.

Date: April 6, 1978; Time: 7:30 p.m.; Location: Cadillac City Council Chambers, Lake Street, Cadillac, Michigan.

The Commission will also hold a public hearing to solicit review and comment from the public, from management agencies, and from local units of government. All oral or written statements will be included in the record of the hearing which will be held at 2:00 p.m. and at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, April 13th at the All Faiths Chapel, South Elmwood, Traverse City, Michigan. The Commission will also welcome written statements until April 19th, 1978 at 5:00 p.m. Statements should be transmitted to the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission, 2334 Aero Park Court, Traverse City, Michigan 49684.

Copies of the Plan will be available for inspection and review at least two (2) weeks prior to the hearings at the following locations:

County Clerks' offices in the counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Manistee, Missaukee, and Wexford.

Northwestern Michigan College

North Central College Library

The Plan as well as technical documents and background material are available at the Northwest Michigan Regional Planning and Development Commission offices at 2334 Aero Park Court, Traverse City, Michigan 49684. (616) 946-5922.

All applicants for zoning permits shall pay the City Clerk a fee according to the schedule as shall be prescribed by the City Council. Such fee will be refunded if permit is denied.

SECTION 9.2 – CERTIFICATION OF OCCUPANCY

No building erected or moved shall be occupied until a Certificate of Occupancy has been issued therefor, nor shall the use or occupancy of any building be changed to a use or occupancy of a different classification until a certificate of Occupancy permitting the new use or occupancy shall have been issued. No certificate of Occupancy shall be issued for a building unless all the provisions of this Ordinance are fully complied with.

SECTION 9.3 – PLOT PLAN

Each application for a zoning permit shall be accompanied by a plot plan, drawn to scale, showing accurate dimensions of the building to be erected, its location on the lot, distances from all lot lines and adjacent structures to said building and such other information as may be necessary for the enforcement of this Ordinance.

SECTION 9.4 – INTERPRETATION

Where, however, the provisions of the State Building Code or any other ordinance or regulations of the City of Charlevoix impose more strict regulations than are imposed by this Ordinance, the provisions of said State Building Code or other ordinance or regulation shall govern.

It is not intended by this Ordinance to interfere or abrogate or annul any easements, covenants, or other agreements between parties provided, however, that where this Ordinance imposes a greater restriction upon the use of a building or land than existing easements, covenants, or other agreements, the provisions of this Ordinance shall govern or control.

SECTION 9.5 – PLANNING COMMISSION

The City Planning Commission shall consist of seven (7) members, appointed by the Mayor and subject to Council approval, who represent different professions or occupations within the City. All members of the Commission shall serve without compensation and shall hold no other municipal office or appointment. The terms of each member shall be three (3) years, except that two (2) members of the first commission shall be appointed for one (1) year, two (2) for a term of two (2) years, and three (3) for a term of three (3) years. All members shall hold office until their successors are appointed.

2) All amendments, supplements, modifications and changes not arising in the Planning Commission must be referred thereto for a written report and recommendation prior to any action thereon by the City Council.

3) The Planning Commission shall at one or more of its meetings, study and evaluate the proposed amendment, supplement, modification or change. The Planning Commission shall then submit its written report to the City Council of its recommendations and findings, either for or against the proposed change.

4) Once the City Council has received and accepted the Planning Commission's report on the proposed amendment, supplement, modification or change, it shall hold a hearing and give proper notice thereof as prescribed by Section 125.584 of Compiled Laws of 1970, as amended. This shall include notification of all property owners of property located within three hundred (300) feet of the premises in question.

5) Whenever the City Council shall receive a protest against a proposed amendment, signed by the requisite number of land owners as set fourth in Section 125.584 of the Compiled Laws of 1970, as amended, then such amendment, supplement, modification or change shall not be passed except by ¾ vote of the City Council.

The Zoning Ordinance of Charlevoix shall only be amended by legislative action of the City Council.

7) If any amendment is made by the City Council, and construction is not initiated and continued or premises are not used under the terms of that rezone, within one year from the date of approval, or within nine months of the date of obtaining a building permit, whichever first occurs, or if such use or work has been abandoned for a period of nine months, the approval shall lapse and cease to be in effect.

ARTICLE X
BOARD OF APPEALS

SECTION 10.0 – DUTIES AND PROCEDURE

The City Council shall serve as the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Such Board of Appeals shall fix rules and regulations to govern its procedure in acting upon appeals and shall hear and decide appeals, review any order, requirement, decision, or determination made by the administration official charged with the enforcement of this Ordinance.

The concurring vote of four (4) members of the Board of Appeals shall be necessary to reverse any order, requirement, decision or determination of the administrative official, or to decide in the favor of the applicant any matter on which they are required to pass under this Ordinance, or to effect any variation of this Ordinance. Such appeals may be taken by any person aggrieved or by any officer, department or Board of the City of Charlevoix.

SECTION 10.1 – APPEALS

Appeals shall be taken within such time as shall be prescribed by the Board of Appeals by general rule, by the filing with the officer from whom the appeal is taken, and with the Board of Appeals, a notice of appeal, specifying the grounds thereof. The officer from whom the appeal is taken shall forthwith transmit to the Board all papers constituting the record upon which the action appealed from, was taken.

SECTION 10.2 – STAY OF PROCEEDINGS

An appeal stays all proceedings in furtherance of the action appealed from, unless the officer from whom the appeal is taken certifies to the Board, after the notice of appeal has been filed with him, that by reason of the facts stated in the certificate a stay would, in his opinion, cause imminent peril to life and property in which case proceedings shall not be stayed otherwise than by a restraining order by the Board of Appeals or by the Circuit Court, on application of notice to the officer from whom the appeal is taken, and on due cause shown.

SECTION 10.3 – HEARING AND DECISION OF APPEALS

The Board of Appeals shall fix a reasonable time for the hearing of the appeal and give due notice thereof to the parties and decide the same within a reasonable time. Upon the hearing any person may appear in person or by agent or by attorney. The Board of Appeals may reverse or affirm, wholly or in part, or may modify the order, requirements, decision or determination as, in its opinion, ought to be made in the premises, and to that end shall have all the powers of the officer from whom the appeal is taken.

SECTION 10.4 – POWERS OF THE BOARD OF APPEALS

The Board of Appeals shall not have the power to change the classification of any property on the zoning map or to make any change in the terms of this Ordinance, but only to interpret this Ordinance and to authorize variations in accordance with this section.

Where there are practical difficulties or unnecessary hardships in the way of carrying out the strict letter of this Ordinance, the Board of Appeals shall have the power, in passing upon appeals, to vary or modify any of its rules, regulations, or provisions relating to the construction, structural changes, equipment or alterations of buildings or structures, so that the spirit of this Ordinance shall be observed, public safety secured and substantial justice done.

The decision of the Board shall be final so far as it involves discretion or the finding of facts.

SECTION 10.5 – REVIEW, INTERPRETATION, AND VARIANCES

The Board of Appeals shall

a) Review – The Board shall review, hear, and decide upon appeals from any order, requirement, decision, or determination made by the Zoning Administrator in the enforcement or application of this Ordinance.

b) Interpretation -- The Board shall have the power to review, hear and decide upon appeals which request the following determinations:

1) Requests for the interpretation of the provisions contained within any section of this Ordinance.

2) Classify a use into a comparable use category which is not specifically mentioned by this Ordinance.

3) Determine the off-street parking and loading space requirements of any use which is not specifically mentioned in Article VI of this Ordinance.

c) Variances – The Board shall have the power to authorize upon an appeal specific variances from such dimensional requirements as lot area and width regulations, building height and bulk regulations, yard width, side, and depth regulations, and off-street parking and loading requirements as specified in this Ordinance. Provided, however, that all of the following variance conditions are adhered to and that at least one of the following special findings can be satisfied:

Variance Conditions – All of the following conditions, in the judgement of the Board, shall exist before any variance from this Ordinance shall be granted. Any variance granted shall.

1) Not be contrary to the public interest or the general intent and purpose of this Ordinance.

2) Not permit the establishment of a use within a given district which is prohibited therein.

3) Not be a variance so commonly recurring as to make reasonably practical the formulation of a general regulation by the City Council.

4) Not cause substantial adverse effect to properties in the immediate vicinity or in the zoning district where the variance is located.

5) Relate only to property that is described in the application for the variance.

d) Special Findings – If all the foregoing variance conditions can be satisfied, a variance may be granted when the Board determines that any one of the following special findings can be clearly demonstrated:

1) That there are practical difficulties or unnecessary hardships resulting from the physical characteristics of the property in question which make it unfeasible to carry out the strict letter of this Ordinance. Increased financial return to the applicant shall not be considered just cause for a variance based upon hardship.

2) That there are exceptional or extraordinary circumstances or conditions which apply to the property in question that do not apply to other properties in the vicinity within the same zoning district and which have not resulted from any act of the applicant subsequent to the adoption of this Ordinance.

3) That such variation is necessary for the preservation of a substantial property right possessed by other properties within the same zoning district.

e) Conditions of Approval – In granting a variance, the Board may specify, in writing, such other conditions regarding the location, character, landscaping, or other treatment that will, in the Board's judgment, be reasonably necessary to the furtherance of the intent of this Ordinance and the protection of the public interest. The breach of any such condition shall automatically invalidate the permit granted. Each variance granted under the provisions of this Ordinance shall become null and void after six (6) months unless construction or occupancy authorized by such variance or permit has commenced and is being carried to completion. After a variance has been denied in whole or in part by the Board, then no application shall be resubmitted for a period of one year from the date of the last denial; Provided, however, that a denied variance may be reconsidered by the Board when, in the opinion of the Zoning Administrator, newly discovered evidence or changed conditions warrant such reconsideration.

ARTICLE XI
ENFORCEMENT

SECTION 11.0 – PENALTIES

The Court shall order such nuisance abated and the owner and/or agent in charge of such building or land shall be adjudged guilty of maintaining a nuisance per se.

For any and every violation of this Ordinance, the owner, agent, architect, builder, lessor or tenant of the land or building or part thereof, where such violations have been committed, or exist, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and the owner, agent, architect, builder, or any person who commits, takes part, or assists in such violation of any of the provisions of this Ordinance, or any person who maintains any buildings or land in or on, which such violations exist, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, before competent jurisdiction shall be punished by a fine of not less than twenty five (25) dollars, nor more than one hundred (100) dollars for each offense, or shall be punished by imprisonment at the discrection of the Court. Each day that a violation is permitted to exist shall constitute a separate offense.

ARTICLE XII

Judge denies tenants' rent relief request

A federal court judge has denied tenants of the Charlevoix Apartments any relief from rent hikes instituted at the complex last winter.

In a decision issued last week, Judge Wendell A. Miles rejected a request that rent hikes be turned back and that tenants be given more of a say in the decision to increase the rents.

Rents were increased from $93 to $123 or about 25 percent a month for one-bedroom apartments and from $111 to $137 or about 23 percent a month for two-bedroom apartments.

Many of the residents of the apartment complex on May Street are senior citizens and they felt the rent hike was unjustified. A suit was filed on their behalf with the U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids by Gregory Justis of Legal Service of Northern Michigan in an attempt to bring the rents back down.

Defendants named in the suit were: Frank W. Vaydik, Roger N. Pierce and Betty Frey, owners of the apartment complex, along with Bob Bergland, secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture; Gordon Cavanaugh, acting administrator of Farmers Home Administration (FmHA); and Robert Abbott, acting state director of FmHA.

In the suit, Justis claimed the tenants were denied due process of law as provided under the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments of the U.S. Constitution when their rents were hiked.

Justis asked that a system be set up where tenants of rural low and moderate income housing units funded through FmHA loans be given the opportunity to inspect any applications for rent hikes submitted to the FmHA office and that they be given a chance to offer written comments and objections about the rent increase request.

In his opinion, Judge Miles said that based on similar cases heard before the U.S. District Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals, he found that the tenants had not been denied their rights when the rents were increased.

Also, since the suit was filed, the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has instituted regulations requiring that tenants be informed of rent hike requests and be given a chance to respond to them. Judge Miles ruled that these regulations could not be applied retroactively.

"I'm disappointed in the decision," Shirley Roloff, who has been acting as a spokesman for the senior citizen tenants, said. "But we are planning to continue to fight the rent increase in some way.

"I hope this doesn't discourage the senior citizens from trying to fight for their rights."

Justis said the decision would probably be appealed to a higher court in an attempt to seek relief

Frank Vaydik, one of the defendants in the case, said he was pleased with the judge's decision.

"It's been my contention all along that we had been doing everything that was required and necessary when we raised the rents," Vaydik said. "The judge's decision confirmed this.

"Of course, now the FmHA has changed its procedure for requesting and granting rent hikes to include the procedures they (the plaintiffs) were seeking. So in the end nothing was really accomplished by this suit."

CHARLEVOIX APARTMENTS on May Street has been the scene of controversy between the owners and the senior citizens tenants over rent hikes. A recent federal court judge's decision denied all of the tenants' requests to have the rents rolled back.

Movie Ratings are Important

I think more parents should become aware of the ratings that are given to movies. The movies are given ratings for a purpose and they shouldn't be ignored. Friday night I went to see the movie "Saturday Night Fever" and I was appalled at the number of middle school children who were in the theater. The movie was rated R – restricted – and these children were well under the 18-year-old age limit. The movie was terrible and certainly unsuitable for middle school age children. I think the theater owners have a sense of duty to enforce the restrictions even if the parents allow their children to go to them. Money isn't everything, you know.

City Responsible for Own Dogs

Why is it the city residents think animal control is only a problem for the sheriff's department? The city has the responsibility to provide additional police, fire, utilities, street repair, etc., including animal control if it is a problem created by city residents. The dog law provides only that the county must provide a pound to keep dogs caught by the city police department. Other cities have animal control officers, so should Charlevoix.

Are We in an Energy Crunch? Look around You!

Our Mayor and Council plead with us to turn down our thermostat and conserve our lighting at home. Yet, one looks at the brilliance nightly shining at the almost-empty condominium on the Northside on Dixon and Michigan. Is that conservation? One-third of such lighting would be sufficient as a crime-deterrent, if that is the purpose.

Another site adjacent to our area is the unnecessary lighting of so many yard lights at the Castle Farms. Some businesses have already joined in the conservation of energy – but many more are shirking their duty. It needs a united effort to prolong this vital utility!

Proposed new charter up for 3rd vote

Charlevoix voters will go to the polls Monday to vote for the third time on a proposed new charter for the city.

The vote on the proposed new charter will be held in conjunction with the spring general election for city offices. The charter issue will be the only contested issue on the ballot as all of the candidates for city offices are running unopposed, although a write-in campaign could still be waged.

Those candidates whose names will appear on the ballot and the offices they are seeking are: Sam Supernaw, mayor; Jeffrey Porter, First Ward alderman; Lawrence (Stub) Swanson, Second Ward alderman; Earl Muma, Third Ward alderman; Judy Przybylski, city clerk; and Annabelle Cunningham, city treasurer.

According to Charlevoix Charter Commission members, the third draft of the proposed new city charter is not very different from the Fourth Class Cities Act, Charlevoix currently operates under.

"But the proposed charter makes many improvements on the Fourth Class Cities Act," one commission member explained.

The proposed new charter would switch the city from a Fourth Class City to a Home Rule City and it would also change the form of government from a mayor-council form to a council-city manager form.

Charter commission members point out that Charlevoix is now a $3 million a year business and that it needs to be operated like a business. The new charter provides that a city manager run the day-to-day activities of the city like a president would run a corporation, while the city council makes long range plans and decisions in which the same way that a corporation's board of directors does.

In addition, the proposed new charter changes the office of city treasurer from an elected office to an appointed one. The charter commission argues that this gives the council the right to hire an accountant or person with similar qualifications for the job.

Also partisan politics is removed from city elections and the election dates have been changed to coincide with the state and federal election dates.

The charter was printed in its entirety in the March 15 edition of the Courier. Copies are available at the Charlevoix Courier office.

Brothers capture two of top four awards in Charlevoix Courier Easter coloring contest

A.J. Witthoeft, 11, was selected as the first place winner in the contest which fielded more than 80 entries. The judges said A.J.'s choice of colors, his neatness and his creativeness in coloring each of the four pictures led to his selection as the top prize winner.

A.J. will receive a $10 prize.

A.J.'s brother, Marvin, won the third place prize of $5. Marvin, 8, and A.J. are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Whitthoeft of Old Orchard Road in Charlevoix.

The second place prize went to Brenda Sutton. Brenda also did an excellent job of coloring the pictures, the judges said. Brenda, 8, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sutton of 103 Carpenter in Charlevoix.

The winner of the special merit award for the most outstanding entry from area children under age eight went to Jennifer Frabis. Jennifer, 6, lives with her parents at 105 Crabtree Lane in Charlevoix.

This year the more than 80 entries in the coloring contest came from all over the state and throughout the nation. While most of the contest entries came from Charlevoix, there were many children from East Jordan, Boyne City, Ellsworth, Bay Shore, and Beaver Island who also submitted entries.

The entry that came from the farthest point in the state was the entry of Matthew Wyckoff of Eaton Rapids and the entry that was submitted from the forthest point in the country came from Syracuse, N.Y. That entry was submitted by Sharon Diane Clark.

The judges said that there were many, many excellent entries in this year's coloring contest, so they compiled a list of those entries they felt should receive an honorable mention for their efforts.

Bob Hewitt has luck of the Irish a week late

The luck of the Irish lasted a few extra days for Bob Hewitt of Charlevoix.

Hewitt, who works for the Charlevoix County Equalization Department, won $5,000 on a Michigan Lottery ticket Saturday, just eight days after St. Patrick's Day.

He bought his ticket at the Flight Deck on U.S. 31 south and when he was through scratching off the material covering the numbers of the instant lottery ticket, Hewitt was $5,000 richer.

Hewitt said he had no indication or thought that the ticket would be a winner.

"You know you just scratch it off and if you're a winner, you're a winner," he said.

The Charlevoix resident said he has bought both instant and weekly lottery tickets before, but this is the first time he's had a winner. Hewitt also varies the places where he buys the tickets.

"I just try and mix it up," he explained.

And what does he plan to do with the loot?

"Oh, I'll just be able to pay a few more bills now," he said. "That's all."

Historical society to discuss Civil War at Apr. 4 meet

The historical society, whose meetings have been suspended during the winter months, will hold its first meeting at 8 p.m. April 4 in the Community Room of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

"Tools and Resources for Building an Interest in Civil War History" is the topic of the program which will be presented by Weldon W. Price.

Charlevoix was the home of many Civil War veterans. Although Civil War troops were mobilized in Michigan mainly from the more settled southern counties, many veterans of the war between the states came to Charlevoix and adjacent counties to homestead available land. Some of these veterans were ancestors of families who still live here.

Price is a long time student of the Civil War. He began his studies when he was a history major at the University of Illinois. Prior to retirement and his move to Lake Charlevoix Farm, Price had been the chairman of the Civil War Centennial Observance Committee in Birmingham, a charter member of the Michigan Regimental Civil War Roundtable and a member of Abraham Lincoln Roundtable.

Members of the historical society and interested people are invited to attend the meeting and to relate family anecdotes which have roots in Civil War history.

Hearing on health care issues slated Monday in county building

A special town meeting to discuss health care needs and concerns in Charlevoix County will be held at 7 p.m. Monday in the courtroom of the Charlevoix County Building.

The meeting, which is sponsored by the Long Range Planning and Policy Development Committee of the Northern Michigan Health Systems Agency (NMHSA), is open to the public.

NMHSA is a nonprofit corporation designated by state and federal authorities to conduct health planning in an 18-county region of Northern Michigan. Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, Antrim and Otsego counties are among those in the region.

The planning committee is holding the meeting in Charlevoix to find out what Charlevoix County residents think should be included in a long range plan for health care in Northern Michigan.

The committee is responsible for prepareing a five-year health care plan outlining goals and recommending actions for the 18-county area. In addition, each year the committee must prepare an "Annual Implementaton Plan" which outlines what items have received top priority in the overall five-year plan.

"The annual implementation plan should be a reflection of the needs and desires of the people in this area and their concerns about health care," Gary Peltier, community relations specialist for the NMHSA, explained.

"One way for us to find out what the needs and desires of the people are is to hold these meetings. This is the first one we've ever held, and we are hoping to hold one in each of the counties we cover."

Peltier said the committee developed an implementation plan last year after polling area residents about health care needs and desires through a questionnaire that was mailed out.

"The committee was not very pleased with the results, so it decided to hold a series of public hearings this year," he said.

Based on what it learns the committee will prepare a report suggesting certain projects and submit it to the NMHSA board of directors for implementation.

The board recently adopted a five-year plan outlining 13 different health issues and an annual plan which centered on four priority issues.

The four issues included dealing with the impact of accidents on health, better reporting and recording of accidents as a means of reducing the number of problem areas in the region, expansion of home health care programs as a means of providing long-term health care for patients while reducing costs and improving infant health through improved education for physicians and nurses on high-risk infant care.

Peltier urged area residents to attend the meeting and to offer their input on what they feel are the health care needs in the area.

Grass roots government takes place in townships Saturday

Area township residents will have a chance to participate in grass roots government at its best this Saturday as the annual township meetings are held in the county.

Throughout the state, township residents will be flocking to township halls between 1 and 8 p.m. to let their supervisors and board members know what they think should be accomplished in the township during the coming year.

Each township resident will be able to address the township board and each resident will be able to vote on various issues along with their elected representatives as they hammer out a plan for the township. While township residents can address the board during any regular session, the annual meeting is the only time residents can vote on issues.

During the annual meeting, the various township boards will hold public hearings on the proposed budgets for the coming year. Township officials' salaries may also be established at the annual meeting, providing a salary commission has not been appointed.

Other business that may be discussed during the meeting includes the purchase or sale of any real or personal property and the discussion of any petitions that might be presented to the board by township residents.

Charlevoix Township will hold its annual meeting at 2 p.m. Saturday in the township hall. Marion Township will meet at 7:30 p.m. and Hayes Township will meet at 8 p.m. Norwood Township will meet at 8 p.m.

The 1969 Food Service Sanitation Act has been causing quite an uproar throughout the state.

The state health department Division of Food Service Sanitation has been bombarded with inquiries regarding the enforcement of the act as it relates to bake sales and potluck dinners conducted by churches and other organizations.

The food service law says that food shall be from an approved source if it is advertised as a meal that the public can purchase, Larry Levengood, District Health Department 3 sanitarian explained.

That means that the food served at the salad and casserole lunches or at pancake dinners should be prepared in a kitchen that has been licensed by the health department.

Many church kitchens in the area have been approved by the health department and are licensed, Levengood said. For example, Christ Episcopal Church, which holds a Shrove Tuesday Pancake Dinner annually, is licensed to offer food for sale from its kitchen.

However, potluck dinners are exempted from the licensing. If the food is provided by members of an organization and is served only to other members then a license is not needed.

"That's like having someone over to your house for dinner," Levengood said. "You don't need a license to do that, you're not selling the food."

Levengood explained the law had been enacted to prevent outbreaks of food borne illness.

"You have the right to a certain degree of protection," the sanitarian explained. "If you go in and buy food, you shouldn't have to worry about whether it will make you sick.

"It's the health department's responsibility to provide this protection. That's why we've been working with the churches and other organizations in the area to get their kitchens licensed.

"It sounds like the health department is out to get the Ladies Aid, but actually we're trying to work in a cooperative effort with the groups to help everyone."

A bill is presently before the state Legislature to amend the food service act so that kitchens won't have to be licensed.

Breathless? Check amount of exercise your're getting

It's only 4 p.m. but you're so tired it might as well be midnight. And you can't understand it because you get plenty of sleep and eat well, too.

Chronic tiredness ranks today as one of the most frequently voiced of all complaints. Although chronic tiredness can stem from illness, for many people it's the result of gradual deterioration of the body due to a lack of vigorous physical activity.

A booklet from the President's Council on Physical Fitness, Adult Physical Fitness, is a 64-page illustrated guide for men and women who want to undertake a physical fitness program. For your copy, send 70 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 088F, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The booklet points out that just 100 extra calories a day can make you gain 10 points in one year – but these extra calories could be burned up by a 15-20 minute daily walk. And, according to studies by the Harvard School of Public Health, just one-half hour of proper exercise can help you lose or keep off as much as 26 points a year.

Of course, you should see a physician for a complete medical exam, before you start any physical fitness program. Then, you can begin with confidence.

You should start your exercise program slowly. In fact, the program outlined in the booklet assumes that you haven't been exercising regularly.

There are three types of exercises presented: warmup exercises, conditioning exercises, and circulatory activities. And, five levels of fitness are outlined for women and for men. There's also a test of pulse rate you can use to measure and keep a record of the improvement in your circulation. The lower your pulse rate after exercise, the more efficiently your body is working.

And, you'll love the results.

Although there will be no dramatic changes overnight, gradually you'll begin to notice that you have more energy for your daily activities, and you'll have a new zest for recreation in the evening. And quite likely, you will be sleeping more soundly than you've slept for years.

When you order a copy of Adult Physical Fitness (70 cents), you'll also receive a copy of the free Consumer Information Catalog. It lists more than 200 selected free or low-cost publications from the federal government. The Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration.

Survey shows increase in number of county families earning $25,000

Charlevoix County's income elite—the families with earnings of $25,000 or more per year—are a rapidly growing segment of the local population.

According to the latest figures from the Marketing Economics Institute here, approximately 1,070 households in the area now have incomes above $25,000.

Some 1,000 of them are in the $25,000 to $50,000 bracket and 70 in the $50,000 and over category.

With the general upward shift in earnings, more and more families have entered this elite circle. During the past few years alone, the change has been considerable.

Currently, in relation to total population, close to 17.0 percent of the households in Charlevoix County have annual incomes of $25,000 or better, it is found. Back in 1970, by way of comparison, there were 1.5 percent at that level, according to a survey made by the Department of Commerce.

Nationally, points out the Conference Board in a study entitled "The Society of the Affluent," there are only 11 million families in the income elite. These families account for more than 40 percent of the country's buying power.

The Conference Board report states that "Although we continue to have many serious social problems – a disconcertingly high level of unemployment, for instance – the overwhelming majority of Americans have been participating in the nation's prosperity."

The findings are that the living standards of the average family "have just about doubled" since the end of World War II and that, in no other comparable period of time, did we experience an improvement of such magnitude.

Responsible for the dramatic upward shift has been the "multi-paycheck revolution," it concludes.

Today, no less than 77 percent of the upper income families in Charlevoix County have at least two members in the labor force, it is estimated on the basis of the national findings. Twenty years ago it was about 64 percent.

In almost one third of the families there are three persons working. Only 22 percent or so rely on a single wage earner.

Must have them by Friday

Days are numbered for license tab buyers

The days are numbered for people who haven't purchased their 1978 license plate tabs for passenger cars and motorcycles.

Friday is the deadline for purchasing the license plate tabs at the Secretary of State's Office. In Charlevoix the office is located at the corner of Bridge and Hurlbut streets in the new office building complex.

The 1978 tab must be placed on top of the 1977 tab in the upper right corner of the Bicentennial license plate. To obtain a tab, motorists must present either the prepared renewal form from the Department of State, the 1977 registration or the certificate of vehicle title plus proof of public liability and property damage insurance.

Charlevoix needs new charter, ideas

Monday, Charlevoix voters will again be asked to vote on a proposed new charter for the city.

It's an important vote that will have a lot of impact on present and future city activities and residents.

Twice before the Charlevoix Charter Commission has placed a proposed new charter before the voters. And twice before the two drafts of the charter have been turned down for a myriad of reasons.

Now the charter commission is up to bat for its third strike. If the voters approve the final draft of the proposed charter, the city will get a badly needed updated charter. If the voters turn the third draft of the charter down, the charter commission will strike out and dissolve.

The city will also lose the hundreds of hours that have been contributed by elected officials to help improve the operation of the city and provide for continued growth and prosperity in the city.

The final draft of the proposed new charter is very similar to the current charter, the Fourth Class City Act. But there are some improvements that the charter commission members believe will help Charlevoix city government operate more efficiently and effectively.

The third draft of the proposed new charter, a home rule charter, sets up a council-city manager form of government. Under this form of government, the city operates like a business, which indeed it is. The city manager acts as the president of a corporation would, with the mayor and city council acting as chairman of the board and the board of directors.

The city manager takes care of minute details and directs the operation of the city, while the mayor and council are involved in the planning and growth of the city and all major decisions.

Although Charlevoix is still a small town in the eyes of many, it has grown to the point where it needs more direction than what a part time mayor and city council can give it. A fulltime city manager, hired by the mayor and council can give city business the attention it needs.

Also under the new charter, the approach to the city utilities is made more business-like. The utilities are made more independent and self-supporting. Each utility must have a reserve fund for emergencies and transfers from a utility surplus to the general fund are prohibited. All services must be accounted and paid for in each utility.

Elections are also changed under the proposed new charter. Political parties are elimnated, after all, charter commission members argue, there is no Republican or Democratic way to decide how to mend streets or which parks to improve. Party politics has little or no effect on the local level.

The election dates have been changed to match those dates of the state and national elections. The charter commission members argue that this will save the city money because we won't be holding separate elections any more.

Charlevoix needs a change.

Although the city has been operating well under its present charter, it doesn't seem to be progressing in its growth and planning. We need to adopt more efficient, business-like ways to deal with the onslaught of developers moving into the area.

The city also needs to be more business-like in its approach to dealing with prospective businessmen who are considering moving into the area.

The vote on Monay isn't only a vote for change, it is a vote for improvement.

...Speaking Her Mind

Jogging is becoming a very dangerous sport. Not only has it turned into a contact sport, but it has become a contact sport where the opponents are always bigger and stronger than the joggers.

I read in the Wall Street Journal the other day that in East and West coast communities, where marathon running and jogging are much more popular than here in the Midwest, that people out for a friendly jog down their neighborhood streets are often harassed by automobile drivers.

These drivers either drive so close to the joggers that they brush them with their mirrors or they swerve their cars at a jogger or throw beer cans or paper cups or they just in general whistle, hoot cat calls or honk their horns and scare the living daylights out of an unsuspecting jogger.

And in self defense, joggers in the coastal communites have begun to retaliate. At first the runner resorted to contacting the police and giving them license plate numbers of the offenders, but that hasn't seemed to work so they have begun using other tactics.

After one driver had harassed a jogger for more than a mile, the jogger increased his pace, caught the car at an intersection and without breaking stride ran over the top of the car stepping on the trunk, the roof and the hood of the car. When he finished, there were three little dents to testify to his jogging ability.

Shocked by this information, I was grateful that I live in Charlevoix the Beautiful, a joggers' paradise. As most of you know, I began jogging last spring and spent many an uneventful mile running around Charlevoix without harassment.

And now that my tennis shoes and sweat suit have come out of winter hibernation, I have once again been hitting the streets without incident – at least until last week.

Thursday evening I was out for my one-mile run and enjoying every breathless second of it when it happened. I was chugging up the Park Avenue hill and had just reached that euphoric state of victory because I had once again made it up the hill without collapsing, when I looked up to see a gigantic four-wheel drive vehicle swerve toward me.

My heart jumped into my throat, my feet froze to the ground and my mind went into shock as the vehicle charged closer and closer.

Then, just when I thought I was a goner, the monster swerved away and as it pulled along side me, the window rolled down and a hand thrust a cookie at me as the passengers inside warned me not to break my training.

Real funny, guys.

Letter to the editor

School board explains canceled election

To The Citizens of the Charlevoix School District:

The Charlevoix Board of Education is greatly concerned about the inadequate facilities and possible loss of accreditation at our high school, and we sincerely urge the citizens of our school district to support the building proposal for the Charlevoix High School.

However, we do appreciate the concern of many property owners in regard to the recent increase in assessments and property taxes. We would like to give the taxpayers of our school district additional time to investigate and better understand their property tax situation before asking them to approve the bonding proposal for the Charlevoix High School.

Therefore, the Charlevoix Board of Education has voted to cancel the election on April 24, 1978 and has tentatively set a new election date for Monday, October 2, 1978.

Hopefully this additional time will enable our citizens to better understand the necessity of the building program and what it will cost each taxpayer. During the next few months, we would like to encourage anyone with questions regarding their school taxes to contact our business office at 547-6573.

We appreciate the support you have given our schools in the past, and we hope that this action will be beneficial to our school district.

Sincerely,
The Charlevoix
Board of Education

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

It is not unusual for snow to linger on through the end of March. But it certainly is strange to have snow on the ground Easter Sunday, as we did this year.

A couple of years ago, three perhaps, the temperature hit 80 degrees Easter afternoon and the Clocks had dinner on the back porch, with all the windows open.

Of course, Easter wanders all over the spring calendar, so you really can't compare one year with another. It falls on the first Sunday after the first full moon, after the vernal equinox, which gives the holiday a range of about five weeks in March and April. If the full moon falls on Sunday, then Easter is the next Sunday.

One thing is for sure. It seldom falls much earlier than it did this year. However we had hoped, since we planned to drive to Muskegon for the weekend, that we would move right out of winter for a few days. But we were wrong. Although the ground cover is a little thin in the Traverse City area, it picks up again in the Manistee National Forest.

So we are resigned to a few more weeks of winter, with the consolation of knowing that northern Michigan is not suffering alone.

Whenever I go to a big city (and Muskegon is a big city, indeed, compared to Charlevoix and Petoskey),

I am always surprised at the number of strange faces I see. And I find myself scanning the crowds in shopping malls for someone I know, never with any success.

Of course, at home it's a different story. At any given time I probably know half the shoppers at Oleson's and almost the same percentage of window shoppers on Bridge Street. But the faces in Muskegon are fresh and new – and generally as unhappy looking as they are unfamiliar.

In that sea of humanity, two customers at Meijers discount store caught the attention of Judy and me. One was a woman standing near the door to a fitting room bellowing to her husband who had wandered off into the ready-to-wear department.

"Saccharin!" she called sharply. "Saccharin! Come over here this instant."

'Saccharin' obeyed and looked very sheepish when he was we were watching.

"Do you think that's his name?" I asked Judy.

"No," she answered. "That's his nickname. At home she calls him 'Sugar.'"

The other customer who captured our imagination was a gentleman with a moustache wearing a frock coat, who took his place in line at the cash register next to ours.

All in all, he was a rather ordinary looking gentleman – aside from the fact his hair was done up in curlers and he was wearing a babushka.

I poked Judy in the ribs. "That's something you don't see in Charlevoix," I said.

"Not yet, anyway," she answered. It's nice to be home.

Wilson suggests adding foot race to Venetian

To the Editor:

As a regular summer visitor to Charlevoix, I have always enjoyed the Venetian weekends in late July.

It seems to me that an added attraction and event would be a foot race. As you are aware, jogging has become a popular pasttime in our country and I suspect that many of your summer visitors as well as local residents might consider entering.

A scenic course could no doubt be arranged without too much disruption of traffic. I suggest you consider a half-marathon (about 13.1 miles) or perhaps a ten mile race. Of course, nothing would be better than a full marathon – 26 miles, 385 yards – but such a race might not draw many participants. Whatever the distance, the race could finish sometime late Saturday morning in the Main Street just before the parade starts.

I hope my idea receives favorable consideration. In the event that it does, please accept this letter as your first application.

Very truly yours,
David R. Wilson

Nerd Strikes Again

There were charges of nepotism when, a year ago, I awarded my son first place in my Dumb Driver contest. To refute the critics, I'm here today to submit further proof of Nerd's right to the championship, regardless of who his father is.

Nerd is a good kid and he worked hard for the honor. It wouldn't be fair to deny him his due simply because my blood squirts from his veins when I hit him on the face.

It must be admitted that, being 19 years old, Nerd has a built-in advantage in a Dumb Driver contest. It has been my experience that persons in their upper teens are automatically several lengths ahead of everyone else when it comes to doing dumb things with cars. For instance, if it weren't for upper teenagers, the world wouldn't know that tires can be screeched while the car is still parked.

But it would be as unfair to deny Nerd his prize because of his age as it would be to deny him because of his father. After all, it's not his fault he was born 19 years ago; it's his parents' fault. My wife has forgiven me, and perhaps someday, when Nerd is 32 and working steady, I will forgive her.

It's not surprising that my Dumb Driver contest resulted, many years later, from something I did when I was a teenager. What I did was pick up my father's 1940 Plymouth at a bump shop after he'd spent $80 to have wrinkles removed from its fenders. I smashed that refurbished Plymouth into 2 parked cars before I got out of the bump shop parking lot. The damage was $150.

That evening my father said I had set a world's record for dumb driving. He said never before in history had any driver wrecked a newly bumped-out car while still in the bump shop.

That record stood until 1978 when Nerd wrecked 2 cars at once and neither car had its engine running. Both cars belonged to me.

He was backing my Pacer out of the driveway. It's downhill, so he coasted. He opened the door so he could look back to see where he was going. The Pacer door hooked the fender of my Oldsmobile parked innocently beside the driveway. The Pacer door came off and the Olds fender dimpled deeply. Marvelous. Blood will tell.

When I crowned the new champion in print, the Dumb Driver contest began. Several readers questioned Nerd's claim to the throne. They described dumb things they or their children had done with cars. They suggested I'd been hasty in declaring Nerd the dumbest driver in the land.

I'll admit some of the entries were good. I was most impressed by the driver who, Nerd-wise, also opened his door while backing up. The door was unhinged by a tree. A friend in the passenger's seat heard the noise and opened his door to see what it was. That door was unhinged by a bush.

To continue driving, that dumb driver had to tie the 2 doors to each other. This was in 1948 and the clothes line holding the doors shut was the auto industry's first seat belt.

Not bad. But I still awarded first place to Nerd, mainly because he'd accomplished his double crash with no engines running. There are always some sore losers, and I was accused of nepotism. This hurt. My choice was based purely on merit and I resented any implication that I'd been influenced by my natural desire to keep the championships in the family.

That's why I was happy to hear of Nerd's latest achievment. While not as dramatic as the dumbness which originally won him the championship, this most recent gem of stupidity is still unique and certainly supports his claim to the top spot.

The other night he locked himself out of the Pacer. Anyone can do that, you say? Sure. But Nerd takes no chances. He had both Pacer keys with him, and he locked both keys inside the car.

Naturally, you're impressed, and you wonder how he did it. I'm not telling. My family may someday lose the Dumb Driver championship, but it won't be because we were dumb enough to leak the secrets of our success to the competition. You'll just have to take my word for it. Nerd did it, and I'm proud of him.

How did he get back inside the car? Easy. He knew that a semi-dumb driver would use a wire coat hanger if 1 key were locked inside. So Nerd walked to the nearest home and asked to borrow 2 hangers.

Letters to the editor

Rep. Ostling explains tax appeal process

My final letter in this series is on the appeal process to the State Tax Tribunal.

Appealing to the Tax Tribunal takes on added importance since there is a procedure that takes place after the local board of review concludes its work that could raise or lower your assessment. It is called the "equalization process." If the Tax Tribunal has not heard your appeal before your next year's assessment is made, you must appear before the local board of review again next year.

The equalization process begins with the county board of commissioners after the local board of review finalizes the assessment roll for their local unit. The county board has access to all of information provided by the boards of review and they, additionally, through the county equalization department, may conduct their own sales studies in the different units. From this information, the county board determines which units are assessed at 50 percent of true cash value and which units are either above or below the 50 percent level.

If your property is located in a city or township that is below the 50 percent level, a multiplication factor is applied across-the-board in your unit which proportionately increases all assessments. Thus, if your property is assessed correctly by the local assessor, and the county applies a factor, then your assessment will be increased above the 50 percent level and you would have an excellent basis for appeal.

The problem is, the factor is applied by the county after the local board of review meets and it's too late to appeal at the local level. That's why it is important to check your local newspaper because the county is required to publish the tentative equalization factors. While tentative factors, in most cases, are close appropriations, they are still tentative and subject to change later on. The county has until the first Monday in May to finalize the equalized process.

When the county equalization process is completed the State Tax Commission then equalizes counties in the same manner that counties equalize local units.

If you have reason to believe that your assessment will be increased by a factor, it is very important that you have protested before the board of review in March. Then if a factor is applied either by the county or the state you are protected.

The final State Equalized Value will be established by June 30, the latest date you can appeal to the tax Tribunal.

It is important to point out that the equalization process does not correct inequities in individual assessments. The proportion of taxes you are required to pay is based on your assessment determined by the local assessor.

If the county and state equalization process increases the value of your district or your county, your assessment will increase proportionately. That's why it is important that your property is assessed at the same level as other property in your district.

If it is not, or if the assessment is excessive, it is up to you to exercise your right to appeal.

Sincerely,
Ralph Ostling
State Representative

Coast Guardsmen lament winter

EDITOR'S NOTE: A crew member from the Mesquite submitted the following story and poem to explain what it's been like for the crew this winter. The Mesquite only recently was able to break through the ice to its home port after being blocked out for most of the winter season.

During the past week, Old Man Winter has come to realize that Spring is on its way. For the crew of the Coast Guard Cutter MESQUITE homeported in Charlevoix, it means that winter is loosening its icy grip and the end of another icebreaking season is close at hand.

Although this year's ice has not been as severe as last year's, the Straits of Mackinac has been iced over the entire winter. The MESQUITE was called upon early in the winter to assist in keeping this shipping lane open.

This year's icebreaking was a challenge to us as it would be to any ship. Shortly after the new year, the ice buildup around Charlevoix harbor became so great that the MESQUITE was unable to break her way into her homeport. The ship was then directed to another port in the Straits of Mackinac and the men were seperated from their families. Liberty periods called "72s" (three day passes) were run so that all men were able to return to Charlevoix several times during the winter. Only recently has the MESQUITE regained entrance to Charlevoix with the help of the Polar icebreaker, NORTHWIND.

Long hours have been spent assisting Great Lakes ships beset in the ice. Hours of backing and ramming at full speed alongside of these ships finally paid off as they broke free and were able to complete their journeys.

The challenge of icebreaking can best be summed up in the following poem composed by one of the MESQUITE'S crew members:

ICE SONG

Ice is coming out my nose
It's growing through between my toes
It's crawling up my legs and arms
Never caring what it harms.
It's even entering my brain.
Oh, my, the bitter pain.
It's in my eyes, I've paid the price
All I see is Ice, Ice, ICE!

As far as vision can detect
I cannot see one small insect
For it's bitter cold and they would die
So why am I, oh why, OH WHY?
I hate its icy white and blue
Its shimmering, bright and frosty blue
Oh from its ghastliness, refrain
Or choose to simply go insane.

I tarry not when I see white
I see it every day and night
Until one day, enough's enough
I finally revolt against the stuff.
I scream and yell and jump and shout
Until I'm weak and all screamed out
Then I fall down on my knees and pray
Please, Ice go back from whence you came!

The crew has taken the frustrations of icebreaking all in stride. It will not be long when the icy reabus will be but a memory and the crews' minds will be filled with warmer weather and the replacement of winter marker buoys with lighted summer aids.

Iannotti praises work of city policemen

Editor's Note: Dan Iannotti, owner of Hess Furniture, contacted the Charlevoix Courier last week to offer his praise of the Charlevoix Police Department.

Iannotti said he had gone to his store late in the evening last week to show some space to a prospective tenant.

"Only the lights in the upstairs portion of the store were on," Iannotti said. "And in less than five minutes members of the Charlevoix Police Department were there to find out what was going on.

"I think Chief Mol and the department should be saluted. Hess Furniture is very appreciative of their hard work and we think they're doing a fine job.

"Everyone is always kicking and no one ever praises," he continued. "We just wanted them to know we thought they were doing a good job."

Iannotti said this was the second time the police department had helped him and he had been very impressed with their performance.

"Heaven has no rage like love to hatred turned, nor hell a fury like a woman who has lost her car keys."

How do you like that? My car keys have only been gone two hours, 36 minutes and three seconds and already I'm paraphrasing Cibber.

They're gone and there's nothing I can do about it. Oh, I could tear up the entire house, go through coat pockets, empty out handbags, look in doors, the car ignition, or on the countertop in the kitchen where I definitely last put them. But what's the use?

I recognize what a lot of women refuse to admit. Car keys are pedestrian. Unlike coat hangers and paperclips, they have no sex life, but they're mobile all right.

It's happened before. Once I definitely remember putting them in my beach bag. Several hours later, they were gone. I discovered them in the sand under a beach towel three bodies down. Those little car keys' feet must have started moving before I got my tan line wet.

Why do they do it? It must be obvious to you as it is to me. They're male. They're short. And they're unhappy because they've got a ring in their nose.

They think I can't do without them. Well, they're wrong. I didn't always have a car, you know. You want to know something? I got more done when I didn't have a car. And that's the truth!

Sometimes when the kids were off at school, I'd straighten up my daughters paper dolls, making sure the tabs went all one way...or I'd make crackers from scratch...or thin down all my nail polish and wax the TV antenna. I was busy. I didn't need a car.

Who needs car keys? Do they think I enjoy dressing up and going into town for lunch? Or cruising around the shopping center shopping? Meeting my friends for tennis and getting rid of the kids at the playground for a couple of hours? It's pressure. I don't need that kind of pressure.

One thing I know, I'm going to keep calm and when they're ready to show themselves, I may take them back, but I'm getting pretty sick of their theatrics. I'll try just one thing and if it doesn't work, I'm going to forget it.

I threw myself head first into the clothes hamper and shouted hysterically, "I'M PREPARED TO GROVEL."!

Winter Cup x-country races may join triple crown group

The Charlevoix Winter Cup Festival cross country ski races may become a part of a "triple crown" series of races next winter.

Groundwork for the development of a triple crown of cross country ski racing in Northern Michigan began earlier this month when representatives of the White Pine Stampede, which takes place in Mancelona, Grayling and Gaylord, and the Great Ski Race, which is held in Tawas City, met.

"It's still in the talking stages," Jacquie Merta, director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, which sponsors the Winter Cup races, explained. "They just got in contact with me about the possibility of setting up the three races.

"But I'm quite excited about it. I think it would be great. I think setting up the triple crown would help boost all of the races."

Mrs. Merta said the proposed plan would offer the three races three weekends in February. The triple crown would open with the White Pine Stampede, followed by the Great Ski Race and wrapped up with the Winter Cup races in Charlevoix.

The chamber director explained that each group would run its race independently, but they would keep records together so that an overall winner could be determined.

If the triple crown races are set up, competitors will be racing over courses from Lake Huron to Lake Michigan, ranging in distance from 15 km to 50 km.

Teacher Feature

...James Jensen

They bear little resemblance to the mad scientists of the television cartoon shows and the newspaper comics, but Charlevoix High School chemistry and physics students do spend plenty of time in the laboratory.

Under the direction of physical sciences teacher James Jensen, the 67 students enrolled in chemistry classes and the 20 students in physics get a chance to do some experimenting and learning on their own in the two science classes.

Jensen, who has taught at Charlevoix High School for 11 years, tries to keep his courses lab oriented.

"We might have between five and ten labs in nine weeks," Jensen said. "I like to use the labs as a discovery technique and I enjoy them as much as the students do."

Jensen said that for most students the chemistry lab may be their first experience with experiments.

"When they first come into class many of the students have the idea that chemistry is the old guy pouring chemicals together to see what he can get," the teacher said. "They don't see that chemistry is an organized study, although there is some experimentation, too."

The science teacher said he really stresses the lab report part of the chemistry lab, as opposed to the more enjoyable experimental work of the lab.

"I hit hard on conclusions – what happened, why it happened and does it make sense," Jensen said. "A lot of learning takes place in the lab report and it's exciting to me to see it happen.

"As students draw their conclusions they may not always be right, but at least they are making an attempt to explain what happened and this is where they learn.

"It takes a lot of work and it's not as enjoyable to do the lab report, but the students can get a lot out of it," the teacher said. "It's not an easy thing to grade either."

The chemistry and physics courses at the high school are designed to help prepare students who are going on to college. Although they are not called academic chemistry or physics, the classes are aimed at the college bound student, Jensen said.

Charlevoix High School students are required to have one science credit to graduate and many of them take the ninth grade science mini-courses, which Jensen teaches along with Roger Gowell.

Some students may choose to take biology and then a few others will select either chemistry or physics to fulfill their science requirements.

"Our school pretty much follows the national trend," the science teacher explained. "If you have five students taking biology the next year you will have two or three taking chemistry and then one taking physics.

"You can't say that chemistry and physics are our most popular courses, but they are important. I feel that if a student has a good math, science and English background, they can do almost anything they want to after they get out of high school."

Jensen has been interested in the science field all of his life and he became a science teacher at a time in this nation's history when science teachers were in high demand.

"I hit the perfect time to become a science teacher," he explained. "I graduated from college in the post Sputnik era. A science teacher could get a job almost anywhere."

But Jensen almost didn't become a teacher.

"When I graduated from high school, I planned to become either a state policeman or a teacher," he recalled. "I had a friend who was going to join the U.S. Army reserves and he wanted me to join with him and become an MP. For some reason I didn't and I became a teacher."

Jensen said that today the science field is still a pretty open one for teachers, but the government isn't pushing people into the science field like it used to.

"We've caught up with the Russians technologically and we've surpassed them and there isn't such an emphasis on science as there used to be," the teacher explained.

Jensen said many parents still were interested in having their children get a science background but the interest is not as great as it was in the late 1950s and the 1960s.

"Our school is still strong in its math and science curriculum," the teacher said. "But we're hurting in terms of equipment and space. We're falling behind in the equipment we should be purchasing for the program."

The science teacher said he and the other two teachers, Gowell and Pete Spieles would like to expand the curriculum for the Charlevoix High School students, but they haven't been able to because of a lack of space and equipment.

"The demand is there and the need is there, but how can you encourage kids to take more science courses when you don't have the space to teach it in?" he asked.

Jensen said the science teachers would like to offer a general biology class at a little lower level than the present class is taught at.

"There are many students who would like to take a biology course, but they don't feel they can cut the class we offer now," the teacher said.

In addition to his bachelor's degree in chemistry, which Jensen received from Huntington College in Indiana, the teacher also holds a masters in physical sciences.

When he's not teaching, Jensen enjoys the study of aviation. He has his pilot's license and although he doesn't fly much the teacher attends the national conference for experimental aircraft each summer and flies radio control aircraft.

Ben Franklin Store a family affair

It will be a family affair when the new Ben Franklin store opens its doors this week.

Don and Jeanette Miller, with the assistance of their son and daughter-in-law Dan and Faye Miller, will own and operate the king size variety store at the Captains Corner Shopping Center on M-66 in Charlevoix.

The Millers will draw from an extensive retailing background when they open their new store Thursday. Don worked for a regional variety store chain in the Midwest during the last 33 years and served as store manager, as a buyer and as a general merchandise manager.

The new store will offer a wide assortment of merchandise including complete lines of fashion accessories, lingerie, infant's wear, apparel for women, domestics, notions, fabrics, men's and boy's wear, housewares, hardware and electrical goods, electronics, pet supplies, stationery, toiletries, toys, hobby crafts and candy.

The 10,000-square-foot store is one of more than 2,200 independent stores which work cooperatively with Ben Franklin, a nationwide merchandising organization. As one of the largest retailing organizations in the country, Ben Franklin buyers make purchases in huge quantities enabling its franchised stores to offer many special values.

"We know Charlevoix area families will enjoy shopping in the store and we hope they will give us their suggestions as to what they like in the way of merchandise and services here," Miller said. "We plan to serve them with friendly and courteous service and by guaranteeing the quality of every product we sell."

The Millers love the outdoors and outdoor sports and are glad to be situated in Northern Michigan.

"When we were first looking for a store, we were looking in Wisconsin," Mrs. Miller said. "And then we heard about the opening here.

"I was born in Michigan and my mother lives in Traverse City, so we are happy to move here."

The Millers are planning a grand opening sale as a way to get acquainted with Charlevoix area residents. The store will open at 9 a.m. Thursday and stay open until 9 p.m. It will also be open 9 to 9 on Friday and Saturday during the grand opening sale.

Regular store hours will be 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

IT'S A FAMILY AFFAIR at the new Ben Franklin store in the Captains Corner shopping center. New owners Don and Jeannette Miller (left) will operate the store with the help of son and daughter-in-law Dan and Faye Miller. The store opens Thursday.

Hallmark Harbor opens doors this week

A new card and gift shop will begin business in Charlevoix this week in the Captain's Corner Shopping Center on M-66.

Barbara and Phil Kluczynski will open the doors of their new store, Barb's Hallmark Harbor, on Thursday.

The new 1,750-square-foot store will feature a complete line of Hallmark cards, gift wrap and party goods. The store will also carry gifts, books and wedding items.

"We will carry the entire line of Hallmark cards including the contemporary, seasonal and personal expression cards," Mrs. Kluczynski said.

A variety of gift wrap and matching ribbon or yarn will also be featured in the store along with a wide selection of gifts.

"We will be carrying the Hallmark line of gifts called "Little Gallery," which includes pewter items, lead crystal and porcelain figurines," the new store owner said. "We will also have Prince Gardner wallets, pen and pencil sets and a Hallmark jewelry line called "Accents."

In addition, the gift selection will include wooden wall accessories, mirrors, sconces, plaques, Hallmark candles and posters.

"We will also have Springbrook puzzles, which are fantastic interlocking jigsaw puzzles," Mrs. Kluczynski said.

For that special party, be it anything from a summer barbecue to a formal dinner, the Hallmark Harbor carries paper plates, cups, napkins and table cloths. Fold out centerpieces are also available at the store.

And for the bride-to-be there will be a special section of the store devoted to wedding items.

"We will help with the ordering of wedding invitations and we will also carry cake knives, garters and other items as well as photo albums and guest books," Mrs. Kluczynski said.

The little tykes in the area aren't forgotten in the new store either. Special children's items will be included among the available merchandise including books of activity suggestions for youngsters.

This will be the first retailing experience for the Kluczynskis who have moved to Charlevoix from Warren.

"My husband has always wanted to own his own business. When we were in Charlevoix one weekend we heard about the shopping center and decided to look into it and here we are," Mrs. Kluczynski explained.

The new store owner said she is excited about the new venture.

"I've always sent out a lot of cards and it will be interesting to help people in the selection of cards and other items in the store," she said.

Mrs. Kluczynski also has an interest in interior decorating and she feels that interest will give her the background to help people select home accessories and other gift items.

"We're geared to serving the people in the Charlevoix area and we're looking forward to working with them," she said.

The store will be open Monday through Thursday and Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. On Fridays the store will be open fro 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The Kluczynskis have two children, Brad and Jodi, who are students at the Charlevoix Elementary School. Kluczynski is currently working for the National Bank of Detroit.

A SHOP WITH A CARD OR GIFT for every occasion will open Thursday in the Captains Corner shopping center. Owners of Barb's Hallmark Harbor are Phil and Barbara Kluzynski. With them are their children Brad and Jodi.

Starting next year, Americans won't have to quit their jobs at age 65 unless they want to.

With some exceptions, no employee who can still work could be forced to retire before 70. As of this Sept. 30, there will be no mandatory retirement age for federal employees.

Exceptions will be individuals under labor contracts that stipulate specific retirement ages, university professors with tenure, and some top executives. And anyone could still choose to retire at 65 or earlier.

Enactment of the law extending the working years was assured when House-Senate conferees recently agreed on a compromise version of the retirement bills that passed both houses of Congress by lopsided margins last year.

Bismarck Started It

The age for retirement benefits had been set at 65 when the Social Security Administration was created in 1935 because that was the only precedent officials in Washington could find.

German chancellor Otto von Bismarck had picked that age in 1881 when he first proposed government payments to retired workers.

Since at the time few people lived beyond 65, Bismarck was pushing a program that defused the appeal of his socialist opposition – and cost his treasury very little.

Over the years, as other nations instituted social security plans, 65 became the accepted age for retirement benefits. Today in Britain, Poland, Germany, Austria, and Israel payments for men begin at 65 and for women at 60.

In Italy and in several East European countries, the age limits are 65 and 55. In Switzerland they are 65 and 62. The Netherlands, Finland, Ireland, and Spain also follow the 65 rule.

In Japan, however, high birth rates formerly meant a tight job market, and retirement has been mandatory at 55. Sweden, on the other hand, long had a small population and set the retirement age at 67. It was lowered to 65 last year.

Retaining Older Workers

The pattern is different in the Soviet Union, where trained workers are in demand. Men may retire at 65 and women at 55, but they are encouraged to stay on the job. If they do, they collect their pensions in addition to their wages.

A number of economists say that allowing older workers to stay on the job will boost U.S. productivity at the same time that it reduces the drain on Social Security funds.

Others fear that if too many people delay retirement, unemployment will increase among youth, and younger workers will have fewer chances for advancement.

In the last decade, more workers have been retiring earlier, and early retirement is a feature of many union contracts. But with inflation, some retirees end up taking second jobs. Other workers may decide to put off retirement for a while.

Sponsors of the new law say it will give workers more freedom to choose.

Richard Meadows joins Army through delayed enlistment program

Richard Meadows, a senior at Charlevoix High School, entered the U.S. Army's Delayed Entry Porgram on Feb. 11th at the Armed Forces Entrance and Examining Station in Detroit, according to Sergeant Jeff Sollinger, an Army recruiter based in Gaylord.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Meadows of Charlevoix, the 18-year old student will go on active duty this summer following his graduation.

Meadows has been a member of the Charlevoix High School's cross country and track teams.

The Army's Delayed program allows young people like Meadows to be assured of their choice of Army training, jobs and duty locations before they enter the service. If qualified, an enlistee may wait up to 12 months before reporting for active duty.

Commissioners vote to close Lake Shore

The Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners paved the way for the Department of Natural Resources take over of Lake Shore Road in the former Bell's Bay State Forest last week.

The commissioners passed a resolution in a 14 to 1 vote Wednesday asking the Charlevoix County Road Commission to abandon Lake Shore Road from Bell's Bay Road south to the Norwood Township park. The Parks Division of the DNR would like control of the road so that it can develop Fisherman's Island State Park in that area.

The road commission must now hold a public hearing on the proposed abandonment before it can take any official action. At the last hearing on the abandonment of the road in 1975, more than 60 people appeared at the road commission offices to protest.

Most of the residents protesting the abandonment were from Charlevoix. At that time they were concerned that the road, which runs through a popular recreation area for Charlevoix residents as well as tourists, would be completely closed off to the public.

Commissioner Oscar Ward, who cast the lone dissenting vote against the resolution, expressed these same fears last week.

"The public has used this road freely for generations," Ward said. "The people in my end of town have grave concerns about the closing of this road."

James T. Andrus, assistant regional parks supervisor, who is responsible for the development of the Fisherman's Island State Park, explained that the DNR has no intention of closing off the road to public use.

"We are interested in providing outdoor recreation to the residents of this area and the taxpayers in this state," Andrus said. "But we want to provide that recreation in a civilized manner. We're not going to develop this park and then throw it out there to be fought over.

"If you want outdoor recreation for the taxpayers who are paying for this park, then we will provide it. If you don't want it then we won't develop the area."

Andrus said the Parks Division's request for the road abandonment had changed since 1975. This time the division is interested in only that part of Lake Shore Drive that extends south from Bell's Bay Road to the Norwood Township park. In 1975, the DNR had also asked that Lake Shore Road north of Bell's Bay Road be abandoned to South Point even though it wasn't going to develop the area into a park.

Andrus said that both Norwood and Charlevoix townships had been advised of the abandonment request and had passed resolutions approving the action.

The parks supervisor explained that a gate would be erected at the point where the pavement ends on Lake Shore Road. The gate would be open between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. After 10 p.m. all cars would have to be out of the park area and only registered campers will be allowed in the campground site.

Eventually the DNR would like to construct a new campground, shower facilities, picnic areas and other buildings necessary for the operation of a state park.

"But we won't develop anything until we can shut off the road," he said.

Andrus said as soon as construction starts, people entering the park area will have to purchase stickers to get in. Until then the park will be open for free.

"You have to give up something to get a state park," Andrus said. "But in the long run, I feel that what you give up is worth what you will get."

Financially, Charlevoix County's teenagers seem to be making out very well.

They have affluence such as their parents never dreamed of at their age. As a result, with their spending clout, they have become an economic group to be reckoned with.

The unprecedented amount of money at their command, estimated at no less than $2,471,000 in the past year, went for the whole gamut of personal items and leisure-time activities that are so important to them. And it went fast.

In addition to what they spent on themselves, they exerted a strong influence on family purchases – from food to furniture and from carpets to cars.

All of which enhances the stature of the teen-agers in the eyes of designers and retail merchants, who court them as never before through frequent changes of fashions and styles.

The overall spending figures are based upon surveys and studies made by the Rand Youth Poll, a market research organization, by the Family Economist and others.

The findings are that the 30 million teen-agers in the United States had an income of $28.7 billion last year, a $2.6 billion increase over 1976.

It was the largest annual rise in the past 25 years and is attributed to inflationary pressures and to the greater number of possessions that have become "musts" for young people.

For Charlevoix County's teen-age population, which now numbers close to 3,050, the outlay came to approximately $2,471,000, based upon local income and spending figures. Per capita, it averaged $810 in the year.

Part of this money was earned by doing odd jobs after school and during summer vacations. The rest came from weekly allowances.

Girls, it is found, outspend boys. Personal vanity is given as the main reason for the difference. Among boys, dating and entertainment are in the number one spot, with cars in second place.

Of even greater importance to local merchants is the general family spending over which the teen-agers have an influence. This is placed at about $60 billion a year nationally.

In Charlevoix County, in line with the findings, it affects an estimated $4,460,000 of the spending done per year in local stores.

Obituary

Lucille E. Allard

Funeral services for Mrs. A. Fritz (Lucille E.) Allard, were held Thursday, March 30, at St. Mary's church. The Rev. Dale Magoon officiated. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Allard, who had been in ill health, died shortly after being admitted to the Charlevoix Area Hospital on Monday, the day before her 38th birthday.

The Rosary was recited at the Winchester Funeral Home Wednesday evening.

Born in Flint March 21, 1940, the former Lucille Elizabeth Sanford came to Charlevoix to make her home at the age of six years. She was graduated from the Charlevoix High School and in 1960 was married to Allard. She was a member of St. Mary's Church, the Little Flower Guild and the St. Mary's Parish Club.

Surviving are her husband; three daughters, Rebecca L., Michele T. and Kristen M., and a son, Lee C., all at home; her father, Leonard Sanford of Phoenix, Ariz.; a sister, Mrs. Steven Swain of Astoria, Ore., and three brothers, Raymond of West Chesterfield, N.H., Robert of Williamson and Richard of Phoenix.

Frances L. Goode

Funeral services for Mrs. T. Ernest (Frances L.) Goode, 76, who died Saturday at the Meadowbrook Medical Care Facility at Bellaire where she had been a patient for five days, were held at Christ Episcopal church Tuesday. The Rev. Roger Ames officiated. Interment was in Brookside cemetery.

The former Frances L. Lott was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., April 10, 1901 and, on Sept. 19, 1921, was married to Mr. Goode. They made their home in Brooklyn until coming to Ironton in 1959 to make their home. In 1970 they moved to Charlevoix. She was a member of Christ Episcopal church.

She is survived by her husband; two granddaughters, Mrs. Susan Bowman of Grand Rapids and Mrs. Todd (Roberta) Lewis of Traverse City; three great-grandchildren and a sister, Mrs. William Lemken of Brooklyn, N.Y.

The family suggests that anyone wishing to honor her memory contribute in her name to the memorial fund at Christ Episcopal church or the charity of their choice.

The Winchester Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Board discusses having full or part time prosecutor

To have a fulltime county prosecuting attorney or not to have a fulltime prosecuting attorney seems to be the question before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

The recent announcement of prosecuting attorney Roy C. Hayes that he will be resigning his post to enter private practice has caused the county commissioners to take another look at the prosecutor's position.

Hayes told the commissioners earlier in the month that he would not leave his position until a competent replacement was found and he indicated that he was having trouble interesting local attorneys in the job.

To aid the commissioners in their evaluation of the prosecutor's office, assistant prosecutor Frank Hoffman attended last Wednesday's commission meeting to answer any questions the board had. Hoffman explained that local attorneys had been discussing the office and how to make it more appealing.

The attorney said the local attorneys favored a situation that would allow the prosecutor to maintain some type of limited practice while he served the county. He proposed that the prosecutor's job become parttime with the prosecutor serving three days a week and an assistant prosecutor serving two days a week.

"This way the prosecutor's office will be covered five days a week, but it will allow the two attorneys to continue a limited practice," Hoffman pointed out.

Commissioner Lee Moerland asked Hoffman if he would rather have the job fulltime or parttime.

"At the salary it pays, I'd rather be in private practice," Hoffman responded.

Prosecutor Hayes urged the commissioners to keep the office as a fulltime position.

"I think it would be a mistake to settle for or to take anything less than a fulltime prosecutor," Hayes said. "I get between 5 and 15 phone calls a day from residents seeking help. About 70 percent of the time the questions aren't of a criminal nature, but there are questions about legal procedures that need to be answered.

"This is the type of service that the county prosecutor's office can and should give the citizens. I think they deserve it but you need a fulltime prosecutor to do it."

Hayes said he also felt that in the size community that Charlevoix County is, a prosecuting attorney with a limited practice would be involved in too many conflicts of interest to allow him to serve the county effectively.

No action was taken by the commissioners on the comments. The search for a new prosecutor is continuing.

Cooperation leads to better health care

Cooperation between health care agencies has led to better care for Charlevoix County residents.

The hard work and concern of the nursing staffs at the Charlevoix Area Hospital and the District Health Department No. 3 has led to a total care program for patients both in and outside the hospital.

The hospital staff often refers patients to the Health Department for continuing care after discharge from the hospital, and, the nursing staff of the Health Department, in turn, works closely with Charlevoix Area Hospital nurses and physicians, referring patients to the physicians for specific problems.

At least once a week, Kathy Boss, R.N., Director of Nursing Services at Charlevoix Area Hospital, meets with Public Health Nurse Sue Presnell, R.N., to discuss "discharge planning."

"Discharge planning" involves finding ways to help patients after they leave the hospital, if further help is appropriate. It also permits health care to continue in the home, which reduces the time a patient must be hospitalized and, therefore, reduces costs.

One recent Wednesday morning the two nurses discussed their patients and their patient's needs.

A young new mother had been discharged with her new baby. Mrs. Boss told Mrs. Presnell the details of that new mother's situation, suggesting that the new mother could use some help learning newborn care.

Mrs. Presnell took notes and agreed to visit the mother, who had requested that a public health nurse come to her home.

Mrs. Boss explained that a referral to Public Health only occurs if the patient agreed it is a good idea.

Later, Mrs. Frances Hooper, public health nursing director, emphasized the same point.

"It's a misconception to assume we only help people who are very poor or have extreme problems. We see anyone whom we can help and who requests our assistance."

Mrs. Boss views public health nurse visits as "supportive" to new mothers, or other discharged patients, well enough to go home, but still requiring some nursing care.

Mrs. Boss and Mrs. Preksnell turned to discussing how Mrs. Presnell might help the family of a stroke victim who had gone home recently. Arrangements were made for a speech therapist and a physical therapist to begin home visit as well.

Mrs. Presnell agreed to follow closely the case of another recent hospital patient who was bed-ridden and whose family needed some assistance learning how to cope with her problems.

The hospital nurse described problems, the public health nurse took notes and discussed what she would do to follow up.

The two nurses shared a mutual problem of obtaining certain equipment for a bed-ridden patient and their difficulties dealing with the intricacies of Blue Cross and Medicare coverage.

Later Mrs. Hooper outlined other areas of vital cooperation between the hospital and Health Department.

"By law we must be informed about communicable diseases, such as T.B., meningitus, or venereal disease.

"The hospital is conscientious about reporting any incidences of communicable diseases to us," she said.

In turn, the Health Department supplies the hospital with immunization materials when needed, as the biologics for T.B. testing.

Through the Health Department's two health screening programs for Medicaid recipients and senior citizens, medical problems are identified and people are referred to physicians, explained Mrs. Hooper, emphasizing that the Public Health Nurse's primary job is to offer nursing care and that they refer medical problems to physicians.

Mrs. Hooper added that Charlevoix Area Hospital frequently donates equipment or material to patients through the Health Department.

"We had a case of a baby recently who required certain tests," Mrs. Hooper said as an example. "The mother could not afford to come from the far end of the county to the hospital. The hospital gave us the material to perform the tests and our nurse went to the home," Mrs. Hooper related.

The public health nursing director repeated her concern that people understand, "Everything the health department offers is available to residents of all four counties — Emmet, Charlevoix, Antrim, and Otsego, regardless of age, sex and economic status."

The Odd Fellows took the tourney for the third year in a row, according to secretary Sims Baker (middle). During the tourney history the Odd Fellows have won 27 titles and the Masons 21.

Losing weight, managing the budget, and cutting back on electrical use have more in common than just reducing. In these areas it's the little things that count. A pound lost, a penny saved, and a switch turned off when done consistently all eventually add up to results.

Let's take electrical use for example. If you had to cut back 25 percent in your electrical use, what could you do? Would the cutback make a big change in your every day living? A little forethought and common sense can help you make the cutback without too much trouble.

The average Michigan family uses approximately 600 to 700 kilowatt-hours a month. (Check your last utility bill for your actual consumption rate.) It takes one pound of coal to generate one kilowatt-hour. If your family consumes 600 kilowatt-hours a month, start looking at ways to cut out 150 of those hours. Begin your cutback on a daily basis, start with 5 kilowatt-hours a day, or 35 kilowatt-hours a week.

The biggest energy user in the home next to space heating is electrically heated water. Here are ways you can save through conservation efforts:

–Cut out a bath or 5-minute shower a day and save 3 kwh

–Cut total bath water from 25 gallons to 12 gallons (6 gallons hot) and save 1.5 kwh.

–Cut shower time from 5 minutes to 3 minutes and save 10 gallons or 1.25 kwh.

–Turn shower faucet on only part way, or install flow restrictor in shower to cut flow to 3 gallons a minute instead of 5 and save 1 kwh during a 5-minute shower.

When doing the family laundry, you can –Change two wash loads a week from hot wash, warm rinse to warm wash, cold rinse, and save 11 kwh a week.

–Change six warm rinse cycles to cold and save 16 kwh a week.

Here are some other energy saving ideas:

–Turn off two 100-watt lights 5 hours a day (using daylight, lower light level, and turn off when out of room) and save 1 kwh.

–Turn off color TV three hours a day/night and save 1 kwh.

–Put coffee into a thermos after brewing and use that all morning (four hours) instead of leaving pot on to keep warm; save about ½ kwh in four hours.

CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL MINUTES

MARCH 20, 1978
8:00 p.m.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

The Minutes of the March 6, 1978 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

Paul Osterberg, a member of the General Public present, asked Mayor Hansen to read aloud a letter written by Mr. Osterberg on this date and submitted to the Mayor and Council. In the letter, Mr. Osterberg asked that Council investigate violations of the Zoning Ordinance. He specifically cited a building project in the downtown business district that was granted a variance without the adjoining neighbors being notified. He also stated this same building is constructed of highly flammable material. Mayor Hansen advised Mr. Osterberg that if the zoning laws are not being adhered to, the matter should be referred to the Police Department. He also suggested that Mr. Osterberg find out who issued the original building permit for the project and who the building inspector was if there is a possibility of faulty construction.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Plumm.

RESOLUTION 78-3-3

WHEREAS the City of Charlevoix deems it necessary and expedient that the wages of employees who are not covered by a Union Contract be increased in line of the cost of living increase,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the wages of non-union employees be raised in the amount of 8 percent effective beginning the 1978-1979 fiscal year.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Wallace.

RESOLUTION 77-3-4

WHEREAS, the City of Charlevoix recognizes the need of more stringent building inspections and,

THAT the County of Charlevoix has qualified personnel and has submitted an agreement to perform said building inspection,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the City of Charlevoix enter into this agreement.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

Council discussed the appointment of members to the Planning Commission as required under the new Zoning Ordinance. No decision was made on this matter and it will be placed on the agenda of the Committee of the Whole scheduled for March 27, 1978 for further evaluation and study.

Resolution was offered by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Wood that the following amendment to Ordinance No. 237 be adopted.

ORDINANCE NO. 237
Section 5A

The City of Charlevoix Ordains that Ordinance No. 237 be, in same hereby amended to provide for a new section, 5A, to read as follows:

SECTION 5A: In the case of buildings located in a Shopping Center wherein some of said buildings are located in whole or in part more than 200 feet from the center line of the adjacent public roadway, a Special Use Permit may be granted by City Council upon application, which may authorize flush signs to exceed 72 sq. ft. in size, as set forth in Section 5 - as to those buildings that are located in whole or in part more than said 200 feet from the public roadway centerline.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

Moved by Alderman Whitley and supported by Alderman Wallace that the application for a special use sign permit presented by the Ben Franklin Store of the Captain's Corner Shopping Center be approved and that the color photograph presented become part of the application. Motion was approved by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

C.D. Matthews appeared before Council to present a new design for his proposed project to be known as Belvedere Apartments. Mr. Matthews stated the new design would not require a height variance as the original design had, and therefore, he felt, would be less objectional to the surrounding property owners. Council advised Mr. Matthews that they would hold a Board of Appeals Meeting on April 3, 1978 to determine the matter as the project would still require other variances. Mayor Hansen requested that, should the proposed project become reality, all parking areas drained into the lake not into the street.

Council determined that the schedule for the Annual Spring Clean-up Program would be as follows: Second Ward, May 3, 4, and 5; Third Ward May 10, 11, and 12, and; First Ward, May 17, 18 and 19.

Jack Uhrick, representing the Chamber of Commerce, presented the proposed "Charlevoix the Beautiful" brochures and accompanying price list to Council for their evaluation. Mr. Uhrick also asked that the City contribute $350 for the 1978 Michigan Amateur Golf Tournament.

The Finance Committee having examined bills totaling $182,055.18 find them correct and recommend the bills be allowed. Moved by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Wallace that the bills be allowed and orders drawn for their amounts. Motion was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Whitley, Wallace, Plumm, and Wood. Nays: None. Absent: Aldermen Erber and Morris.

Council adjourned.

Judy D. Przybylski, City Clerk

FAITH BIDS US OBEY THE LAWS OF THE LAND

The citizens of a free society know that the laws they must live by are the very guardians of their freedom and the safeguards of their lives and property. These laws are kept to the irreducible minimum required to protect us from each other and from the conceivable abuses of government, while at the same time allowing us the widest possible margin of personal liberty. God's laws were set forth throughout the Bible for these very reasons, along with many admonitions to obey the laws of the land as well. It will be to your advantage to learn all about this, by your regular attendance at the Church of your choice.

"The law is good,
if man use it lawfully."
—I Timothy 1:8

Stubborness helps wrestler reach goal

What does it take to chalk up 100 victories during a high school wrestling career?

Lots of luck, no injuries and good training and conditioning, according to Charlevoix High School wrestling coach Norm Probert.

And while that may be true, what it really takes is stubbornness and desire, according to Ron Hilton, the first Charlevoix High School wrestler to post 100 wins during four years on the team.

"I'm too stubborn to lose," Hilton explained. "I figure why should I let the other guy win when I can do it?"

Coach Probert agreed with the wrestler's assessment of himself.

"Ron's one of the most determined wrestlers I've known," the coach said. "He's not a tremendous mover and he doesn't have tremendous strength. He's pretty good with his legs, but not sensational. He does have complete perseverance.

"I would have to say that is his greatest asset, his perseverance. There were a lot of times when he would be outclassed by an opponent, but he would end up winning because he kept plugging away at a kid and he held on until the end."

Probert pointed oot that Hilton won many close matches with socres of 7-6 or 6-5. The coach estimated that of Hilton's 102 wrestling career wins, only about 20 of them were pins.

"He spent a lot of time on the mat to get those wins," the coach said. "He had to wurk hard to get that 100th victory."

Hilton's 100th victory was perhaps one of the hardest matches he has ever wrestled. During the last 12 seconds of the match, the opponent got a reversal and tied the match. But Hilton managed to pull off an escape and gather up two more points and his 100th victory with only seven seconds left in the match.

The wrestler points to his match against Petoskey's John Pemberton as one of his most memorable matches. Hilton defeated Pemberton when the Rayders were wrestling in Petoskey and helped spark his team to its first victory against the Northmen in the history of the competition between the two schools.

"Last year he beat me both times," Hilton recalled. "But this year I beat him both times."

Coach Probert remembered that victory, too.

"Since his freshman year, Ron has never shown any emotion about a win or a loss," the coach said. "That's just the type of kid he is. But he had a bright smile on his face after he beat Pemberton. And I think that's the only time I've ever seen him smile."

Hilton has been a record setter throughout his career as a high school wrestler. As a freshman he had only 15 wins, but that was a new record for first year varsity wrestlers.

Even though he set a record, Hilton had no thoughts of going for 100 victories as a freshman. But during his sophomore year he posted 30 victories and then as a junior he won 24 matches.

"At the beginning of this year I knew I could hit 100 if I wanted to," the wrestler said. "I made that my goal."

Along with determination and stubbornness, Hilton trained hard and followed a rigorous conditioning schedule.

"Ron always kept himself in excellent condition and he followed the proper training and the proper diet without exception," Coach Probert said. "And he always wrestled in a class close to his own natural weight and I think that has helped him. He's always kept himself in tip top condition.

And how did he stay in condition? Hilton said he would run some in the summers and help his father with such farm chores as baling hay and picking corn. In the winter he works his trapping lines and hunts. The wrestler enjoys trapping muskrat, mink, racoon, and beaver.

"Lots of times just before a meet would start you would see Ron come in wearing his high boots and covered with snow and you would know he had been out trapping," Coach Probert recalled.

"I'm too nervous before a meet to sit at home so I go out and check my traps and that helps me settle down," he explained.

The wrestler said there were many other things that helped him condition and prepare for the wrestling season. Last summer he attended a special wrestling camp in Virginia with other members of the Rayder team to get some additional training in various holds and moves.

He also credits the hard practices held by Coach Probert and the early start on the season with helping him. And his teammates and family were a big help, too.

"The other two guys on the team in my weight class were pretty good and they helped me a lot by providing competition," he said. "And the fact that the other guys on the team were also breaking records helped keep all of our sprits up."

Hilton's close friend Mike Kiteley broke the record for the most number of pins in a row and teammate Craig Golovich ended the season with 96 career victories.

The wrestler's parents also were active in the Charlevoix Wrestling Club and helped with the tournaments and kept encouraging him to win.

Hilton, a B+ average student, isn't sure what his plans for the future are. He plans to take a trip out West on motorcycle with some friends following graduation and then he will help his father with the farm for the rest of the summer. When fall comes he isn't sure what he'll do, but he may try his hand at trapping fulltime.

"I'd liek to buy some land in Minnesota and maybe I'll trap there," he said.

But whatever he does, this past year will be a memorable one.

"I can't say that I lived to wrestle," Hilton said looking back on his final season as a high school wrestler. "But I did give up most everything else during wrestling season.

"I still trapped a little though," he said smiling.

Charlevoix voters adopt new city charter!

Charlevoix has a new city charter.

City voters approved the third draft of the proposed charter overwhelmingly Monday as they cast 622 votes in favor of the document and 288 votes against it.

First and Third Ward voters carried the charter question, while Second Ward voters defeated it as they have done in the last two elections on the issue.

"But you even see a shift in sentiment in the Second Ward in this election," John R. Clock, Charlevoix Charter Commission member, pointed out. "The split between the votes isn't so wide this time. I think this is a good indication that this charter is what the people wanted."

The new charter converts the city from a Fourth Class City into a Home Rule City and also provides a change in the form of government from the mayor-council form which the city currently operates under, to a council-city manager form of government.

Under the new form of government, the city manager runs the day-to-day activities of the city like a president would run a corporation, while the city council makes long range plans and decisions in the same way that a corporation's board of directors functions.

"I think this vote is a mandate from the people saying that they want more efficient government and that they want the city run more like the business it is," John R. Michael, another charter commission member, said.

"I think the charter commission is very definitely pleased with the outcome of this election. We're glad to see the thousands of hours that we have put into this rewarded, to see the fruits of our efforts realized.

Commissioner Clock said he believes the new charter will serve the city well.

"I think this is a good basic charter for Charlevoix," Clock said. "It's not that different from the Fourth Class Cities Act, but there are some basic changes.

"Undoubtedly there are some things that we have overlooked, but the charter is amendable and we will be able to correct those things ourselves instead of waiting for the state legislature to do it for us."

The new charter goes into effect June 1.

A break down of the vote showed First Ward voters casting 197 votes in favor of the charter and 43 against it. Absentee voters in the First Ward cast 98 yes votes and 16 no votes.

In the Second Ward, 95 yes votes were cast on the voting machines Monday and 36 yes votes were cast by absentee ballot. A total of 105 no votes were cast on the voting machine and 55 no votes were cast by absentee ballot.

In the Third Ward, voters supported the proposal with 132 yes votes at the polls and 64 yes votes by absentee ballot. Third Ward voters cast 24 no votes at the polls and 45 by absentee ballot.

Monday was also the general election for city offices. All of the candidates were running unopposed.

Voters cast 771 votes for Sam Supernaw, 4 votes for write-in Mayor Edward Hansen and 1 vote for Ivan Whitley for the mayor's seat. Supernaw defeated the mayor during the primary election and ran unopposed in this election.

Judy Przybylski received 842 votes for the clerk's office; Annabelle Cunningham received 857 votes for the treasurer's office while Jeffrey Porter received 327 votes for First Ward alderman, Stub Swanson received 255 votes for Second Ward alderman; and Earl Muma received 275 for Third Ward alderman.

Charlevoix Senior Citizens Again on Short End of Stick!

Why can't the Charlevoix merchants extend the same discount courtesy to our Senior Citizen as our neighboring Boyne City businessmen do? It has been our recent experience to enjoy substantial senior citizen discounts at Boyne City restaurants, drugstore and barbershop. Too bad we Seniors here can't enjoy such a privilege! Then our businessmen wonder why we shop out of town! Some day he will be a Senior Citizen!

Enjoys Carillon

Thanks to whoever is responsible for the carillon bells heard through the town. It is most enjoyable listening to them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The carillon was recently installed in the First Congregational Church on the corner of Park Avenue and State Street.

It Drives a Man to Swear

Do you want to start a man to swearing who doesn't swear? Say "Equalization" want him to swear more? Soy "Board of Review". Want to hear a complete vocabulary on swearing? Add the word "politician."

Supports Panama Treaties

Concerning the Panama Canal, and with forbears who were willing to fight in all of our wars except Viet Nam, I regret that certain ones are so busy waving the flag the sweat affects their brains.

Have they heard of building good foreign relations for the future? We'll need them. How would we feel if another nation had bribed its way to land along the center of our own country?

City denies second condo request

A second site plan for the construction of eight condominium units was turned down by the Charlevoix Common Council Monday night.

The proposal for the eight units, called the Belvedere Apartments, was presented by C.D. Matthews, owner of the property next to the Wharf Condominiums on Belvedere Avenue.

The second site plan varied the condominium proposal presented to the board a month ago by reducing the height of the complex to the maximum allowed, 35 feet.

An earlier proposal which included roof peaks of up to 43 feet high was strongly objected to by residents living on the bluff across from where the proposed complex may be built.

The second condominium proposal still requires density variances and a front yard setback variance, however, which the first proposal also required.

After more than an hour of discussion by the council a motion was made to approve the site plan if the proposed condominiums met all of the zoning requirements. This proposal was defeated.

First Ward Alderman Ray Wood explained he had received numerous telephone calls from city residents saying they would not oppose the condominium complex if it met all of the zoning requirements, otherwise these residents felt the project should be denied any variances.

"They're death on condominiums," Wood said.

A second motion was made to grant the density variance and the setback variance.

"I feel they have tried to comply with the spirit of the community and its wishes in this second plan and I think they should be granted the variances," Second Ward Alderman Jeannine Wallace said making the motion. "They've certainly shown practical difficulty and undue hardship."

The vote on the second motion was split with Mrs. Wallace, Joe Morris and Susan Erber supporting it and George Plumm, Ray Wood and Ivan Whitley opposing it.

Mayor Edward Hansen declared the motion failed without voting.

"That was quite a vote," Hansen declared after the meeting.

"I wasn't going to go out of here a lame duck mayor and break a vote on a condominium," he said explaining his action.

In other action, the council designated the revenue sharing funds for use in special projects throughout the year. The mayor proposed that $28,000 be used for dock and marina repair, $28,000 be used for street repair, $26,000 be used for the purchase of a new truck for the street deaprtment and $15,000 be used for parks and recreation.

Common council names seven city residents to new planning body

A new planning commission was appointed for the City of Charlevoix Monday night, but not without a fight.

After several minutes of verbal sparring between Second Ward aldermen Jeannine Wallace and Ivan Whitley and the airing of objections raised by two city residents in the audience, a motion was made to table action on the appointments during the Charlevoix Common Council meeting.

The motion was defeated 5-1 with only Alderman Whitley supporting the action. If the motion had passed it would have delayed the appointments for the second time in four weeks.

A second motion was then made approving the appointments which carried 5-1, with Whitley casting the lone dissenting vote.

Appointed to the planning commission for a one-year term were Susan Erber and Thomas Duke. Ken Staley and Clement Olnch received two-year appointments to the planning body and Barbara Fels, Dave Strawbridge and Jeannine Wallace received three-year appointments to the board.

The planning commissioners will take office when the zoning ordinance becomes effective April 11.

Mayor Edward Hansen said he had been asked to delay the appointments until the new council could take office but he felt it was important to appoint the board Monday so it could take office when the zoning ordinance becomes law.

The newly elected council will not take office until April 20 and could not appoint a planning commission until then which is nine days after the zoning ordinance goes into effect.

Hansen asked Mayor-elect Sam Supernaw and new Third Ward Alderman Earl Muma if they objected to the appointments. Both men supported them.

"I understand that the council would like to finish up the action establishing the planning commission," Supernaw said. "It was the doings of this council that got the new zoning ordinance passed and I think they should have some say in who is named to the board."

Nominating petitions due Monday for school board

People interested in throwing their hats into the ring for a Charlevoix Board of Education seat have until 4 p.m. Monday to file their petitions.

Only two people have taken out petitions for the two seats that will be up for election during the general school vote June 12, school officials say.

The terms of Ardeth Wieland and the late Claire Martin will expire June 30. Mrs. Wieland has indicated she will seek re-election to her seat. Robert Cook, who was appointed to fill Mr. Martin's unexpired term, will not seek election to that seat. Both terms are for four years.

The last day of registration for people who would like to vote in the upcoming election is May 15. People may register to vote at the Secretary of State's office or with the city or township clerk.

It started out as a joke, and it may end up as a collector's item.

Currently circulating in Charlevoix Township and the surrounding area are 100 campaign buttons sporting a picture of Oscar Stroud, Charlevoix Township supervisor, and proclaiming, "Resident of Stroudsville and Proud of it!"

Charlevoix Township trustee Don Smith had the buttons made up as a campaign gimmick for the township supervisor. Smith pointed out it is an election year and that even though Stroud is apparently unopposed for the position he has held since he was appointed to it in 1971, everyone needs campaign buttons.

"No, it's not an April Fools joke," Smith said as he handed out the buttons following the township's annual meeting Saturday.

"I had the buttons made up to get even with Oscar for all the things he's done to me," Smith explained as a Cheshire cat grin engulfed his face. "But I also did it to give him an ego boost. He's taken a lot of grief in the last year."

Smith said he came up with the word Stroudsville as a new name for Charlevoix Township after reading a Hotline comment in the Charlevoix Courier. The Hotline commentator labeled the City of Charlevoix "Hansenville" after longtime mayor, Edward Hansen, and called Charlevoix Township "Stroudland" in honor of its longtime supervisor.

"I doubt the name of the township will ever be changed to Stroudsville, but we might name a street after him in honor of everything he's done for us," Smith joked.

The township trustee said the buttons have become something of a novelty and are in great demand among the coffee set – those area officials and residents Stroud can be seen having coffee with at one of the many coffee break spots in town.

"I only had 100 made up and once they're gone that's it," Smith said. "You better hang onto them, they may become a collector's item someday."

Supervisor Stroud just smiled.

THINK THIS OVER

The average new patient of the average doctor of chiropractic is one who has gone the "rounds" of everything else, sought everything else, tried everything else and as a "last resort" tries chiropractic. This makes it double hard for the chiropractor in many ways.

First, he is trying to convey a "strange" philosophy to a person who finds the simplicity of chiropractic so baffling!

Second, the "average" new patient under chiropractic care has always depended upon a tangible substance, or what we commonly call, a miracle wonder! The very idea of a simple adjustment, or adjustments, being able to produce a renewed life! for almost ninety years, men, women and children have found favor, worth and merit in these simple adjustments. We say simple, though they are the most profound and highly technical things in all the world indeed, knowing WHERE is so important, but knowing HOW is equally important.

Your Doctor of chiropractic deals with the fundamental laws of nature and as he first seeks to know the CAUSE, it is then that he sets out to correct the cause and having done this, normal health returns. It is too bad this large group of people wait until the "last resort" to give chiropractic its proper trial. If more would seek to know the truth about health and disease and know that the NERVE SYSTEM controls all function of the body and that the doctor of chiropractic is a specialist in this field, there would be less prolonged sickness, less time lost from work, less money spent and more abundant living would be theirs.

If chiropractic is new to you, don't expect a miracle to be performed. Give your competent chiropractor a chance and do as he suggests and chiropractic will become a "household" word with you and your words of appreciation or it will certainly lead others to the path that leads to health, Chiropractic! Ballroom dancing returns

Cheek-to-cheek becoming chic

It takes two to tango, and that number also works well for the fox trot, cha-cha, waltz, and rumba, Americans are rediscovering.

Couples young and old are finding cheek-to-cheek is once again chic, and that's good news for the nation's 200 or so ballrooms. They're doing better than they have in years, says Frances Archer, who owns a 38-year-old ballroom in Des Moines.

Her ballroom draws 500 to 700 dancers a night who swing and sway to the big band sounds of the '30s and '40s, spiced with occasional contemporary tunes.

Togetherness Is Back

"People are definitely more interested in couple dancing these days, especially the fast ones like the polka," Mrs. Archer said. "And we've noticed more and more young people in our ballroom dance classes."

Disco dancing, which borrows many rhythms and steps from classic Latin styles, has helped bridge the gap between the free-stepping gyrations of the '60s and ballroom dance steps. The new dances such as the bump and the hustle have put touching back into dancing.

"Young people come in and want to learn disco dancing," said a Washington, D.C., dance studio owner. "They wind up getting interested in the ballroom styles."

Capitalizing on the changing times, a national hotel chain has revived the tea dance, complete with dance cards, watercress sandwiches, pastries, cigarette girls, and genuine English tea.

Weekly in the hotels' lobbies couples take a sentimental journey with the big band sounds (produced by live big bands) and popular dances of yesteryear: fox trot, waltz, rumba, samba, tango, lindy hop, peabody, shag, Westchester, and the collegiate swing.

"People needed a place to go to meet besides bars," explained Adrienne Adels, who initiated the program after researching the reasons for the success of tea dances in the 1930s. "People are finding it's an inexpensive way to spend an elegant evening."

The response has been "phenomenal," she said. "Blacks, whites, old, young, everyone from kids in jeans to ladies in pillbox hats show up."

Dance Floors Stretched

The back-to-ballroom trend doesn't appeal to everyone.

"The nightclub owners were happy with those peanut-sized dance floors of the rock era," a dance instructor pointed out. "Bigger dance floors take away table space."

Dancing close has come full circle since the days people first were getting used to embracing on the dance floor.

Do you find your toe tapping and your feet dancing to every tune on the radio?

Then why not try learning how to square dance.

A modern western square dancing class will be offered beginning 7 p.m. Thursday in the Shay Elementary School in Harbor Springs. Jerry Bates of Petoskey will instruct the class which is being offered through the Harbor Springs Community Education program.

Modern western square dancing is a little bit different from what people usually think of as square dancing or barn dancing, Pat Bates explained.

"There are 75 basic movements in modern western square dancing and you have to know them all pretty well to participate in the dances," Mrs. Bates explained. "With barn dancing or what people usually think of as square dancing if the head couple knows what it is doing, then everyone else can follow them.

For water, fire departments

Charlevoix Township to hire employee

Plans for hiring a fulltime employee to run the fire and water departments were announced during the Charlevoix Township annual meeting Saturday.

Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud explained that the new employee would be state certified both in the operation of a water department and as a fireman.

"It's getting to be a little too much for me to supervise and look after all of the things we've got going in the township," Stroud explained. "This man will act as sort of a foreman and relieve me from some of the field work I've been doing."

The township is continuing to expand its water system and will invest another $139,534 in it this year. Stroud said the money will be used to install a waterline in the southern end of the township.

"We were going to do this last year, but we got a late start in the fall and it had to be postponed until this spring," Stroud said.

The 1977 budget allocated $88,000 for improvements to the water system which will be included in the $139,534 allocated in the 1978 budget.

The township now has two pumping stations with wells on the north and south ends of the district. The township also operates two fire halls in the same location.

In addition to expanding its water system, the township is continuing to expand its recreation facilities. Last year, the ball diamond on Waller Road was completed. This year the township plans to construct a road and parking lot area near the ball diamond. The township board has also applied for a grant for the construction of four tennis courts in the recreation complex.

The road would also allow access to 8½ acres donated to the township by Ed Shanahan for the site of a proposed new township hall. Stroud said the township hall probably wouldn't be constructed until 1979, but he wanted to start getting input on the proposal from township residents now.

Stroud said the new hall would include a meeting hall and township offices.

"We don't want to get into renting out space for parties," the supervisor said. "There's plenty of places in town that do that now. We will rent out the hall for meetings, though."

Stroud said the hall would also include a meeting place for senior citizens.

Township residents approved a budget of $219,139.22 for 1978. The budget includes $500 raises in the township officers wages. Stroud will now receive $3,500 plus $1,750 car allowance. The clerk will receive $3,000 plus $300 car allowance and the treasurer will receive $3,000.

One township resident also expressed his objection to abandoning Lake Shore Road to the state. The township board asked the Charlevoix County Road Commission to abandon the road so that the state could proceed with establishing a state park in the area last month.

Stroud explained the township board felt this was the best way to control the parties and other activities in the area so that all residents could enjoy the area. He explained that a public hearing on the issue will be held by the road commission.

Lack of interest highlights townships' annual meetings

By FRAN MARTIN

An apparent lack of interest was the common thread running through the annual township meetings held in Charlevoix County last weekend.

Proposed budgets were approved and tentative plans were made for the operations of the townships with little or no input from the voters Saturday in almost all of the townships. In St. James Township on Beaver Island, only two people participated in the annual meeting while 27 people showed up for the Eveline Township meeting.

Hayes Township

Hayes Township residents approved a $144,754 budget for the coming year during their annual township meeting. The residents decided to earmark an additional $25,000 for road construction which will be added to funds which were designated for road construction during the past year, but were never spent.

The township board suggested improving .5 mile of Burgess Road beginning at Upper Bay Shore Road and going south, and improving the south end of Pincherry Road and an alley in the community of Bay Shore.

The board explained the improvements would be costly because the township must finance the entire cost of the road construction. In the past the Charlevoix County Road Commission has underwritten a portion of the cost.

Other expenditures during the year for Hayes Township include: $21,000 for officials's salaries including the zoning administrator and the planning commission, $15,000 for fire protection, $4,000 for ambulance service, $53,154 for the township hall building fund, $2,000 elections, $7,500 for assessor and $1,500 for equipment.

Revenues for the coming year include: $25,622 from the 1 alloted mill, and $15,000 in federal and state revenue sharing funds. In addition the township has $13,900 on hand in a checking account, $64,970 in a savings account and $17,167 in a revenue sharing account.

Marion Township

Junk was the main topic of discussion at the Marion Township annual meeting. The 12 residents present encouraged the township board to enforce the township junk ordnance as a means of cleaning up various properties in the township. However, the group decided to have an annual clean-up of the township first in order to give people a chance to clean up before the ordinance is enforced. No dates were set for the clean up.

The township residents also approved a budget of $46,000. A primary expense this year will be for the construction of one mile of Pop Road, and a mile of Phelps Road between Marion Center and Lake 26 roads. The construction is expected to cost $31,000.

The residents also approved salary increases for the supervisor who will receive $3,000 salary plus an additional $2,000 for his work as assessor. The treasurer and clerk will receive $2,5000 apiece and the trustees will get $35 per diem.

Funds set aside last year will be used for improvements of the township park at Nowland Lake for a dock and additional sand on the beach.

Norwood Township

The abandonment of Lake Shore Road was discussed at the Norwood Township meeting. Township residents supported the recent action of the township board requesting the road commission to close the road because of the damage uncontrolled camping and partying is causing to the Norwood Township Park and along the roadside.

The residents also approved a $38,638 budget with $28,000 set aside for road maintenance. The township plans to blacktop Beattie and Richardson roads. The road beds have already been constructed and are ready for black topping.

Other expenses include $1,000 for an assessor, $500 for the zoning board, $100 for the cemetery, $1,400 for township hall repair and $200 for maintenance of the township park.

Eveline Township

The Eveline Township budget was set at $61,170 for the coming year including $12,000 for the development of a sewer. The township board explained it must earmark funds for the sewer construction in order to qualify for federal funds.

The township residents also decided to add $8,038 to the $17,262 it has on hand for road construction. However, no improvements will be designated until bids are received for the cost of construction.

St. James Township

In St. James township the voters approved a 1.75 mill levy to underwrite the cost of purchasing the former Coast Guard mooring which it has leased until now through an arrangement with the DNR. However, the township, which uses the building on the property as a township hall, now wants to purchase the building for $17,000. The millage will bring in enough money to pay off the debt in April 1979.

Peaine Township levied 2.0 mills for roads.

St. James Township budget is $30,097 with $3,365 coming from 1.0 mill allocated and most of the remainder from voted millage to balance the budget. Approximately $4,900 is anticipated from state revenue sharing monies and $3,879 is due from last year's federal revenue sharing.

Expenditures will include $8,242, board expenses; $2,300, supervisor plus expenses; $2,200, clerk and expenses; $2,300 treasurer; trustees, increase in per diem rate: $800; elections; $300, board of review, $1,788, township hall operation fund; $2,200 streets; $1,275 parks and $1,100 playground including the swimming beach on the harbor.

Another $6,050 is allocated including $500 for streets and roads, $300 cemetery; $2,500, Medical Center; $2,000 fire department; $750, air evac fund and $1,441 contingency fund.

Peaine Township

Peaine Township budget was set at $22,000 to be balanced by $2,000 from the 1.0 mill allocated; $16,000, four mills voted; $2,648 on hand plus $1,700 from federal revenue sharing and monies from other sources.

Also budgeted $5000 for roads from funds on hand; $11,000 for chloride for the roads; $3,000 for a contingency fund and $600 plus another $3,000 for the sanitary landfill. The latter three are joing accounts with St. James Township.

Congress changes many laws regarding consumers, products

It's the beginning of 1970, and there have been many wrap-ups of what happened in 1977.

Consumer News, the twice-a-month newsletter from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare's Office of Consumer Affairs, has put together a year-end summary of 1977 federal laws, regulations, and Supreme Court decisions that affect consumers. But each issue reports on these happenings as well as new consumer warnings, tips, and proposals. For your annual subscription to Consumer News, send $6 to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 34-016F, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The 1977 Amendments to the Federal Credit Union Act (Public Law 95-22) gave credit unions more flexibility. Among other things, they can now lend money for home mortgages for up to 30 years. And beginning in February, credit union members will be able to write drafts (something like checks) on their interest bearing accounts. These amendments will allow credit unions to be more competitive with other banking institutions.

The Fair Debt Collection Act of 1977 (Public Law 95-109) makes it a federal offense for debt collectors to threaten consumers with violence, use obscene language, or contact debtors by telephone at certain inconvenient times or places. Other provisions of the new law prohibit debt collectors from publishing "shame" lists, impersonating government officials or attorneys, obtaining information under false pretenses, and collecting more than is legally owed. Debt collectors who violate the new law will be liable for any actual damages as well as additional civil damages determined by the court up to $1,000. In the case of a class action suit, $500,000 or one percent of the company's net worth may be awarded.

The minimum wage was raised by the Fair Labor Standards Amendments of 1977 (Public Law 95-151). It jumps from $2.30 an hour to $2.65.

Full time prosecutor important to county

To have a fulltime prosecuting attorney or not to have one is the question currently before the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes' announcement that he would be resigning his position within the next few months has spurred much discussion about the operation of the office among the commissioners.

The county board is concerned that the job is not attractive and that the office should be reorganized in order to be inviting to qualified attorneys. The commissioners would like to see an attorney hold the prosecutor's position for a lengthy period of time.

During a recent commission meeting, a local attorney indicated that county attorneys would like to see the prosecutor's office filled by a parttime prosecutor who would work three days a week and a parttime assistant prosecutor who would work two days a week. This way the prosecutor's office would still be covered five days a week.

The lawyer indicated that some local attorneys might be interested in taking the position if they were allowed to maintain a limited practice in addition to handling the prosecutor's duties. The attorney pointed out that the salary paid to the fulltime prosecutor didn't compare with the salary an attorney could earn in fulltime private practice or even with a limited practice.

While the proposal sounds inviting, Charlevoix County should stick with a fulltime prosecuting attorney. The commissioners made the move more than two years ago to switch the office to a fulltime operation and it has proven to be a wise choice.

A good working relationship has developed between the various law enforcement agencies in the county and the prosecutor's office and the result has been improved police protection for county residents.

Also with the number of cases before the district and circuit courts increasing, the work load for the prosecutor has increased. In order for justice to be served during a fairly reasonable amount of time, a fulltime prosecutor is needed to handle the ever increasing number of cases and to keep the court dockets clear.

Even though the county's population is growing and the number of cases before the courts is increasing, the area is still small enough that conflicts of interest could arise. It is very possible that a person the prosecutor has assisted in private practice might some day appear before him in court.

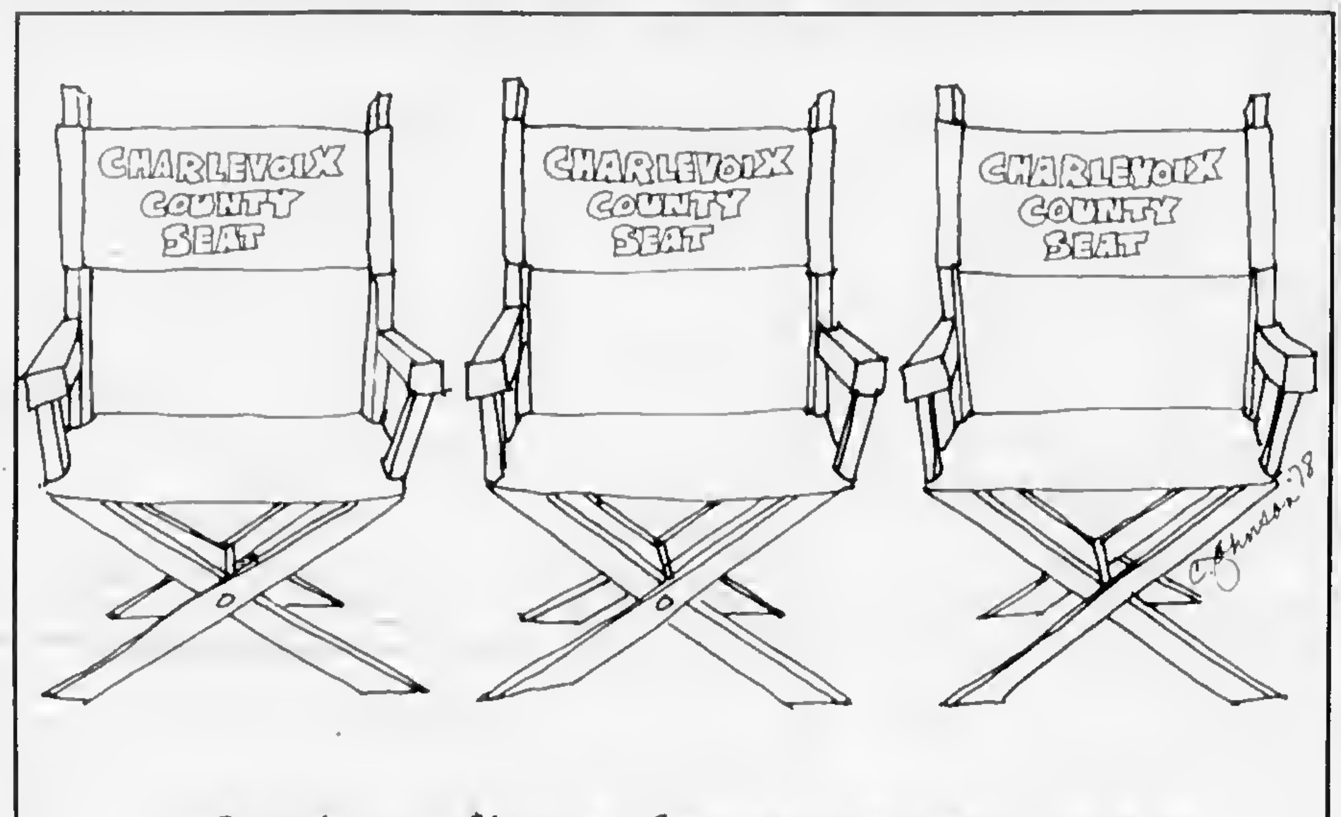
That would be a difficult position for the prosecutor, the chief law enforcement officer of the county, to find himself in.

The commissioners have also enjoyed the services of a fulltime prosecutor who has been available to render decisions at the commission meetings and advise them on various issues. A parttime prosecutor couldn't offer this service as easily.

Finally, when a person is hired on a parttime basis, he or she can only do a parttime job. His or her time and his or her loyalties are divided as well.

Charlevoix County residents deserve more than that from their prosecuting attorney.

The commissioners should stick with a fulltime prosecutor and pay him a fulltime salary. The benefits they will reap will be worth it.



Will the real Charlevoix County prosecutor, please stand up

I have insisted for years that school instrumental teachers should be numbered among the world's miracle workers.

How can you take a kid, give him a tuba, flute or a saxophone, offer him group instruction for X-number of hours a week for X-number of years and have him emerge an accomplished musician?

Yet this is a miracle that takes place dozens of times a year, right here in Charlevoix, as evidenced by the Middle High School band concert two weeks ago. Gradual differences in sound, stage presence and all-around cohesiveness were clearly evident as the Seventh Grade followed the Sixth Grade and the Eighth Grade followed the Seventh Grade.

Then, when members of the Jazz Band took their places and started to play, I felt like I was back at Northwestern High School in Detroit with "Davy Jones and his Rockers of the Deep" on the bandstand. I wanted to get up and dance, but Judy thought people would stare.

All of which is by way of proposing that the Middle School Jazz Band might be a fine vehicle to raise money for Band Boosters' projects. Why not a dance at the Middle School gymnasium, with a real live Jazz Band on the stage playing all of the oldies but goodies from the 40's and 50's? Proceeds from ticket sales could help buy band uniforms and all kinds of necessities.

Only one thing. I don't think the Jazz Band should be allowed to play "Goodnight, Ladies" as its last number, like Davy Jones used to. I might cry.

EVERY ONCE in a while a new product comes down the pike which deserves a little more attention than a line item in a grocery advertisement. A case in point are the new lunchmeats and hot dogs made of turkey meat.

Sounds pretty bad, doesn't it? That was my initial reaction, too, when Judy suggested picking up a package of turkey bologna. But we did, just for a lark.

Of course, I don't have to tell you it was the best bologna I have ever tasted – at a price that was right in there with the pork and beef products. Turkey bologna has an almost identical taste, but it is not the least bit oily.

Thoroughly satisfied, we picked up a package of turkey hot dogs the following week. Not one word to the kids, of course, until after they were eaten. They browned up nice and the kids were so impressed they wanted to know what brand they were.

When we told them they had just had a turkey dinner, they were mildly surprised. But they made us promise to buy them again.

It is nice to know that if beef and pork prices move out of sight as they are expected to do this fall, at least two old standbys like bologna and hot dogs will still be available at poultry prices. And the flavor! You can't tell the difference from the best.

Furthermore, the low-fat content would seem to make these poultry products ideal for dieters and others who should cut down on fatty foods.

There! That's my commercial pitch for the day. I won't be surprised if fresh turkey burger hoves on the market before long. And it may not be half bad.

A carry-out boy looked at my license plate the other day and said, "I don't get it. What's TZE 403 stand for?"

"It's my license plate."

"It doesn't make any sense," he said. "Is it supposed to?"

"Are you kidding? You're the only driver I know who doesn't have something clever on her plates."

I looked up and down the line of parked cars. There were: E-Z DUZ IT, 38-24-35, I.M. CUTE, SAY AAH, PAID 4, 2 CLOSE, FOXY, CALL ME, I DRINK, and FLY ME.

The kid was right. Every car on the road had a catchy little line that either identified the driver or made a statement of some kind.

That night at dinner, I just happened to mention the phenomonon to the family. "Do you realize I am driving around the only car in the country that doesn't communicate?"

"We should be able to come up with something," said my husband. "How many letters do we have to work with?"

"Six"

"Great," said my son. "That's just enough for BEWARE."

"How about Y 55?"

"Or GAS HOG."

"You might as well be tasteless and have, "SIX THOU."

"Aw c'mon," I said, "I want a plate that won't have people passing me at 75 just to see what kind of a nut is behind the wheel. I was thinking more of a plate that would give me character ... a self-description that would be unique and apply only to me."

"How many letters in DRUDGE?" asked my daughter.

"I got it," I said snapping my fingers. "How about BUSY B?"

"That sounds like someone who would name their cabin Do Drop Inn, or their camper, The Open Road."

"Those are cute too."

"You don't need cute plates, Mom, you need a public testimonial. Like Mark. On the back of his car, his license plates read STUD, and Tab has a plate that reads TOUGH."

I must have sat there for another two hours trying to get a six-letter combination. Finally, I said, "I've got it down to VIT. B-12. What do you think?"

"I think you have just solved the problem of your kids ever borrowing your car," said my husband.

...Speaking Her Mind

Spring is here. That's a brave proclamation to make, I know, but I can say it without any doubt.

I enjoy spring more than any other time of the year. The bright rays of the sun combined with spring flowers blooming in a rainbow of colors and those first breezes with a tinge of warmth in them are invigorating and generally fill me with joy.

I think the best way to express how I feel is to point to the Snoopy sweatshirts and T-shirts that show the famous dog of "Peanuts" comic strip fame dancing with outstretched arms and his head flung back without a care in the world.

I learned to love spring as I grew up near that famous agricultural college, Michigan State University. The campus is planted with every conceivable flower and it comes alive with blossoms and sweet scents during a six-week period called spring.

But flowers, warm breezes and sunshine aren't necessarily indicators of spring everywhere in the state. I learned this the hard way in Northern Michigan. In fact, the first few springs I spent here, I missed because I blinked. It seems that spring can last anywhere from a few hours to several weeks up here, it just depends, but nobody seems to know on what.

It took me a while to catch on to what the signs of spring are up here, but I've discovered them and that's how I can confidently say that spring is here.

The first thing you notice is the orneriness that seems to affect everyone in town. No matter how hard people try to be pleasant, something causes them to make sharp remarks.

Next the attitude changes into the blahs. This is often referred to as the winter doldrums or cabin fever. With each change in temperament you move a step closer to spring.

Then all of a sudden it's spring. You can tell by the smiles that are appearing on people's faces, the bounce in their steps and a generally positive attitude.

What happens to create this change of heart? Well it has something to do with Easter, vacations and the south.

Around Easter there seems to be a mass exodus of Charlevoix residents to the southern climes. I've heard estimates that between one-third to one-half of the people pack up and head south.

You know it's bad when you hear people talking in the coffee shops about their reservations for a spot on I-75, or when every car you see go by is packed to the hilt with luggage, beach balls and sometimes even kids.

The town seems to shut down, too, for one last week of winter hibernation. Then after an absence of a week or two, the flock returns. Sun tans abound and light weight spring clothes are the fashion.

Suddenly the weather breaks, the last piece of ice disappears in Lake Michigan and spring is here.

See for yourself.

Who'll save the horses?

A bunch of the boys were talking about horse racing and none of them would believe I could live over 50 years without once visiting a racetrack or betting on a horse.

They also wouldn't believe I was serious when I said the Captain and Tennille should refuse to perform in the United States. Why should Japan get all the breaks?

The Captain and Tennille recently canceled a concert tour scheduled for Japan. They said they wouldn't sing there until Japanese fishermen quit killing dolphins. The loss of the Captain and Tennille is probably not the worst thing to happen to Japan since the debut of the atom bomb.

Helen Reddy and Olivia Newton John also canceled Japanese concerts for the same reason. Japanese fishermen slaughter the dolphins because the dolphins eat the fish which the fishermen must catch to make a living. A lot of people, not all in show business, think this is unfair to the dolphins.

Would these concerned entertainers sing in Japan if the dolphins were captured, instead of killed, and then harnessed and run through icy mud until they bled, with some silk-clad human sitting on their banks and whipping their flanks?

A stupid question? That's what the boys in the bunch said. They said only an idiot would compare dolphins with racehorses. But they conceded that I'm their favorite idiot, and they said I could hang around as long as I bought a round every time it was my turn. As always, idiots with loose cash get more attention than idiots with empty pockets.

For instance, if the Captain and Tennille hadn't made millions of bucks performing in the United States, no one would listen to the dumb things they say about the treatment of dolphins in Japan.

Anyway, the subject of conversation was horse racing because of the public accusations made by Debbie Hicks. Most people in the Detroit area have been talking about Debbie lately. The boys in the bunch agreed she was right when she told a radio audience that horse bettors are often cheated by crooked jockeys, crooked trainers, or crooked owners of horses.

In case you don't pay attention to those things, Debbie Hicks used to exercise horses at a racetrack where she was held in high regard. In fact, she reminds me of a joke from my childhood: "She was very popular at the stables. All the horse manure."

Debbie had access to all the horse manure, so her allegations carry weight. When it comes to rigged races, the question obviously isn't if, it's how. Should the trainer dope the horse? Should the jockey goose the horse with an electric prod? Or should the jockey simply yank hard on the bit in the horse's mouth, forcing it to lose to another horse?

The boys in the bunch laughed when I suggested that all three methods sounded like cruelty to animals to me, not cruelty to bettors. They were incredulous when I said I wan't convinced that horses like anything at all about horse racing, so for that reason I wouldn't enjoy a horse race much more than a cockfight.

What kind of weirdo is this guy?

Further, the bunched boys were stung when I insisted they had no reason to expect the state to protect bettors against dishonesty at the track.

After all, state officials stood around with their thumbs up their noses for years while poisoned cows poisoned people, and while paid attendants beat on retarded patients. If a state will allow its citizens to be cheated out of good health and decent care, a state isn't going to get too excited about citizens being cheated out of a few bucks betting the trifecta at Hazel Park.

The boys in the bunch didn't argue when I knocked the state for cruelty to people. But they began to grumble again when I returned to cruelty to animals.

I said if Tennille refuses to perform wherever animals are abused, her singing will be confined to her shower, with the Captain on the toilet.

And killing dolphins or eating fish that people could eat makes more sense than whipping horses so people can lose money betting on them.

At this point in the conversation, the boys in the bunch voted unanimously to ignore me forevermore. Sadly, they're a big bunch.

Letters to the editor

Urges speedy settlement with police

To the Editor:

Community spirit ... Better city government ... Better community

In the March 22 edition of the Courier, it was mentioned in an article that the City officials were to meet with representatives of the Teamsters Union to iron out all issues in the contract for the Charlevoix City Police and Fire Departments, other than wages. It also mentioned that the City and the Teamsters Union have been negotiating this contract for more than a year without coming to an agreement. This is true, but how can a contract be settled when the City officials completely ignore the fact that one even exists, and have sat on their collective hands for over a year as far as the contract is concerned? In the meantime, City Hall employees have received their raises, while the Fire and Police Departments have gone without.

At this recent meeting, everything could have been settled amicably, but when the very issues they were there to discuss were brought up, our city officials and city attorney passed the buck again. As a result, nothing was settled. As I understand, one of the duties of our city attorney is to act as an advisor for the city officials. If he had the best interests of the City at heart, he obviously would urge our city officials to get this matter settled now, before it goes into arbitration, which as I pointed out in a recent letter to the Editor, would be costly to the City. If our city attorney is paid on hourly rate for special meetings, as is usually the case, he wouldn't mind his contract going into arbitration at all, would he?

There was an interesting editorial in the same issue of the Courier pertaining to community spirit, and how much better off our City would be if we all had more of it. I thoroughly agree with that article and fervently hope that all of us, including our city officials, acquire a lot more of it in the near future. Perhaps then there wouldn't be as much dissention between those who govern our City and the community itself, as exists now. A community that works together, thrives together.

Need legislation to ease taxes

To The Editor:

The slow pace of legislative action in reforming the abuses of the property tax leaves Michigan property owners unprotected and subject to discrimination.

Property owners can't wait for protection. They need it now!

Our Senators or Representatives can help by voting to maintain State Equalized Valuations at the 1977 level for a three year period or until property tax reform has been approved. During this time, growth in total valuation would be provided by adding new construction at the 1977 basis.

Under the present system of balancing the state budget by increasing local property valuations for property which is not being sold based on sales studies of the small percentage of property which has been sold is reprehensible, improper, and confiscatory.

The mental anguish and harassment of the property taxpayer, whether homeowner, farmer, or businessman, under the present system undermines our democracy and encourages the feeling that those in government office could care less and only want the taxpayer's money.

This problem rests squarely with the legislature and the governor.

The cold climate created in Michigan by unmitigated increases in property assessments is affecting farming and commerce as it has affected industry.

It appears that some of our elected officials seek to avoid facing the problem and meeting their responsibilities by wanting to wait for a Constitutional Amendment. Without a freeze in 1977 valuations, there could be two or more years of increasing valuations and thus increased taxes facing the property owners of Michigan.

Our elected officials – senators, representatives and governor – have the power to protect the property owners without an amendment to the constitution. Also, legislation can be changed where needed, while a constitutional amendment could lock in something which could prove to be highly undesirable. (A case in point is the Single Business Tax – what a mess if this had been put in the constitution.)

Michigan Citizens for Reasonable Taxation urges elected officials to act on this proposal for a freeze on the state equalized valuation of property at the 1977 level as the only practical plan that could be accomplished now to give relief from the planned valuation increases in 1978.

A three year freeze gives the legislators and governor time beyond an election year to work on the problem and to thoughtfully solve it. The freeze takes nothing away from present levies. In fact, growth in the total State Equalized Valuation would take place with new construction being added on the basis of 1977 assessment levels.

It is simple to understand, and with legislative action, can be easy to implement.

The freeze would be the first step in property tax reform.

During the freeze the legislature and governor must come up in as short time as possible – the quicker, the better – with tax legislation that is fair and reasonable to all.

If, within the three years, our elected officials, do not come up with acceptable tax reform, we, the people, will do the legislating by constitutional amendment.

The legislator's cooperation in securing legislative action to maintain 1977 valuations will be appreciated by Michigan Citizens for Reasonable Taxation and all of Michigan's property owners.

The legislators and governor must act now!

Sincerely,
Carlton Kissner, President

Reasonable Taxation

Congratulates sheriff on first year in office

To the Editor:

We are writing this as an open letter to the newspaper in regards to our Sheriff of Charlevoix County, George T. Lasater.

First and foremost, we would like to say "thank you" and congratulate you on your first successful year as our sheriff.

Thanks to you and officer Cousineau's cooperation and dedication, we now have a working and productive substation in Boyne Falls. You said you would do it and you did it! If there is a complaint, county wide, thanks to the substation, it's good to know when we need someone, help is there.

We too, like many others cannot understand why there has been no funds for a female officer in the Sheriff's office. We appreciate the Sheriffs concern in this area. Hang in there George!

We also appreciate his professionalizing the Sheriff's Department and the cooperation that has gone into all three city offices, Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan. We are now very proud of our Sheriffs Department and appreciate the media keeping us informed about your interests for the public.

We realize that you, as the sheriff, have had a few communication problems with the county Board of Commissioners, one in particular, but sooner or later even he has got to see the light or take his marbles and go home.

We have only covered a small portion of our gratitude for this past year and we pray that your dreams and goals for the Sheriff's Department will come to pass for this coming year.

Thanks again for being our Sheriff.

Sincerely,
Les and Faye Crain

Seek tests

To the Editor:

Please alert your readers to the importance of asking their national Congressmen (Phil Ruppe, House Office Building, Washington, D.C.) for a free medical examination if they were in anyway involved in the nuclear bomb tests of the late 1940's and 1950's.

Hearings are being held in Washington that are uncovering a high rate of leukemias and other illnesses among those that took part in these tests. There is also the possibility of genetic defects in their children that should be checked for.

Please withhold my name.

Meet Charlevoix

...Frank Potter

Summer is just oround the corner and so is auction season.

This week the Charlevoix Courier talked with Charlevoix auctioneer Frank Potter about what it takes ta run an auction and what auction visitors moy find there.

COURIER: How long have you been an auctioneer?

POTTER: I've been in the business for four or five years.

COURIER: How did you happen to become an auctioneer?

POTTER: I became an auctioneer because somebody told me I couldn't do it. I have a bad habit that when somebody says I can't do something then I go off and do it. But it fits in very well with my business (real estate), too. You contact more people in an afternoon than you would in a whole year on the phone.

COURIER: How did you learn to be an auctioneer?

POTTER: I went to school in Indiana. They offer a two week course in auctioneering, and it's full almost every time they offer it.

COURIER: What did they teach you?

POTTER: They teach you how to control your voice and they put you up in front of people right away so that you get over your shyness and you're used to working with crowds. I had been to plenty of auctions before I went down to the school, sa I was familiar with it, I had just never held one befure.

COURIER: Was it hard to learn to eall an auction?

POTTER: It comes pretty easily, it just takes practice. What I da is I record myself ond then play it back. The tapes show me where I've made mistakes and then I can work on those things.

COURIER: Do auctianeers use their voices in any special way when they're calling an auction?

POTTER: When you talk normally, you use your throot. An auctioneer uses his stomach, it's the same way with a singer, too. The more you use your voice the stronger it gets.

COURIER: Does everyone have to attend school before they can be an auctioneer?

POTTER: No. In the State of Michigan you don't have to be licensed to be an auctioneer and you don't need any training. Some people can just pick it up, too, so they don't need to go to school. I have a son coming up who's just picking it up from me. He hasn't had any other training.

COURIER: Are you glad you became an auctioneer?

POTTER: Oh, yeah. I grew up on a farm seven miles south of Charlevoix and I really was a bashful kid. For me to get up in front af people and run an ouction is a little bit different, but I've just had a ball with in and I don't mind being in front of people a bit.

COURIER: What was your first auction?

POTTER: It was in East Jordon and it was far household goods. It went pretty well. My sister wouldn't come to my first ouction, though, because she thought I couldn't da it.

COURIER: How do you run an auction?

POTTER: I always try and start an item at what it is worth or a little better. Usually the first bids aren't that high, but you can work your way up to that price. I do some funny things up there, too. You've got to get the people relaxed. The sooner you get them relaxed and you get control of the crowd, the sooner they'll start to buy. But people won't buy if they aren't relaxed.

COURIER: How do you get the crowd relaxed?

POTTER: I joke with them. I do things like bid something up to $20 and then start back down again. Also there are usually a few people in the crowd you can kid around with and that helps everyane else.

COURIER: What type af auction do you prefer?

POTTER: I like ta sell farm machinery, antiques, land, household goods, I guess I like them all. I especially like farm stuff because I farm a little and I grew up on a farm, but I like antiques, tou.

COURIER: How da you keep up on the prices of all the various things?

POTTER: I have some books that I study and I just try to keep up with the market prices on the different things.

COURIER: How many auctions do yuu do a week?

POTTER: Well I run an auction barn on the Barnard Road that has auctions every other week year 'round. During the summer I probably do about three other auctions a week.

COURIER: What is it that attracts people to auctions?

POTTER: They think they might get something for nothing. And sometimes they do and sometimes they don't. It's a gamble. Also for many people it's a type of recreation and relaxation. I have one old guy who comes to every sale and he calls it his therapy class.

COURIER: What items sell best at an auction?

POTTER: It all depends. People collect different things. Some have milk bottle collections and others have fruit jar collections and others may collect old wrenches. People are looking to buy almost anything. If some people knew what valuoble things they hnd in their attic they'd probably faint. A lot of stuff people think is junk is really valuable, they just don't know what they've got.

COURIER: Have you ever found anything really voluoble ot an ouction?

POTTER: One time my son bought a bunch of old books ot an auction and he found a letter from President Garfield inside one of the books. We're pretty sure that the signature is authentic.

COURIER: How's your family feel about you being in the auction business?

POTTER: Oh it's a sort of family affair. When I do auctions my wife acts as the cashier und my son as the clerk. We all like doing it.

Special "life line" set up to assist Charlevoix senior citizens

A new program to assist senior citizens and handicapped people has been instituted by the Charlevoix Commission on Aging in cooperation with the Charlevoix City Police Department and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The program, "Telephone Life Line" is designed to provide a daily check on senior citizens and handicapped people in their homes.

Louise Pop, of the commission on aging, said the idea for the program came up during a discussion at one of the senior citizen nutrition program lunches.

"We talked about it there and thought it would be a good idea," Mrs. Pop said. "Then we went up and talked with the sheriff and that's how the program got started."

In addition to the discussion at about the same time, there were two senior citizens in the area who became ill and were left unattended for several days. If the life line program had been in action, they would have been helped right away.

One county resident had a stroke and was not found for three days and another fell in his home, could not reach a phone and was not found for two days.

Under the program, three commission on oging volunteers in the Charlevoix area make daily telephone calls to the senior citizens or handicapped people who have requested the check.

If there is no answer and the volunteer feels there is reason for concern, he or she will call either the sheriff's department or the city police and an officer will be sent to check on the person.

If a senior citizen or a handicapped person would like to join the program, he or she should call the commission on aging office ot 547-6282 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

If the life line program is successful in the Charlevoix area, it will be expanded to cover the entire county.

Food service certification course offered at Boyne Mountain in May

A special management certification course for food service management personnel will be offered in this area in May.

The Division of Food Service Sanitation of the Michigan Department of Public Health will conduct the three-part course from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. May 3 and 17 and from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. May 31 at Boyne Mountain.

Certification in food service management is an assurance that a food service operator is knowledgeable in the basics of food service sanitation, and follows approved sanitation standords. The program utilizes the National Institute for the Food Service Industries textbook and final exam and the certificate for the course is issued by the institute. The food service sanitation division will also issue a state certificate upon successful completion of the course.

The total cost of the course is $75. The registration fee includes luncheon, books and related materials.

Interested people should contact Larry Levengood or Gordon Block, Charlevoix County Health Department sanitarians, at 547-6523 or Bert Notestine at 347-6014 for more information.

Sheriff's auxiliary begins operation

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department auxiliary is now in full operation, extending its services to county residents.

The 10 members of the newly formed sheriff's department recently completed 128 hours of training and are now full fledged auxiliary members.

The men are: Mark Emmons, a Charlevoix college student studying law enforcement; Greg Grubaugh, also a Charlevoix college student studying law enforcement; Richard Mitchell, of Charlevoix, Medusa employee; Ronald Moore, Charlevoix, school psychologist for the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District; Herman Sizemore, Charlevoix businessman; Jeff Alexander, college law enforcement graduate working at Boyne Mountain; Harley Burris, of Boyne City, retired Department of Natural Resources officer; Randy Janack, Boyne City college student studying law enforcement; Henry Lentx, Boyne City school teacher; and John Murray, af Norwood, printing shop employee.

Ronald Moore will head the group as the auxiliary commander and Herman Sizemore will assist him in operating and organizing the group.

Moving into full fledged operation is both exciting and serious business, Assistant Commander Sizemore said.

"Oh, I'm excited about it," Sizemore said of the auxiliary. "But it's a serious thing, too. There's a lot involved in assisting the deputies."

The auxiliary members were trained in 43 different sheriff's department procedures including jail security, arrest and frisking procedure and traffic accident procedures. The auxiliary officers were also trained to handle the paperwork connected with the various procedures and in communications.

"As auxiliary members we will work eight hours a week, days or nights," Sizemore continued. "We work out the schedule so that it doesn't interfere with our regular jobs and yet is coordinated with the deputies' schedules.

"Our basic duty is to assist the officers. We will be dressed in full uniform, although we won't be armed."

Sizemore said becoming an auxiliary member has changed his attitude about the sheriff's department and its operations.

"I've definitely learned a lot about the law and I'm much more supportive of the sheriff's department than I have ever been before," the auxiliary member said candidly.

"I never realized how much work was involved or what the deputies did. You know a lot of people think the guys just go out and ride around all night and look for somebody to give a ticket to, but that's not true ot all."

The auxiliary officer said it was also interesting to be involved as law enforcement officer.

"I've lost a couple of friends over it," he confided. "They don't want to be associated with a "pig" you know. But I figure if that bothers them, they weren't such good friends anyway.

"And it's strange for me to be on this side of the fence, too. I've always been on the other side of the fence, I guess."

Sizemore said he got interested in the auxiliary when Under Sheriff Byron Stockwell asked him if he would like to become a member.

"I thought about it and then I decided maybe I should get involved," Sizemore explained. "I figured I had enough free time that I could donate a little time to the residents of the county.

"I feel I'm doing what I want to do und I'm trying to help the residents of the county, too."

Sheriff George Lasater said the auxiliary members were selected from 46 applicants from throughout the county and have been in training since before Christmas. They had six weeks of classroom instruction and the rest was on the job experience.

The sheriff said the auxiliary members primary duties will be to assist certified officers on routine patrol, assist with communications and with traffic control at rock festivals and parades and with transporting prisoners.

Five county students named to honors list

Five Charlevoix County students were named to the Central Michigan University winter semester honors list recently.

John Greene, Joe Kaufman and Susan Westenbroek of Charlevoix all earned a 3.5 grade average or better. From East Jordan, Debra Peters was named to the list while Kim Poineau represented Boyne City on the honors list.

A total of 1,014 students were named to the honors list with 90 students receiving straight A's.

Diabetes--a hidden killer

Startling as it may seem, diabetes is the nation's fifth leading cause of death by disease. All the more reason for you to know about diabetes and the symptoms to watch for.

To help you better understand the disease, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a new booklet, How to Cope with Diabetes. For your copy, send 90 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 089F, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

When a person has diabetes, the body is unable to convert certain foods into the heat and energy necessary for normal activity.

There are two main forms of diabetes. Although one is commonly called juvenile type, or brittle diabetes, it can start at any age, and is the more serious of the two types. It requires taking the hormone insulin daily.

Adult diabetes, most often appearing in middle age, usually can be controlled by weight watching on a special diet. For the most part, diabetics can eat specified amounts of the same food the rest of the family eats, but cutting down on sugar, and sugar-rich foods such as pastry, soft drinks and other sweets. Your doctor is the best one to decide on a proper diet.

Women are generally more susceptible to diabetes than men. The disease tends to occur most frequently in certain "high risk" groups – close relatives of individuals who have diabetes, people who are overweight, or over forty, or women who have given birth to infants weighing over 10 pounds.

Watch for the following symptoms of diabetes. If you notice one or more tell your physician right away. The symptoms are:

+rapid loss of weight with increased appetite and food intake;

+general weakness, drowsiness and fatigue;

+excessive urination;

+visual disturbances, such as blurring; and

+skin disorders such as boils, infections, and intense itching.

Some diabetics, especially those with mildes adult form, moy not have any of these symptoms. Or, the symptoms may be vague and go unrecognized. The only way to detect this so-called hidden diabetes is to have a regular checkup ot your doctor's office or the local health department.

When you order a copy of How to Cope with Diabetes (90 cents), you'll also receive a copy of the free Consumer Information Catalog. It lists more than 200 selected free or low-cost publications from the federal government. The Catalog is published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administration.

State historical society offers business guidebook

A guidebook listing century-old businesses throughout Michigan has just been published by the Historical Society of Michigan.

The publication, "Century of Achievement: A Guide to Michigan's Centennial Businesses," the publication is an outgrowth of the Michigan Centennial Business Program. It lists 239 firms, 25 in the Upper Peninsula and 214 in the Lower Peninsula.

The program was launched as a Bicentennial project in 1976 with a contest to find the oldest business in Michigan. The response from local historians and the business community was so overwhelming that the program became a permanent, ongoing feature of the Society. Centennial businesses receive engraved certificates officially designating them as Michigan centennial businesses.

Copies of the guide may be purchased for $2 plus a 4 percent sales tax from the Historical Society of Michigan, 2117 Washtenaw Ave., Ann Arbor, Mich. 48104.

Dr. Tai-Hee Kang will serve as director of the hospital's radiology department. Dr. Kang comes to Charlevoix Hospital from Hutzel Hospital in Detroit, where he has been a member of the radiology department since 1974.

Born in Seoul, Korea, Dr. Kang received his education and medical training in both Korea and the United States. He studied for his B.S. Degree at Catholic Pre-Medical College in Seoul and was awarded his M.D. at Catholic Medical College, Seoul, in 1963.

He interned at McNeal Memorial Hospital, Berwyn, Illinois, and served his residency at Wayne State University School of Medicine from 1969 to 1972. Following his Residency he was granted a two-year Fellowhip in Radiology at Temple University Hospital in Philidelphia, Pa.

Dr. Kang is a member of the Wayne County Medical Society, the Michigan Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the Michigan Radiological Association, the American College of Radiologists, and the American Institute of Ultrasound, and is Certified by the American Board of Radiology. He holds licenses to practice medicine in both Pennsylvania and Michigan.

Dr. Kang and his family are in the process of moving to Charlevoix. They have two children, Susan, 6, and Steve, age 1.

During a recent interview, Dr. and Mrs. Kang said they were looking forward to moving to northern Michigan and anticipate becoming acquainted with winter sports activities next season.

They explained that while it snows in Korea, winters there are much shorter than in northern Michigan.

Dr. Kang is a sports enthusiast, having played baseball, volleyball and soccer.

Mrs. Kang, who enjoys arts and crafts, said she works with macrame and pottery. She is also skilled in the art of flower arranging.

DR. TAI-HEE Kang and his wife are moving to Charlevoix where Dr. Kang will become the head of the radiology department at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The couple will bring their two children, Susan and Steve with them.

Carolyn Borg enters Air Force program

Caroline Margaret Borg of East Jordan, Box 250, Ranney Rd., has entered the United States Air Force's Delayed Enlistment Program (DEP).

According to Sergeant Ryan K. Renz, the Air Force recruiter here, Ms. Borg's entry into the DEP serves two purposes. First, it allows the Air Force to schedule an opening for her to attend basic training and be assigned to a job or skill area. Second, the DEP enables Ms. Borg to wrap up her personal affairs before leaving home.

Ms. Borg will enter the Regular Air Force on April 21st. Following graduation from the six-week basic training course at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, she will receive technical training as an Automatic Flight Control Systems Specialist and be assigned to an Air Force duty station.

Cancer Society planning 1978 Crusade, country concert

It's April and that means it's national Cancer Month.

The Charlevoix County chapter of the American Cancer Society is starting the month off with a planning session at 7:30 p.m. today at the Grey Gables, Patty Muma, the Cancer Crusade chairman, has announced.

Members of the cancer society board of directors and the captains for the door-to-door fund drive will meet to discuss strategy and to line up volunteers for the campaign.

"The cancer society's 1978 goal is $15,000," Mrs. Muma said. "It's going to take a lot of work and a lot of volunteers to reach that goal."

The Crusade will officially kick off its campaign with a coffee from 1 to 3 p.m. April 19 at the Jordan Inn in East Jordan. Volunteers will be marching from door-to-door until May 19 seeking contributions for the cancer society.

Many special events are also being planned for the month including a "Country Concert Against Cancer" which will be held at 8 p.m. May 12 at the Charlevoix High School. The concert will feature Gary Shope and Interstate Country direct from the Grand Ole Opry. A local band Wes McCoy and North Country will also perform at the concert.

In addition, the American Legion and VFW auxiliaries will hold a salad and casserole luncheon from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. May 3 at the American Legion Hall and a drawing for a color television set will be held at 7 p.m. May 26 at the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

Tickets for all events will be available at businesses throughout Charlevoix County. People who would like more information about the events or who would like to volunteer to help the Cancer Crusade should contact Patty Muma at 547-9335.

New residents trying to set up Welcome Wagon club

New in Charlevoix? Interested in learning more about the community and meeting other people new to the area?

Several area newcomers are banding together to form a Welcome Wagon Club in the Charlevoix area, according to Phyllis Hess, steering committee chairman.

"There seems to be a need in the community for an organization that will help newcomers get acquainted," Mrs. Hess, who moved here from Marquette nine months ago, explained. "I see this club as a way for new people to find out what Charlevoix has to offer and what they can offer Charlevoix.

"I also see it as a service club doing things for the community."

The club will only be a temporary thing, a stepping off point to other organizations in the community, Marilyn Izor, another organizer explained.

"You don't stay in the club forever, we just felt it was one way for new people in the community to get acquainted," Mrs. Izor said. "The club is for men and women, young couples and retired couples."

The group will hold its first meeting 7:30 p.m. April 11 in the Community Room of the First State Bank. Bob Miles, guest speaker, will discuss the history of Charlevoix. Mrs. Hess said the group hopes to meet twice a month, holding a membership coffee once a month and a day or evening meeting with a program once a month.

"Eventually we would like to organize interest groups such as a card group, bowling team or a crafts group," she said.

The steering committee chairman said the group would not be open to just newcomers and she encouraged all interested people to attend the upcoming meeting.

For more information contact Mrs. Hess at 547-4015 and Mrs. Izor at 547-6733.

Other newcomers working to organize the club are Judy LaFave, Kathy Liotta and Sue Bush.

Through Womens Resource Center

Charlevoix women share talents with others

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

As the four-county Women's Resource Center has grown so has the involvement of Charlevoix women.

About a year ago some 60 women from Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan and Otsego counties held the first general meeting of the Women's Resource Center, which serves all four counties.

That meeting, at the organization's offices at North Central Michigan College in Petoskey, was to discuss the direction the organization would grow and to probe the needs, ideas and talents of area women.

Today the group's membership is over 200 and growing. Women from all walks of life are encouraged to join or call on the center's services, according to its Director, Nancy Stewart, of Petoskey.

Pat Ranger, a Charlevoix member of the Women Resource Centers eight-person Board of Directors, says she particularly hopes more Charlevoix women become involved or call on the center in times of need.

Numerous Charlevoix women are volunteering time or taking advantage of the center's activities.

S. Marci Brown, of Charlevoix, and Ms. Stewart have initiated the first organized activity of the center to take place in Charlevoix.

Beginning on April 11, Ms. Brown will instruct Exercise Classes for Pregnant Women, at the Body Work Studio upstairs in the Market Mall. The exercise classes will be immediately followed by a "support group meeting for pregnant women" – a loosely structured rap session, where the participants can share their experiences, anxieties, joys and help each other learn to cope more effectively with the changes taking place in their bodies and lives, the two women told the Courier.

"Support groups" are one of the major activities of the women's center, whose function Ms. Brown explains:

"Recognizing that life presents similar problems to all people," is one aspect she says.

"When you realize you are not alone, that you are not the only person, you can learn the way others cope, you can share ideas. That's what's behind the support group," Ms. Brown concludes.

The exercise classes will combine the Anne Rudolph technique of body work, Ms. Brown continues, "with its emphasis on slow, controlled movement" and Yoga and Lamaze exercises. Ms. Brown has been a student of these three techniques for several years.

The "support group," will be conducted by Ms. Stewart who has been trained in group leadership techniques.

Support groups that the women's center sponsors come under a variety of titles –personal growth groups, assertiveness training, communicating and listening skills classes.

Groups have had general purposes such as the "assertiveness training," which despite its title does not urge women to be aggressive, Ms. Stewart explains but tries to help people learn to stand up for their own rights, without hurting other people.

"Our direction is not aggression but trying to help people be aware of when they can assert themselves or when they can elect not to be assertive," the center's director emphasized.

All the support group session are led by individuals trained, either at the women's center or in other settings, in techniques of group dynamics. A nominal fee is charged for the sessions.

Many support groups have been directed at specific purposes, such as workshops for divorced and separated women, dealing with the special emotional and concrete problems attendant to their lives.

Developing a "Community Referral Service" was a priority established at the first meeting a year ago.

Marlene DeVere of Charlevoix and some six other Charlevoix women are in the process of collecting data on all service agencies in the county. The information will detail what each agency can do, whom to contact, and what to expect in terms of service.

The information from Charlevoix County will be filed along with information collected from the other three counties the center serves.

"The community referral service is a very positive service the center is performing for the community," observes Sue Bolt, one of the volunteers.

Each volunteer meets with key people in the social service organizations - from the Health Department to Big Brothers and Big Sisters, for example - carefully recording the details of each organization's particular service.

Ms. Stewart explains that the information on file could be helpful to a new person in the area who's job hunting or a person in the midst of a personal crisis. Anyone who needs any sort of assistance is encouraged to call the center, Ms. Stewart says, adding that although the center is called a "women's center", men too may call upon its services.

To illustrate how the "community referral service" files can provide specific information on where to turn and what kind of help is available Ms. Stewart told of a recent case of a retarded adult who asked for help finding a tutor to teach literacy. The center was able to match the individual with a tutor within days.

Another women, recently striken with multiple sclerosis, faced loss of income as the progress of her illness made it impossible for her to continue knitting. The Womens Center was asked to help. They found a knitting machine and a teacher for her, as well as funds under Vocational Rehabilitation to cover the costs of her retraining.

Lucille McKown of Boyne City, volunteers a half day a week to the center, as do many others, answering the phones, helping match people in need with agencies, individuals other sources of help.

After a year of existing solely on the hard work of volunteers, CETA funds have been granted the center, through Emmet County. Ms. Stewart was hired under the grant and two more positions –Office Manager and Child Care Project Coordinator – will soon be advertised.

Pat Ranger talked about the future of the center from her perspective on the board of directors.

"It is a grass routs movement and should not be necessarily identified with ERA (Equal Rights Amendment). The center should

It has approprtoted $100 each to the Battle Creek VA Hospital and the Grand Rapids Veterans' Facility and $25 each to the Charlevoix County Humane Society and the Legion Villa at Battle Creek. APRIL SHOWERS PRECIPITATE SOME GOOD LESSONS

When the rains come along, it's a curious thing
What a watered-down version of problems they bring!
As a cynical mankind forever complains,
On the day of the weatherman's picnic, it rains.
By a ruling in baseball of dubious fame,
A completed five innings can make it a game.
If your team is behind, then the rain brings a frown;
While if they are ahead, then the SKY can come down!
But in Church you can see how your life has been blessed
By those showers, a minor annoyance at best.
So the message for you that this lesson contains
Is to thank the good Lord for providing the rains!

Gloria Nowak

It hain't no use to grumble and complain,
It's just as easy to rejoice:
When God sorts out the weather and sends rain,
Why rain's my choice.

reflect the needs of the local community."

Thus Ms. Ranger sees infinite directions in which the womens center can develop, as the membership and women of the four counties make their needs felt.

She pointed out that a satellite center was opened recently in Gaylord where one of the motivations has been the problem of battered wives.

Ms. Ranger and others expressed the hope that more Charlevoix women would become involved in the center and perhaps develop a Charlevoix satellite designed to meet the needs of Charlevoix women, and to eliminate commute to Petoskey for meetings.

Ms. Brown's exercise classes and support group for pregnant women is a step toward expanding Charlevoix involvement.

Women who wish more information may call the center at 347-3973 extension 365.

David Palmer celebrates 81st with Topside friends

"I was 15 when the Titanic went down," the old timer recalled. "And I saw the battleship Hood in 1926. I've seen a lot of things in my life."

David Palmer spent a lot of time reminiscing last weekend. He turned 81 years od Sunday and has many yeors of life to look back on.

Palmer, who has been a Charlevaix resident since 1973, is well known ta patrons of the Topside Lounge, one of his favorite watering holes. So, it was only fitting that the Bridge Street bar should be the scene of his 81st surprise birthday party.

"When they picked me up, they told me we were going to visit a friend's house," Palmer said explaining how the surprise was set up. "Then we stopped here (Topside) and they told me to come in for a second while they picked some thinga up.

"When I got in here, it was full of people and decorated for my birthday," he said pointing to walls full of crepe paper streamers and balloans. "There must have been 50 people here."

"All the regulars were here," she explained. "They all know Dave and they thought it would be fun ta surprise him ai his birthday.

"He doesn't have any family and we've all sort of adopted him."

Palmer was born in Chicago, Ill., in 1897. He spent most of his life there working for the Burlington and Northern Pacific railroads as a switchman and a brakeman.

"I've traveled all the woy from Alaska to Texas," he said proudly.

In 1970, Palmer moved to Petoskey with his wife and then in 1973 the couple settled in Charlevoix. His wife died later that year and since then, Palmer has spent much of his time meeting new people in town and visiting the Topside.

"I help them out and make sure they do their work," he explained.

DAVID PALMER celebrates his 81st birthday during a surprise party at the Topside Laungo Sunday. More than 50 peoplo jained in the festivities.

The Library Committee of the Charlevoix Board of Education, which is responsible for the library's operation, has set some goals for improving and expanding the library and its services.

The committee asked a librarian from the state library system to come in and evaluate the Charlevoix facility and ta make some suggestions far improvements.

The librarian spent a day at the Charlevoix library and will soon submit a report with recommendations for the future operation of the library, expansion of the facilities personnel.

City has new charter -- what's the next step?

It will take Charlevoix approximately two years to complete the transition from a Fourth Class City to a Home Rule City.

And during that time many things must be accomplished, according to John Michael, Charlevoix Charter Commission member.

Charlevoix voters approved a new charter changing the form of city government during the general election April 3. The vote ended 73 years of government under the Fourth Class Cities Act and brought the council-city manager form of government to Charlevoix for the first time.

Two earlier drafts of the proposed charter were defeated at the polls in July and December last year.

The new charter will take effect June 5.

"One of the first things the charter commission feels the Mayor and the common council should do is work up a job description defining the duties of the city manager and then hire one," Michael said. "We feel that should be their first job under the new charter,"

"The new city manager can help the council work out the job descriptions for the other positions and carry out other aspects of the transition," the charter commission member said.

The charter commission would also like to see the council begin organizing all of the city ordinances for review and updating.

"All of the ordinances that are outdated should be thrown out and new ones should be added," Michael said. "Approximately 90 percent of the law of the city on the books can be thrown aut because it is outdated."

The first officials to be elected to office under the new charter will run for their seats in the upcoming November election. These candidates must file nominating petitions by June 6 to have their names placed on the ballot.

"Because no candidate elected to public office can have their term either lengthened or shortened by any action, the first officials elected under the new charter won't be able to take office until April 1979," Michael said. "But they will only be running for a 21 month term instead of the normal two year term,' so their terms will expire Dec. 31, 1980."

A second set of officials, elected in Nov. 1979 will take office in April 1980 and will complete their terms in December 1981. At that time city officials will begin taking office Jan. 1 with terms expiring Dec. 31.

Candidates will need a minimum of 25 signatures to place their names on the ballot.

In addition, after the current treasurer's term expires in April 1979, the post will become appointive and the mayor and common council will have the opportunity to select a person to fill the seat.

The treasurer's position was made appointive under the new charter because of the increasingly technical know-how required in the handling of city funds. When an office is elective special education or skills cannot be required for people interested in running for the job.

Michael said thot while the charter commission was technically dissolved, it hoped ta work with the new mayor and council to help them become acquainted with the new charter.

New City Officials

Shade tree purchase order held up by mayor, council

The Charlevoix Shade Tree program appears to be embroiled in controversy — again.

The 230 trees, which the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commissian members believed the Charlevoix Common Council had agreed to purchase several months ago, have not been ordered yet and spring planting time is fast approaching.

"We asked the common council to approve our budget early so that we could order the trees early enough to get them planted at the proper time," Jeannine Wallace, shade tree commission member and former alderman, said.

"But when we called to check on the order, we were told the purchase order had been held up."

Mrs. Wallace said the information about the purchase order came to light when a representative of Site Planning Development, which is owned by John Campbell, consultant to the shade tree commission, called the city to check on the order. The Site Planning Development crews were going to pick up trees for the commercial nursery and had agreed to save the city money by picking up its trees at the same time.

Phyllis Loucks, administrative assistant, said she did have a letter from Jahn Campbell including a quotation for the price of the new trees and a request to order them as soon os possible, but she had been instructed not to order the trees.

"The trees were approved for purchase when the shade tree commission budget was approved," Mrs. Loucks said. "But the money for the trees was to come out of the new city budget which hasn't been approved yet.

"I was told by the Mayor (Edward Hansen) and several council members not to order the trees."

Mrs. Loucks said after she had been contacted by Site Planning Development last week she checked again with Mayor Hansen and then Mayor-elect Sam Supernaw and both men told her not to order the trees.

Supernaw said he had discussed the issue with the new common council during an executive session last Thursday and at that time the group decided to hold off on picking up the trees.

"I believe we will be ordering the trees, it's in the budget, the shade tree part of it has been approved," Supernaw said. "But we are going to hold off on picking up the trees until there's room for them in our own nursery."

Supernaw said the council didn't feel it was proper to keep city trees in a commercial nursery.

Mrs. Wallace claims the shade tree commission never planned to keep the city trees in Campbell's nursery.

"The plon was to take the trees out of the city nursery and plant them along the city streets and to put the new trees in the nursery," she explained.

"I hope they will order the trees and put them in the nursery so that they can be planted on city streets next year. If the council doesn't do that this year, it will mean the end of the shade tree program."

The shade tree planting program has been the subject of numerous petition drives both for and against the program. City residents opposing the program are concerned about the costs and the extent of the program. People supporting the program say it is important to keep Charlevoix beautiful.

Six candidates file petitions for two school board seats

Six area residents have placed their names in nomination for seats on the Charlevoix Board of Education.

Throwing their hats in the ring for the school board race were: Otis L. Elliott, James J. Haggard, William D. Kenifeck, Dennis W. Kusina, Larry C. Lemerand and Ardeth Wieland.

Nominating petitions for the school board seats were due at the Charlevoix School District offices at 4 p.m. Monday. School officials said they were surprised at the number of candidates vying for the board posts and at the interest the race has generated.

Two seats will be up for election during the general school vote June 12. The terms of Mrs. Wieland and the late Claire Martin expire June 30.

Mrs. Wieland will be seeking re-election to her second term on the board. Robert Cook, who was appointed to fill out the remainder of Mr. Martin's term, did not seek election to that post.

The candidates are vying for two four-year terms on the school board.

The board of education members have not yet decided if they also will seek approval of additional operational millage during the general school election in June.

The last day of registration for people who would like to vote in the upcoming election is May 15. People may register to vote at the Secretary of State's office or with the city or township clerk.

The Charlevoix Courier will carry complete candidate information in its May 31 edition.

Income tax didn't used to be so complicated

Federal income tax forms weren't always so complicated.

In fact, in 1862 they were down right simple, according to Ralph Hamilton, Charlevoix accountant.

And Hamilton has copies of 1862 income tax farms to prove it. The accountant received the forms from his son, David, who is a professor of library science at Northern Illinois University.

David ran across the reproductions while he was working one day and forwarded copies to his father. Hamilton gladly filed the forms away with his current 1040s, but he pulls them out around April 15 every year for a chuckle.

"I've taken these forms to many tax clinics," Hamilton said. "Everybody always gets quite a kick out of them.

"They are much simpler to fill out and the federal government left it up to the people to authorize their own incomes. There weren't any W-2s back then.

"They only had to pay at a rate of 3 percent, but most people probably knocked their income down so that they only had to pay a few dollars."

The year 1862 was the first time the federal government tried levying an income tax, although secretaries of the treasury had advocated levying the taxes to set up war chests since 1812.

"They had to levy this tax to finance the Civil War," Hamilton explained.

The income tax was imposed on twa classes of people — every person residing in the United States plus every citizen residing abroad who was working for the government and a second class composed of every citizen residing abroad and not in government employment.

And there were no tables in the back of the tax form for determining the amount each person had to pay back then. The tax was levied at a flat rate.

The people in the first class were taxed 3 percent if they earned more than $600 but less than $10,000 and 5 percent if they earned more than $10,000.

The people in the second income bracket were taxed a flat 5 percent.

And, oh yes, if a husband and wife are living together and their combined income was $600 or more, they were taxed. But if they were living apart, they both had ta earn $600 before they paid taxes.

And then there was a 1.5 percent tax on interest income and another ...

Taxes weren't so simple then, either.

Young volunteer helps Humane Society

A love of animals brought a young Charlevoix resident to the doors of the Charlevoix County Humane Society.

And she's been a volunteer for the organization ever since.

Ylandra Ice spends many hours at the Humane Society cleaning cages and helping people select pets for adoption while other children her age are out playing.

"I just like animals," Ylandra said shrugging her shoulders. "It's fun to be here."

Ylandra learned about the Humane Society by accident. A neighbor was going to bring some animals to the organization to put up for adoption and she asked Ylandra if she wanted to go along. The 11-year-old girl enjoyed seeing the animals so much that she decided to come back.

Then, she found out that her friend Brenda Lugibihl was a volunteer for the Humane Society and she decided she would like to work for them, too.

The fifth grader said it is tempting to take the animals home with her.

"I wish I could take a lot of the animals home, but I don't," the owner of two hamsters, a cat and a bird said.

But taking care of the animals is almost as good as taking them home and Ylandra contents herself with that. In fact, she spent a lot of her spring vacation helping Bernice Smith, Humane Society director, and Nancy Lugibihl, CETA employee for the organization.

"She's been a big help to us," Mrs. Smith said. "We're glad to have her around."

Any other students who might be interested in working for the Humane Society should contact Mrs. Smith at 547-9711 between 1 and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Anyone who would like to adopt a pet can visit the Humane Society, which is located behind the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department offices, between 1 and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. It costs $5 to adopt a pet and $8 must be put on deposit for rabies shots for dogs.

Springtime means kite flying time

It's spring and people's fancies are turning to – kite flying!

At least that's what Dick Theisen, community recreation director for Boyne Falls Public Schools, thinks. Theisen is offering a class on kitemaking through the community education department.

Theisen, a longtime kite flier himself, claims it is very simple to make a kite.

"All you need is two sticks, some paper and twine," he said. "It's probably easier and cheaper to go to a store and get a ready-made kite. But that's no fun, especially if you're going to have a kite flying contest, which we hope to do in the class."

The kitemaking instructor explained that with store-bought kites, each one flies the same, but when kites are custom made they can be designed to go higher and faster.

"All you have to do is vary the size of the kite or what it is made out of to make it go faster," Theisen explained.

Theisen said kites can be made out of things that can be found around the house. For instance, tissue paper, light weight plastic and nylon or rayon cloth all make excellent kite covers.

"Even ordinary material will work, but that makes a really heavy kite," the instructor said.

"What's even better is if you can get some sacks from an Oriental gift shop," Theisen said. "That paper makes great kites. Of course, if you go to a really big gift shop they might actually carry real kite paper."

Theisen pointed out that the Chinese, Japanese and Koreans are famous kite fliers and were probably the originators of the technique. In those countries, adults as well as children can be seen flying kites.

Kites have also played an important part in history. Perhaps the most famous kite employed for a scientific purpose was that of Benjamin Franklin, who with a kite, string and key, discovered electricity.

Kites have also been used by engineers to carry cables across chasms. In fact this method was used at the beginning of the construction of the suspension bridge at Niagara Falls.

The flying objects have also been used to study the weather, as military signals and in advertising.

Theisen, whose kite flying experience dates back to his childhood, also hopes to shed some light on the proper way to fly a kite.

"You need a light breeze and a clear area," he began. "And you really need two people."

The community recreation director said that trying to launche a kite by running is not the proper approach.

"Running just makes the kite go up and down and wrecks it," he said. "Or else it ends up in a tree because you weren't watching where you were going."

He suggests that the kite flier find a partner who will hold the kite until the right breeze comes along. Then the person releases the kite and it should launch perfectly into the sky.

Theisen also shed some light on the kite tail controversy.

"You really don't need a tail to fly a kite," he said. "They're used for balance, but if you make your kite right you won't need it."

Theisen hopes his class will revive some interest in kite flying in Northern Michigan.

Charlevoix county residents express health care concerns

Care of infants, children and the elderly and the unique problems of the handicapped and the poor were among the major health care concerns expressed by Charlevoix County residents attending a town meeting on health care problems recently.

Charlevoix County residents also indicated there was a need for programs in health education, preventative health care and home care in the county.

The residents' concerns were aired at a special meeting sponsored by the Planning Committee of the Northern Michigan Health Systems Agency (NMHSA).

NMHSA is a nonprofit corporation designated by state and federal authorities to conduct health planning in an 18-county region of Northern Michigan. Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim, Otsego and Cheboygan counties are among those in the region.

The planning committee held a meeting in Charlevoix to find out what county residents think should be included in a long range plan for health care in Northern Michigan.

The committee is responsible for preparing a five-year health care plan outlining goals and recommending actions for the 18-county area.

In addition, the committee must prepare an Annual Implementation Plan which outlines what health care areas in the five-year plan should receive top priority during the coming year.

The Charlevoix meeting was the first of nine meetings to be conducted throughout the 18-county health systems area.

Barbara Fels, Charlevoix County representative on the NMHSA Planning Committee, stressed the importance of the annual and the five-year plans.

Mrs. Fels explained that before a hospital or other health care agency can expand its services, it must first get approval for the expansion from the Review Committee of the health systems agency. The Review Committee bases its recommendations for approval or denial of the expansion on the Planning Committee's implementation plan.

"It is very important to have a plan," Mrs. Fels said. "No expansion can be approved or funding granted unless there is a plan showing that the expansion is needed.

"You have to have the plan first before anything else can be done."

Mrs. Fels, who has been a member of the Planning Committee for four months, said the recent town meeting was very helpful to her.

"It was interesting to find out what types of things are bothering the people that I represent on the committee," she said. "When we have completed all of the town meetings we will prioritize the health care issues according to what the public would like to see done. At this meeting I learned what Charlevoix County residents think are important health care issues."

Mrs. Fels urged anyone else with any ideas on health care in the area to contact her at 547-4292. She also suggested that interested citizens contact the NMHSA office at 347-7772 or by writing to 325 E. Lake St. Petoskey, 49770, and request that a questionnaire on health care needs and services be sent to them so that they can express their opinions.

Charlevoix Yesterday

Kindergarten round up will be held Tuesday and Wednesday (today at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

Principal Ralph Raymer asks that parents of all kindergarten aged children who will be attending school in Charlevoix register their children for school according to an alphabetical schedule on those days.

Students whose last names begin with any letter from A through G are asked to register between 9 and 11 a.m. Tuesday at the elementary school. Children whose last names begin with any letter from H through M should register between 1 and 3 p.m. Tuesday.

On Wednesday, students whose last names begin with any letter N through R should register between 9 and 11 a.m. and students whose last names begin with S through Z should register between 2 and 3 p.m.

The Charlevoix Board of Education suggests that children entering kindergarten should be five years old by October 1, 1978.

Parents should bring a birth certificate and immunization record with them when they bring the child in for registration.

Students will meet Jerri Brady, school nurse, who will begin a school health record for each child. The children will have their hearing and sight tested by health department technicians.

Mrs. Brady will explain the immunization requirements of the State of Michigan to the parents. Parents will have until August to make sure their children have received their proper shots.

School will be held for kindergarten students on April 11 and 12.

Planning commissioners need education

Charlevoix officials have taken a giant step forward for city residents by adopting a new zoning ordinance and appointing a planning commission to enforce the ordinance and do some long range planning for the development of the city.

The new planning body and zoning law will provide an updated approach to the handling of planning and zoning issues in the city. Armed with the new ordinance, the planning commission will be able to breathe fresh air into the development taking place in the city and to protect both the developers and the residents of the community.

However, if city officials don't take another step forward and provide for some means of educating the new planning officials about the technicalities, legalities and procedures of the planning and zoning field, the entire program will do nothing but maintain the status quo and it might even turn out to be a step backward for the community.

One of the top priorities of the new mayor and the common council should be to show support for the planning commission and to work with it as it attempts to get the planning process off the ground in Charlevoix.

One way the new mayor and common council can show support for the planning commission is to authorize the expenditure of funds to hire a consultant to work with the planners for six months to a year as they begin operation.

During that time, the consultant can educate the planning commission about the theories and philosophy behind planning and zoning and the trends in the state and nation today, work with the planners on writing a set of bylaws, teach them the procedure and order for reviewing site plans and requiring applicants to seek variances, and help the group get started writing a master plan for the city.

Planning and zoning are very technical fields. Most professional planners have studied the topic for at least four years in college and many have advanced degrees in the field, too.

Very few of the newly appointed planning commissioners have ever been involved with planning and zoning before. They probably have all read the zoning ordinance, but that is a very small part of what is involved in planning and zoning. All of the new planners are very capable people and most of them have been involved in city government operations in the past. With a little additional education, the group will probably make a darn good bunch of planners, but without that education, the city could be headed for disaster.

In the past, the planning commission and board of appeals has appeared to operate in a haphazard manner, leaving the members, the developers and the city residents attending the hearings quite confused as to procedure, whether the site plan is in compliance with the zoning ordinance, what the zoning requirements are, etc.

And this creates many problems. First, it makes the city residents suspicious of their officials, it makes the developers suspicious and it creates hard feelings between the officials, residents and prospective developers.

In the end everyone loses.

Charlevoix is a beautiful community. It can remain that way and still develop with good planning. But the city residents the new mayor and city council won't get the excellent sort of planning that it needs unless it is willing to invest a little in it.

Supporting the planning commission by providing funds for additional education will benefit everyone.

Have you ever seen a winter so unwilling to leave?

Although spring arrived officially three weeks ago, our snowbanks are reluctant to bid goodbye. Ms. Barb Bump on E. Dixon Avenue still has a monstrous drift three feet high in her front yard that shows no sign of retreating. It may be the start of a new ice cap.

Furthermore, freezing temperatures every night only serve to slow the annual melt down.

"Last week, the cutter Mesquite reported the ice in Little Traverse Bay measured eight feet thick in places. And ice eight feet thick doesn't melt overnight.

Of course, we are badly in need of a southeast wind to clear Little Traverse Bay and the Charlevoix harbor. Our persistent northwest winds this spring have only served to pack the ice in tighter than ever.

And unless the situation changes soon, it looks like a long, cold summer ahead.

DID YOU hear about the new book out telling how a mini ice age will start in North America in the winter of 1981? And that's only three years away.

The author, who professes to know something about long-range weather patterns, says all the 1980's generally will be so cold in these parts that it will amount to a national disaster.

Well, you know, he could be right. The past two winters certainly have been far colder than normal, with day after day of sub-zero temperatures. I remember winters not too long ago when the mercury didn't dip below zero even once. But apparently those days are behind us as this new wave of arctic weather moves in.

What worries me is that if our temperature drops a degree or two overall, it will mean a much shorter growing season – which is just what we don't need. Try as I might, I still cannot get my tomatoes to ripen before the black-seeded Simpson turns bitter.

If it gets any colder, I'm afraid we'll have to limit our plantings in Charlevoix to iceberg lettuce and snow peas.

CHARLEVOIX County's Cancer Crusade gets under way next Wednesday with a kick-off coffee at the Jordan Inn. Once again, Patty Muma is carrying the ball as county chairman and is confident we'll come through with $15,000 to continue the battle against cancer.

"Maybe we'll cure cancer without your help," says actor John Wayne, who has had his innings with cancer – and won. "But don't bet your life on it," he adds.

When a solicitor calls at your home, remember your relatives, friends and neighbors who are even now putting up the good fight against cancer. And give generously.

CONGRATULATIONS to the Little Traverse Association of Home Builders for another first-rate "Home Show" at the Emmet County garage over the weekend. Many Charlevoix businessmen were on hand to show their wares and chat with prospective customers.

The miracles of the home show is that the association is able to convert a work-a-day garage into an attractive convention hall. It must take an awful lot of effort on the part of association members – but it's worth it.

April 3 was an important day for Charlevoix. It was the date of the general city election and it was also the date of mayor Edward Hansen's last council meeting before Mayor-elect Sam Supernaw takes office.

Mayor Hansen has served in his post for six consecutive terms.

April 3 also marked the last official common council meeting for aldermen Susan Erber, Joe Morris and Jeannine Wallace.

There was little fanfare for the departing city officials during their last meeting, in fact things ran as usual. The agenda was long and so was the meeting. And when it was over, the aldermen left with the crowd.

Some city residents did take time to thank the officials for what they had done for the city and one in particular approached Mayor Hansen.

"Thanks a lot Ed for your time," the man said. "I may not have always agreed with what you did, but I do appreciate your time."

I would like to second those comments. My job as a newspaper editor is to point out what I think are problem areas of defiencies in the operation of our various governmental units. But it is also my job to help improve the community and to make it a better place to live in.

It's very easy to criticize and city residents as well as newspaper editors are often quick to complain about the way the city is run. But too often the complainers haven't been involved in the entire decision making process and they aren't aware that what they thought was a snap decision probably involved several days of discussion and several meetings.

There were many times when I disagreed with the mayor and the aldermen over actions they took or plans they made. But I appreciate the fact that they devoted hundreds of hours of their time at a very low rate of pay to keep the City of Charlevoix functioning and to improve it.

The mayor and the outgoing aldermen deserve a hearty thanks from the people they have served faithfully.

Letters to the editor

Dean Davenport salutes athletes

To the Editor:

I've enjoyed reading the Courier during the past year. I have especially noticed the scope of sports coverage and the unusual number of people, young and old, who participate in athletics, either as a recreational outlet or as a member of the high school interscholastic athletic program. I realize that Charlevoix is indeed a unique community with its long tradition of promoting personal involvement in sports and competitive athletics for its young people.

I spent my youth and high school days playing and competing in Charlevoix. I feel that the emphasis placed by both the community and the school system had a healthy and direct relationship to my personal development. During the last 4 years here at Ferris State College, I have been able to observe several outstanding products of the Charlevoix tradition who competed on our varsity intercollegiate teams. Larry Potter was an outstanding defensive halfback, starting as a freshman, until an unfortunate injury ended his football career. Ned Henley was a fine four-year basketball player despite not carrying the size usually required to play the college ball. Presently Bob Alger is a starting defensive halfback and served as co-captain last year. Freshman Gary Probert worked his way up through the ranks to earn a starting spot on this year's wrestling team. I may be prejudiced but I feel this is no small feat.

Ferris now has 10,000 students, is a member in the very competitive Great Lakes Intercollegiate Athletic Conference, and for the first time is giving some financial assistance to the outstanding athletes. This all makes the impact of the Charlevoix athlete even more amazing. It is a great record for a small community. In fact, at Ferris it can't be matched by any other Michigan community of comparable size.

All of these athletes I mention are and have been outstanding young men, in addition to being gifted athletes. Their attitudes and value systems have been "pace-setters" on our athletic teams. Charlevoix should be very proud of them – I am!

Sincerely,
Dean Davenport

Grandpa gets mushy

SWOOOOSH! It flew over my left shoulder and then turned abruptly to the right, nicking my nose before dipping crazily into my lap. I was driving at the time, and the sudden attack nearly forced me to jerk my eastbound car into the westbound freeway.

From the backseat there came 2 whoops, followed by gurgly giggling.

"It certainly is nice to have the grandchildren visiting us," I said to my wife, who had crawled into the glove compartment.

We had been attacked by an escaped balloon from the International House of Pancakes.

I suspected there was going to be trouble when I first saw the inflated balloons tied to the cash register. I've never gotten along well with balloons.

Melissa is five years old and her sister Michele is eight. Naturally, they asked Grandpa to buy them balloons. That's what little grandchildren are supposed to ask their grandpas. It's a law, passed by Congress in 1953 in honor of Norman Rockwell.

"Grandpa can't afford it. He spent all his money on the movies and popcorn and Dr. Pepper and pancakes and hot fudge sundaes and nerve pills," I lied. I'm a firm believer in lying to children. The truth can only make them jump up and down and cry.

"The balloons are free," said the woman behind the cash register. "What do balloons have to do with pancakes?" I asked her. "I have never seen a balloon salesman giving away pancakes. Why do you have to give away balloons?

She ignored me and handed limp balloons to Melissa and Michele. Children are never given inflated balloons. Children's balloons must be blown up by their parents or grandparents. This is another law, passed by Congress in 1949 in honor of Oscar Apoplexy.

I explained to the children that I was physically unable to blow up their balloons, due to a hernia suffered at a circus in 1955 while inflating a 2-foot-long balloon for their mother who even then, at the age of five, was busy earning her subsequent nickname which starts with "T" and rhymes with the nicknames of her siblings, Nerd and Ferd.

Melissa and Michele assured me they could blow up their own balloons. Melissa didn't appear to be nearly big enough for the job, but I didn't want to question her ability for the second time that evening. I'd already bet she couldn't eat 8 pancakes, a scrambled egg, a hot fudge sundae and two of Grandpa's sausages in 5 minutes. But she did it. When Melissa grows up, she wants to be a steam shovel.

So Melissa undertook the inflation of her balloon, in the backseat, on the freeway, and got the job almost done. You know the rest. SWOOOOSH! Show me a motorist who retains his composure while an escaped balloon blows amok around his head, and I'll show you a motorist who is parked.

But we all survived, and Grandpa didn't do anything to embarrass Norman Rockwell. In fact, there were no reprisals at all, not even a harsh word. Melissa and Michele thought the near-accident was pretty funny, and somehow I couldn't tell them to stop laughing.

20 years ago, if their mother had pulled a similar stunt, I would have driven to the nearest orphanage and thrown her out of the car. Obviously, I've become a cliche grandparent. When my own kids did it, it was a crime. When my grandkids do it, it's cute.

Time is the accepted reason for this flip-flop behavior. Grandparents usually spend little time with the children, so it's comfortable to ignore their crimes for a few hours and send them home spoiled. Parents spend much time with the children, and if the darlings are spoiled, the smell soon becomes unbearable.

That's what Ann Landers and the other experts say, there's truth in their explanation. But it's not enough.

The night of the balloon escape, I watched my granddaughters say their prayers before going to bed, and then I listened to them giggle when they should have been sleeping. Instead of telling them to shut up, I just sat and enjoyed the sound.

And I decided, grandparents spoil grandchildren because grandparents are old enough to know something parents don't know. Grandparents know how fast children grow up, how swiftly the sweet times are gone, and how nice it would be to live them again.

Which is pretty mushy stuff for me to be writing, but I have to. It's a law, passed by Congress many years ago, in honor of love and balloons.

Historical society hard at work on Beaver Island

The Beaver Island Historical Society reports that it is reaching the final stages of rebuilding the old Post Office on the Island, but that it still needs about $3,500 to finish the interior work and to rewire the old Print Shop which stands next to the Post Office.

"We have raised and paid out over $9,000 so far to bring the addition (Post Office) to its current state. We need another $2,500 for the interior finishing. The Print Shop must be rewired at the same time as the addition is wired; this will cost another $2,500. We have $1,500 left in our treasury, so to finish the project this spring we need another $3,500," the report states.

The society is not refusing contributions but hopes to raise the necessary funds by increasing membership and by increasing sales of books, maps, and papers.

Memberships range in price from $5 for a regular membership to $100 for a life membership. There are 14 different publications for sale.

Further information may be obtained by writing the Society at St. James, Michigan 49782.

Someday, some bright insurance executive will come up with a policy for parents of teenagers who leave to get their own apartments.

The premiums will be expensive, but they'll cover loss of furniture (up to $5,000), damages to ears in hauling away contents of house, storage of grade school memorabilia and sports equipment, and perpetual stocking of the refrigerator.

It has taken us two years to adjust to our daughter getting her own apartment. Two years of walking through rooms that used to have furniture, closets that used to hold linens and towels, cupboards that at one time stored cooking utensils and dishes.

The only thing she left was an echo.

We were younger then. Like the proud phoenix bird, we built from the ashes, adding a chair here, a table there. Several of our friends gave Booster showers and in time we had the humble beginnings of a lived-in home.

The other day our son announced he was getting his own apartment. I nearly passed out. "Not again. I couldn't take it – having only one set of sheets per bed, bare floors, lamps with no bulbs.

"Relax," he grinned, "the apartment is furnished."

"I've seen restrooms with more furniture.

There wasn't a night he wasn't "visiting." "Do you want this?" he yelled from the living room.

"What is it?"

"The TV set."

"Of course we want it!"

"You can have the green lamp back."

"This isn't Park n' Swap."

"What our home is, is a combination delicatessen-message center-stop'n-go-open-24-hours-a-day-no-personal-checks-please establishment.

It's only been two weeks and I have no casseroles, no cake or pie pans, no leftover dishes (no leftovers!), no iron, no sweeper, no toaster, no hangers and no broom.

"And you have no insurance?" asked one of our friends.

"Not a dime.".

Young Writers Conference offers challenge to students

Students in grades 7 through 12 who enjoy writing poetry, short stories, or other kinds of material are invited to a Young Writers' Conference to be held this Saturday (April 15) at the Cheboygan Area High School.

The conference has been planned to include many areas of writing. There will be workshops on science fiction, poetry, short story, drama, songwriting, autobiography, novel, newspaper, editing, photography, videotape, and graphics.

Some sessions will be writing sessions and some will be learning sessions. There will also be a recreations session which will feature professional writers reading and performing their own work, and some of the work done during the conference. In addition, there will be a special workshop for teachers by Herb Scott, former coordinator for Michigan Council for Arts of the Michigan Creative Writing Project.

Registration fee for the conference is $5, which includes lunch and materials. Pre-registration blanks are available from English teachers in the area schools.

Increase in swamp tax would benefit county coffers

Charlevoix County has 39,689 acres of state land, on which taxes at the rate of 58 cents an acre have been paid by the state.

This amount to $23,019.62 a year, which has been divided among the county, townships, and school systems.

A bill increasing payments to $2 an acre has passed the Senate and is expected to win approval in the Michigan House of Representatives, according to State Senator Rob Davis.

Presently, the county is receiving $7,540.91 a year from these state funds; the townships are receiving $7,540.91; and the schools are receiving $7,937.80.

Under the new law, the total amount paid would be $79,378, of which the county would receive $23,813.40; the townships would receive $23,813.40; and the schools would receive $31,751.20.

Births

The following new additions joined Charlevoix area families last week:

A daughter, Melissa Ann, was born to Joseph and Deborah Billings of Topinabee March 31.

A son, Michael John, was born to John and Maria Hoeksema of Petoskey April 4.

A son, William Greer, was born to William and Cindie Lou Britton of Boyne City, April 5.

A daughter, Lacey Ann, was born to Robert and Holly Lou Schneider of Indian River, April 5.

KAY CHASE, chairman of the Charlevoix County March of Dimes, presents a check to Dr. Joseph Christie of Beaver Island. The check will be used to purchase a warmer for the incubator at the island's health center. Funds for the incubator have been raised during the past several years by March of Dimes volunteers.

CHARLEVOIX COUNCIL MINUTES

APRIL 3, 1978
8:00 p.m.

The Common Council of the City of Charlevoix met on the above date and time with Mayor Hansen presiding. Aldermen present: Erber, Wallace, Morris, Plumm, Wood, and Whitley. Absent: None.

The Minutes of the March 20, 1978 regular meeting were approved as presented in writing and as recorded in the Council Minutes Book.

Ed Whitley, a City employee and a member of the General Public present, read a letter from the non-uniform employees asking that the City resume Contract bargaining with the employee's bargaining committee and stating that the offer presently proposed by the City will not bring the employee's wages up to a level comparable to City employee wages in the surrounding area.

Jack Uhrick appeared before Council to request that Lots 1 and 2 of Block 3 of Fox and Eaton's Addition to the City of Charlevoix be split perpendicular to Auld Street. This would allow Julius Gilbert, owner of the property, to construct a house on Lot 2 with access from Auld Street instead of Petoskey Avenue.

Council recessed to the Board of Appeals to discuss the condominium project to be known as Belvedere Apartments.

Council reconvened with all members present.

A Public Hearing was held regarding Federal Revenue Sharing funds.

Mayor Hansen presented a plan use report for Federal Revenue Sharing monies for this fiscal year. His report designated $28,000 for docks and marina, $28,000 for street repair, $26,000 for a Street Department truck, and $15,007.81 for parks and recreation development. Council agreed to this distribution of the funds, which will be incorporated into the proposed budget for the 1978-79 fiscal year.

Mr. Dawson Way appeared before Council to state that the new zoning map indicates his property at 206 W. Lincoln, known as the Maxbauer Building and rented to Hoskins Manufacturing, has been rezoned R-2. Mr. Way stated that the property had been zoned M-2 and it was his understanding that it would remain in that zone to allow Hoskins to operate in harmony with the zoning laws. John Haggard, whose property adjoins Mr. Way's at the rear yard lot line, stated that his property is also zoned R-2 on the new map. Council assured both Mr. Way and Mr. Haggard that it was their intent that each of these properties should remain zoned for Light Industrial use and that the R-2 zone was an error on the map and would be corrected. Later in the meeting, Dick Georgi stated that a strip of property he owns running from West Dixon to the Weathervane Terrace is zoned as R-4 on the new map instead of C-1 as Council had previously agreed. Council agreed that this error on the map would also be corrected.

Alderman Wallace reported that she had discussed the Charlevoix Municipal Airport Study with Alvin Ranger, who is preparing the Master Plan Study, and he assured her that his work is progressing on schedule and will be completed by the October 28, 1978 deadline.

Council discussed Property and Boiler Insurance coverage for the City and agreed to accept bids for such insurance until May 1, 1978.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Wallace.

RESOLUTION 77-4-1

WHEREAS, the City of Charlevoix deems it necessary and expedient that the wages of the City Clerk and the City Treasurer be increased in line with the increased cost of living.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the wages of the City Clerk and the City Treasurer be increased in the amount of eight percent, effective April 3, 1978.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Erber, Wallace, Morris, Plumm, Wood, and Whitley. Nays: None. Absent: None.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Wood.

RESOLUTION 77-4-2

WHEREAS, it is in the best interest of the City of Charlevoix to provide safety glasses for City employees

BE IT RESOLVED that the City will pay for the first set of safety glasses, ie, frames, lens, case. All additional options, including prescriptions, bifocals, tints will be paid for by the employees.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the City will buy new frames when needed but not more than one (1) pair in any five (5) year period.

ALSO that the City will not be responsible for breakage.

Resolution was adopted by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Erber, Wallace, Plumm, Wood, and Whitley. Nays: Alderman Morris. Absent: None.

The following Resolution was offered and moved for its adoption by Alderman Plumm and supported by Alderman Erber.

BOARD OF APPEALS
APRIL 3, 1978

The Board of Appeals convened with Aldermen Erber, Wallace, Morris, Plumm, Wood, and Whitley present. Absent: None

Mr C.D. Matthews appeared before the Board of Appeals and presented drawings of his proposed project to be known as Belvedere Apartments. He stated that the condominium project had been redesigned and that, in his belief, would not require a variation of the Zoning Ordinance if Council included the dock area as part of the land. Council advised Mr. Matthews that, if this area is not included, a variance of the density requirement would be necessary. Several members of the General Public present voiced their opinions for and against the proposed project.

Moved by Alderman Wood and supported by Alderman Wallace that the City accept and approve the site plan of the Belvedere Apartments.

Moved by Alderman Wood and supported by Alderman Morris that the Motion be amended to include the phrase "provided construction does not violate the City Zoning Ordinance." The amendment to the Motion was approved by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Erber, Plumm, Wood, and Whitley. Nays: Aldermen Wallace and Morris. Absent: None.

The Amended Motion failed by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Wood and Whitley. Nays: Aldermen Erber, Wallace, Morris, and Plumm. Absent. None.

Moved by Alderman Wallace and supported by Alderman Morris that by reason of the peculiarity and uniqueness of the property, creating a practical difficulty and undue hardship, a variance shall be granted to the proposed Belvedere Apartments to allow a density of more than 15 dwelling units per acre, taking into consideration the restricted dockage area, and to grant a front yard set-back variance so as to conform to the neighboring pre-existing structures. Therefore, it is moved that a variance be granted as shown on the plans, marked exhibits A and B. The Motion failed by the following yea and nay vote. Yeas: Aldermen Erber, Wallace, and Morris. Nays: Aldermen Plumm, Wood, and Whitley, and Mayor Hansen.

Board of Appeals adjourned.

Teacher Feature

...Marie Osterberg

By PEG OHLE

Marie Osterberg is the girls' Health and Physical Education Instructor at Charlevoix High School. The Courier talks with her this week about the content of her classes and the girls she teaches.

COURIER: Is physical education required of all girls?

OSTERBERG: It is mandatory only in the 9th grade. In the other grades it is an elective.

COURIER: What do you cover in the classes?

OSTERBERG: Individual, dual, and team sports, such as soccer, speed ball, field hockey, volleyball, basketball, badminton, archery, gymnastics, dance and rhythms, trampoline, and softball.

COURIER: Are the elective classes the same as the 9th grade mandatory classes?

OSTERBERG: We offer the elective classes to encourage students to continue with organized physical activity. We have a review of the units in 9th grade P.E. plus a variety of carry-over leisure time activities which include skating, cross-country skiing, snow shoeing, beginning tennis, racquetball, bowling, and others.

COURIER: Why is physical education important for girls?

OSTERBERG: We have an eight-point goal. We want to provide and maintain a condition of personal good health and physical fitness; we want to provide health concepts that will involve the total girl in physical, mental, and social growth and development; we encourage desirable neuromuscular development in each individual; we try to develop a healthy response to physical activity through a fulfillment of basic needs; we try to encourage and develop a sense of fair play and good sportsmanship; we try to develop and cultivate personal-social attitudes; we try to develop attitudes that reflect good moral character; we try to develop the use of leisure time with life time physical and recreational activities.

COURIER: How will your classes be changed next year under Title IX?

OSTERBERG: Norm Probert and I have been working toward that for two years. We have already had some coed folk and square dancing, coed volleyball and badminton, cross country skiing, skating, bowling, and, for the first time, swimming, which we did at The Lodge. Title IX is still open to interpretation, but basically it provides for physical education for girls and boys in the same classes – everything except contact sports. I hope girls don't insist on playing on boys' teams in the contact sports because it will wreck the girls' programs.

COURIER: How long have you been teaching girls' physical ed?

OSTERBERG: I started the first all-girls' program in the high school in 1967, which included most all of the girls' extra-curricular activities from cheerleaders to GAA. I've seen a lot of changes in the girls since then. They are more sophisticated but not necessarily more mature. They're fine girls to work with. We have a rapport in gym that is different from the classroom. I get to know them better. They've called me "Mrs. O." all these years.

COURIER: What about League competition for girls?

OSTERBERG: The Michigan Huron Shores League was started seven years ago, and that was the beginning of girls' athletics in the high school. I was volleyball coach for four years and girls' track coach for six years. The League also offers competition in basketball, tennis, skiing, golf, and cross country running. So far, we haven't had any cross country girls.

COURIER: What do you cover in your health education classes?

OSTERBERG: We study the body system and learn to understand it; we learn about the necessity of physical fitness; we study good grooming; we go into alcohol and drub abuse; we talk about human sexuality; we discuss venereal diseases and other communicable diseases; we study first aid. We have outside people talk to the classes on many of these subjects. We also use film strips and movies and other source material.

Marie Osterberg

COURIER: What are your main problems in teaching physical education and health education classes?

OSTERBERG: Lack of space. We conduct two physical ed classes in the gym at one time, which means there are between 60 and 80 kids running around. The locker room space is also limited, with only two bathrooms. We often sit on the floor of the locker room for our health education classes.

COURIER: What is your main concern as a teacher?

OSTERBERG: The welfare of the student. I hope to help them grow and to learn something they can use in later life. I want to make them proud they are Charlevoix High School graduates.

COURIER: You have a family of your own, don't you?

OSTERBERG: Yes, we have five children. I started teaching again when we moved to Charlevoix and the children were all in school.

COURIER: Tell us about them.

OSTERBERG: Kris is a graduate of MSU and is in communications work in Farmington; Paul is married and does landscape architecture work; John is a sailor, he transports yachts and goes on cruises all over, he's thinking about returning to school; Brian is at Northwoods Institute; Carole is a senior in high school.

COURIER: What does your husband do?

OSTERBERG: Paul owns "A Bit of Finland" and is an engineer, realtor, and land developer.

School board approves baseball on trial basis this spring

The cry of "Batter up" will soon be heard at Charlevoix High School.

The Charlevoix Board of Education agreed to establish a baseball program at the high school on a one-year trial basis during its board meeting Thursday night. The action was taken following a recent request by school district residents that a team be established.

The parents, many of them supporters of the local Little League program, have requested a baseball program be established for the last several years.

The board allocated $500 to the program with the remainder of the funds needed for the baseball team to be raised by the parents' organization.

In other action, two students, Joyce Coen and Mark Smith, were expelled from the high school for malicious destruction of school property. The students set the cafeteria drapes on fire.

The students were given a chance to re-enroll in the high school during the 1978-79 school year. They must write a letter to the board requesting re-enrollment.

The board also approved tenure for three teachers. Ronald Cox, fifth grade teacher, Vera Rimbold, high school home economics teacher, and Kristin Schaperkotter, high school English teacher, were all given tenure.

The board also named Mary Gengle assistant girls track coach. Miss Gengle will work with head coach Dennis VanGuilder.

The school board also approved a policy authorizing student council officers to sit on the school board as advisors. The advisor will work as a liaison between students and the board on issues directly affecting students.

The date for the general school election was set for June 12. Two board seats are up for election, but no decision has been made whether to request additional operational millage.

The next school board meeting will be April 24.

Students should apply now for service academy posts

Area young people between the ages of 17 and 21 who are interested in attending one of the nation's service academies should now submit applications for a Congressional nomination to Congressman Philip E. Ruppe.

Congressman Ruppe, whose address is 203 Cannon House Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20515, says the deadline for the classes entering July, 1979 is October 31, 1978.

All academies require scores from either the ACT or SAT aptitude tests, and Ruppe suggests that those people interested in a nomination should take the exam at the earliest possible date.

The candidates most qualified will be nominated to four of the service academies – Military (West Point), Naval, Air Force, and Merchant Marine.

The other academy, the U.S. Coast Guard Academy, offers appointments on the basis of nationwide competition, and does not offer placement through Congressional appointment. Those who are interested in the Coast Guard Academy are encouraged to write directly to the Director of Admissions, United States Coast Guard Academy, New London, Connecticut 06320.

Congressman Ruppe also points out that the Great Lakes Maritime Academy, a division of Northwestern College in Traverse City, offers a three-year program which prepares young men and women to serve as officers aboard Great Lakes vessels. Those interested should write the Dean of Admissions, Northwestern College, 1701 Front Street, Traverse City, Michigan 49684.

Plans finalized for renovation at middle school

Plans for the continued renovation of the Charlevoix Middle School this summer were finalized last week.

Charlevoix school officials met with representatives of Haggard Plumbing and Heating and various subcontractors to discuss the installation of a new heating and ventilating system at the middle school. Some minor plumbing repairs will also be made during the summer.

Superintendent Gordon Van Wieren said a September 1 deadline had been set for the completion of the project.

The new heating and ventilating system at the school will be funded by additional millage school district voters approved last fall. School district voters approved one mill for five years for the renovation of the middle school.

So far, new windows have been installed at the school to cut back on energy costs and the playground was redesigned to provide better drainage of the land around the school and better facilities for the students.

Charlevoix ski team plans banquet Friday

The former chairman of Alpine ski competition of Region 3 of the U.S. Ski Association will be the guest speaker at the Charlevoix High School ski team banquet Friday.

Also attending the banquet will be U.S. ski team member, Carey Adgate, of Boyne City. Adgate has just returned from the Western spring skiing series. The Olympic skier helped the Charlevoix team train for its season last fall.

Special recognition will also be given to senior members of the ski team during the banquet.

The students were nominated for the honor by Gary Stutzman, director of bands, on the basis of their musical ability, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

David Streeter to study at art school

David W Streeter of Charlevoix has enrolled in the Art Institute of Atlanta (Georgia) for the spring quarter. He is the son of L.E. Streeter.

The student plans a career in photography and will follow courses of study embracing all phases of photography, ranging from its commercial application to advanced photographic arts, including television and cinematography. Completion of the two-year course leads to an Associate in Arts degree.

Work, Play Shop changes hands

No matter if you plan on working or playing, Lloyd Burgener is the man to see.

Burgener recently purchased the Work and Play Shop in Atwood and he says he has something for everyone in the shop, no matter what he or she plans on doing.

The 34-year-old former Champagne, Ill., resident purchased the business from Bill Hopp, who will continue to work for Burgener as a field representative.

Burgener said he was visiting his parents at their home near Torch Lake last winter when he learned the business was for sale. A snowmobile enthusiast, he decided to look into moving to the area permanently. He took over as owner of the Work and Play Shop April 1.

"It was the people more than anything else that prompted me to move here," Burgener said. "Everyone is so friendly and makes you feel welcome.

"I also like the terrain and beauty of the area."

Burgener had been working in the home construction, ready-mix concrete, lumber yard and land development business in Champagne, Ill. He also spent 10 years as a travel broker, organizer and operating tours throughout the country.

He holds an associate's degree in retailing and marketing from South Illinois University and has been active in the Lions Club and with the United Cerebal Palsy Foundation.

The new owner said he is looking forward to operating the Work and Play Shop.

"I think running the store will be pretty similar to what I have done in the past," he said. "I'll still be in the retail business, although I always worked with large equipment before."

Burgener said he isn't planning any changes in the equipment and sporting goods carried in the store.

"We will carry a complete line of John Deere equipment ranging from lawn and garden equipment to small tractors and light construction equipment," he said.

"This spring we will begin carrying a new line of John Deere tractors for the small farmer in addition to our other pieces of equipment."

Burgener said he also stocks garden tools, dirt bikes, snowmobiles and snowmobile clothing and a complete line of John Deere toys. The toys are exact scale models of John Deere equipment and include moveable parts.

The store also carries a complete line of parts for all the John Deere equipment sold at the store and offers a complete service department. Bergener also holds the Antrim County franchise for Briggs-Straton small engines.

The new hours for the Work and Play Shop will be 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday, and 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

LLOYD BURGENER, new owner of the Work and Play Shop in Atwood, discusses the advantages of John Deere's new line of light weight farm equipment with Bill Hopp, former owner of the business.

Charlevoix K-5 school to host reading conference

A special reading conference will be held at Charlevoix Elementary School Thursday.

More than 400 elementary, middle and high school teachers and administrators are expected to attend the second annual reading in-service night sponsored by the Northern Michigan Reading Association.

"We're very excited about the conference," Mary Ann Chew, chairman of the committee organizing the conference, explained. "It was very successful last year when we tried it for the first time and many teachers requested that it be held again.

"We thought the response would be good, but we didn't expect 400 teachers to attend."

Mrs. Chew, Charlevoix teacher, said the conference is unique because all but one of the speakers for the 18 sessions that will be offered at the conference are from Northern Michigan.

"We're reviving the idea that you don't have to go downstate to learn something new," Mrs. Chew said. "We have many talented and capable teachers right in this area who have plenty of ideas to share."

Teachers from all of the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District schools will be participating in the conference as well as teachers from school districts in Cheboygan, Indian River and Cadillac. In all 39 different schools will be represented at the conference.

"The conference will have sessions genred toward high school and middle school teachers as well as elementary school teachers," Mrs. Chew said. "We really tried to concentrate on programs for the high school age student because we want to get away from the idea that reading classes should end in the elementary schools.

"We believe that reading is important throughout a student's school life."

Some of the topics that will be discussed at the conference include the Charlevoix Middle School computer-assisted reading program, creative story telling, creative use of picture books, using newspapers in the classroom and study skills.

A special seminar for administrators will also be offered. Barbara Jacoby of the Ingraham Intermediate School District, will discuss the development of a reading program at all levels in the school district.

In addition to the sessions, there will also be a display of textbooks, reference books and paperback by various school textbook companies and local bookstores.

Mrs. Chew said that the committee members had been working hard to set up the conference and that they had been assisted in their plans by teachers and students in the Charlevoix schools.

The advanced art students, under the direction of Mercedes Mathers, elementary art teacher, designed directional signs and posters for all of the sessions and table decorations for the dinner, which will be served in the elementary school cafeteria.

Several elementary school students will also serve as junior hostesses for the visitors and the Charlevoix Middle School jazz band will perform during the dinner hour.

Cancer crusaders kick off campaign next week

Cancer Crusaders in Charlevoix County will hold their kick-off coffee Wednesday, April 19, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Jordan Inn in East Jordan, according to Mrs. Patty Muma, county chairman.

The kickoff will start a skein of activities all geared to help the local chapter meet its $15,000 goal in the 1978 campaign.

Ms. Muma said the goal is advancing rapidly as the pace of cancer research quickens and the expenses of cancer patients increase. Last year the county chapter met its goal of $13,900.

The highlight of the 1978 campaign will be the appearance of country and western singer Gary Shope, direct from the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville, Tenn., on May 12, at Charlevoix High School. Show time is 8 p.m.

Shope and his group, Interstate Country, are becoming well known on the country music circuit having appeared widely both in concert and on television. Wes McCoy and the North Country will provide back-up entertainment and John Ray of the Chalet Inn at Gaylord will be master of ceremonies.

Tickets for the concert may be purchased throughout the county from merchants displaying Gary Shope posters.

Other fund raising activities will be a salad and casserole luncheon May 3 from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the American Legion hall in Charlevoix. Anyone interested in selling tickets or donating time is asked to contact Janet Buchanan at 547-9438.

Friday, May 19, has been set for the wrap-up of the door-to-door solicitation. All proceeds should be returned to Ms. Muma for tabulation.

The week of May 24th has been declared "Send a Mouse to College Week" throughout the county. Cancer workers will visit schools to explain the research being done with American Cancer Society dollars and to distribute symbolic mouse emblems.

The final event of the drive will be the awarding of a television set at the First State Bank of Charlevoix at 7 p.m. May 26. Anyone willing to assist in the project is asked to contact Mrs. Joyce Duke at 547-6035.

An intensive anti-smoking campaign has been conducted this spring in schools thoroughout the county by Mrs. Deanna Beyer of East Jordan, a member of the board of directors of the Charlevoix County Chapter.

Third graders have been given a coloring book entitled "The Story of a Cigarette." Fifth graders have received the comic book "Taking a Chance With No Chance to Live." And seventh graders have been given anti-smoking pamphlets and book marks.

On the high school level, Ms. Beyer has films available for each grade on cancer and its warning signals. Tenth grade girls also are being introduced to self breast examination and the Pap smear, both techniques aimed at early detection of cancer.

Clubs and organizations throughout the county interested in presenting a program on cancer are asked to contact Ms. Beyer at 536-2484.

FAITH AND TAXATION EXPOSE THE EVILS OF GREED

The desire to succeed in your chosen profession and thereby improve the financial condition of yourself and your family is both natural and commendable. However, some of us are inclined to carry ambition to excess, to the point of impeding our health and raising our taxes to a level totally out of proportion to the advantages gained from it. A popular song of the '40's contained a message possibly more vital to all of us than its composers realized, when it said, "It's later than you think!" Nevertheless, it's never TOO late to stop whatever you're doing and reevaluate the goals and purposes of your life, and to let the Church of your choice teach you the difference between normal, healthy ambition and self-destructive greed.

"Monty" Montgomery celebrates 91st

Drinking, smoking and raising hell are the keys to living to a ripe old age, according to a Charlevoix resident who has lived more than nine decades.

Lawrence K. "Monty" Montgomery outlined his formula for a long life during a celebration of his 91st birthday Thursday at his home in Cha-Gra-Nade Shores on Oyster Bay.

In additon to his drinking, smoking and raising hell, Montgomery has led a full and active life. He is one of the few remaining members of the Polar Bears, American Expeditionary Forces who fought in Russia during World War I.

The Detroit native was drafted into the service in 1918 and he spent 15 months fighting on the Russian front not far from Siberia.

"I was 30 years old when they finally drafted me," Montgomery recalled.

"They had turned me down twice before because I had flat feet and bad eyes. Then they started taking the cripples," he quipped.

"But as soon as I got married and was on my honeymoon, well then they took me."

Montgomery said the American forces fought in weather that was 30 and 40 degrees below zero.

"We just had general issue uniforms and there were no replacements," he said. "If something wore out you went without it."

Montgomery said he fought along side White Russian, French, Canadian and Australian forces.

"We were 125 miles from the nearest means of transportation and the nearest outfit," he explained. "They called us the front with red snow because we had so many wounded."

Montgomery said most of the outfit was made up of Detroit residents. There were so many in it in fact that it was nicknamed "Detroit's Own."

Following the war, Montgomery worked as service manager and a car salesman. He worked for King Motor Company, Overland Motor Car, Chrysler, Pontiac and Chevrolet. He was a member of the 100 car club for both Pontiac and Chevrolet. Membership was given to those salesmen who sold 100 cars in a year.

"Work was my biggest hobby," he said.

He moved to Charlevoix 22 years ago with his wife and has acted as the caretaker of Cha-Gra-Nade Shores.

Montgomery has one daughter, Jeanie Wood in Charlevoix and a brother-in-law, John Rowe. He also has a son Lawrence, three grandchildren and one great grandson.

4-H members brand machinery against theft, damage

Branding took on a new meaning at the Tom Wieland farm last weekend.

Usually it's the livestock that gets branded, but it was the farm machinery that got "branded" at the Wieland farm Saturday.

The "branding" was part of a 4-H Service Club project to assist Charlevoix area farmers in protecting their machinery from theft.

Working in teams of three, members of the 4-H club marked each piece of Wieland's machinery with his driver's license numbers and a sticker warning that the machinery had been marked with special identification.

The driver's license numbers were stamped on the machinery with a special kind of indelible ink.

Bob Bellairs, county 4-H program director, explained that the club got the idea for the identification project from Ray Wood, regional Michigan Farm Bureau representative from Wolverine. The Farm Bureau agreed to supply the kits for the project if the high school student members of the 4-H club would provide the elbow grease.

"The Farm Bureau has found that like everything else, there has been an increase in the number of thefts of farm implements," Bellairs said. "So they have prepared special kits to help farmers mark their machinery.

"While farm machinery theft has not been a problem in Charlevoix County, we felt that this project would be an added deterent."

The 14 members of the service club watched a movie instructing them in the use of the kits earlier this month and then went to work marking machinery last Saturday. The students are willing to mark the machinery of any area farmer interested in the program. The club is working in conjunction with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, which has been notified about the project.

On hand for the "Branding" were: Carl Smith, who along with Sally Saunders is the coordinator of the 4-H club, John Frey, president of the Charlevoix County Farm Bureau, and Sheriff George Lasater.

ON HAND FOR the "branding" of the farm machinery and to assist with the program were: Sheriff George Lasater, Tom Wieland, John Frey, Charlevoix County Farm Bureau president, and Carl Smith, co-ordinator of the 4-H Service Club.

Four students earn degrees from Central

Lynn M. Eby of Charlevoix received a bachelor of science degree in education specializing in teaching and emotionally impaired student. Ms. Eby of 125 Pine River Lane graduated cum laude.

Thelma Behling of Boyne City received a bachelor of science degree. Other Boyne City students receiving degrees were: Debra Kaye Reidel who earned a bachelor of science in sociology and James Willis who earned a bachelor of science in English education.

Supernaw plans to keep campaign promises

Keeping his campaign promises will be the first actions of Charlevoix's new mayor.

Mayor Sam Supernaw said hiring a city manager for Charlevoix will be one of the first things that he will do now that he has officially taken office. Supernaw was sworn into office along with new aldermen Jeffrey Porter, Lawrence "Stub" Swanson, and Earl Muma on April 17. Mayor Supernaw conducted his first common council meeting Monday night.

"I think I will be doing mainly what I said during the campaign," Supernow said. "And that is to get a city manager in town."

The mayor said advertisements for the city manager's position will be appearing in the Detroit Free Press, the Detroit News and the Michigan Municipal League bulletin this week.

"We've already gotten a slew of applications for the job," Supernaw said. "But we're going to wait until the advertisements come out before we begin considering any of the applications."

Supernow said he hopes to begin the city manager selection process May 1 and he hopes to have a new city manager in Charlevoix by June 1.

"I think it's important to have a city manager to run the day-to-day operation of the city," Supernaw explained. "Council and the mayor should be planning for the future of the city and right now they're busy with the day-to-day stuff so none of the planning gets done."

Supernow said there are many things in the city that need attention and study by the council. He mention the sewer system, electrical system and the streets as three areas where the mayor and council need to do extensive planning.

"Our sewer system needs to be expanded and we need to update the water system," the new mayor said. "The water tower is in bad repair and we have to do something about that.

"We have also had several requests for electrical service outside the city and we have to decide if we want to run the system as a business for the city and serve people outside out boundaries."

The streets need repair and new gutters and sidewalks, which all take planning, the mayor continued.

In addition to the work that needs to be done in the utility area, Supernaw would also like to see the city work toward a merger with Charlevoix Township.

The new mayor said he has learned about a new bill before the legislature which would allow cities and townships to merge on the basis of several conditions. Under the proposed bill, if the city didn't meet the conditions within a specified length of time, the two units could demerge.

"This is along the lines of what Oscar Stroud has proposed and I think we should get started on working out some sort of agreement. We need to get things rolling."

Supernaw said he could see that the city and the township have common problems and he believes having the two units merge would help alleviate some of them.

"It's just a matter of economics" he said. "Why have two fire departments, two water systems and two recreation departments. It doesn't make sense."

Supernaw said he would like to see a merger committee established with members of the common council, the township board and the general public on it.

The new mayor and common council are also working on the budget for the coming year. Supernaw said he plans no great increases in the budget and there aren't any pressing expenditures at this time.

"We need to do some work on Mt. McSauba or they won't be able to open next year, but there really isn't anything critical that needs to be done next year," he said.

Supernow said he also hopes to activate some of the citizens commissions such as the Housing Commission and the Recreation Commission, and get some work done on various projects in the city that need to have federal or state funding.

The new mayor also hopes to have the council members do more work in committee, too.

"I think we can get a lot accomplished in committee and then we won't have to spend so much time on it as a whole group," he said.

Supernaw said he knew he couldn't accomplish all of his goals in one year, but he hopes to at least get the projects started.

"How long did it take to get the new charter?" he asked. "I know it took a long time and that it will take a long time to get these things done, too.

"But if we can at least get started working on them, that will help."

Sam Supernaw

Fairbanks returns

Charles L. "Chuck" Fairbanks, a 1950 Charlevoix High School graduate who is presently general manager and coach of the New England Patriots, will deliver the commencement address at ceremonies scheduled for June 11, Vane H. Smith, high school principal has announced.

At that time 146 graduates will receive their diplomas.

Chuck Fairbanks, who was born in Detroit, graduated from Charlevoix High School where he won All-State honors as an end. He went on to Michigan State University where he played with the 1952 national champion team and the '53 Big Ten champs who defeated UCLA in the Rose Bowl. As a senior he won a berth on the Blue-Gray all-star classic.

He began his coaching career in 1955, as a student assistant at MSU's spring drills. His first head coaching job was at Ishpeming High School 1955-57. From there he went to Arizona State where he served as defensive backfield coach under Frank Kush from 1958-'61. From 1962-'64 he was backfield coach at Houston and in 1965 was named assistant coach under Bill Yeoman. The following year he took over as backfield coach at Oklahoma and in 1967 took over the top post. At Oklahoma he had a 52-15-1 record over a six year period.

He left this post to become head coach and general manager of the New England Patriots in January 1973. After three years of building he turned around a 3-11 record to 11-3 in 1976 and that year took the Patriots to the playoff for the first time in 13 years. In

Likes to See Oscar Work

I was glad to see Oscar Stroud out working picking up trash along the roadside last week. It's good to know that even though his face is on a lot of buttons he can still work right along with the rest of us. And the township roads look a lot better, too.

Peanut Mayor?

As a Senior Citizen who has spent my entire life in Charlevoix, may I appeal to the voters of our town.

Please! Will some responsible, intelligent people run for Council and Mayor? Our council of clowns and peanut mayor are a disgrace to Charlevoix.

No more smoking at city council

CHARLEVOIX — There was more smoke than fire at the Charlevoix City Council meeting Monday night, with more than 30 spectators in attendance.

And when it was over, a resolution by rookie Councilman Jeff Porter to ban smoking in council chambers during council meetings passed with only one dissenting vote, cast by another rookie councilman, Lawrence Swanson.

Porter said in the absence of an adequate air filtering system, an outright ban on smoking is the only solution to the smog-like conditions which develop in the council chamber every other Monday night.

"It's dangerous to my health, and I'm sure it's dangerous to the health of others," commented Porter, a dentist.

During the discussion, a member of the gallery commented that the last time he attended a council meeting, his coat became so smokey his wife made him hang it outside to air when he got home.

"She let me inside, but the coat didn't make it," he said.

Porter said he would post the "no smoking" signs.

The meeting, which was the first presided over by Sam Supernaw as mayor, also saw in infusion of dollars into the shade tree program, which has been in limbo since the previous council tabled a purchase order for trees. After receiving an update on the program by Jon Campbell, a member of the Shade Tree Commission, the council agreed to purchase an additional 200 greenspire linden trees for the city nursery at a cost of $3,900.

At one point, Councilman Ivan Whitley questioned Campbell's motives as a member of the Shade Tree Commission. "I do it because I'm making bundles," Campbell, a landscape architect, told his facetiously.

In other business the council:

–Hired Jim Ance as dockmaster.

–Denied Grey Gables a drama permit after Police Chief Jack Mol pointed out a critical parking problem in the neighborhood in a memo to the council. The permit, which was requested by restaurateur Dave Phillips, who already had permits for dancing and musical entertainment.

The permit would have allowed him to start regular dinner-theaters next summer, but Mayor Supernaw couldn't generate a motion either to support the permit or deny it from among members of the council, effectively denying Phillips' request.

Robert Schleman, who lives on Belvedere Avenue, was on hand to complain of drunks and garbage in the streets after parties at Grey Gables. He also said traffic is so bad that residents sometimes can't park in front of their own homes some nights.

-Amended a resolution passed at the last council meeting naming outgoing councilmen Jeanine Wallace and Sue Erber to the Planning Commission, on grounds that as members of the council the two were in a position to vote on their own appointments. As their replacements, the mayor appointed George Baldwin to serve the one-year term and June Cross to serve the three-year term.

–Purchased a seven-gang fairway mower from Ferguson Lawn Equipment for $3,753.

–Purchased a one-half ton pickup from Charlevoix Oil Co. for $4,133.60, including options.

–Increased most non-resident rates at the municipal golf course by about $20. The new rates are: Resident – single, $40; man and wife, $50; family, $65; student, $20. Non-Resident – single, $80; man and wife, $90; family, $100; student, $35. Daily rates are $4 for nine holes and $6 for 18 holes.

Stork has been busy in Charlevoix County

Somewhere around Charlevoix there's an overworked stork.

There seems to be a baby boom of sorts in the area. The number of babies being born in the county has increased steadily since 1975, jumping from 112 births in that year to 185 births during 1977.

And it looks like 1978 will be another good year for babies in the county. The number of babies born so far this year shows a substantial increase over the number born in the first four months of 1977, Charlevoix County clerk's office officials say.

So far there have been 65 births in the county as compared with 44 during the first four months of 1977.

"Now remember that every baby born in Charlevoix County gets their birth certificate from this office no matter where their parents live," the official said. "So not all of these babies actually live in Charlevoix County. We have a lot of people from Antrim and Emmet counties coming here to have their babies."

Kathryn Boss, director of nursing at Charlevoix Area Hospital, said the hospital had been experiencing a baby boom, too.

"I don't know if there really is a baby boom going on," Mrs. Boss, R.N., said. "But we sure are doing a booming business."

The number of babies delivered at the hospital has increased 100 percent over last year, the nursing director said. The hospital has delivered close to 70 babies so far this year.

Part of the reason for the increase in births at the hospital is that there are more obstetricians on the hospital staff and because the hospital is drawing from a larger serving area, Mrs. Boss said.

Charlevoix store owners have noticed an increase in the number of people looking for baby shower gifts and for baby items, too

"It seems that in the last few months a lot of people have been in looking for baby things," Mike Holmes, owner of The Appletree, said.

"It may be just coincidental because I also know a lot of people who are pregnant and it might be that I just have noticed the requests more," he continued. "But we have ordered more baby things for the store because we've had so many people asking for them."

Jeannine Wallace, owner of the Shop of the Gulls, said she had also noticed more people asking for baby things, too, but she didn't think that meant there was a baby boom in the area.

"I think other stores in the area that used to carry baby things have either cut down on what they're carrying or they have quit entirely."

But Mrs. Wallace is planning to order more baby items for her store, too.

At Olesons Family Center, Bertha Sternaman said a large amount of the store's sales seemed to be for baby clothing and shower gifts.

"At times it seems like a big part of our sales have been baby items," Mrs. Sternaman said. "I can't say for sure, but we've had a lot of days where it seems like that's all we've sold.

Mark Nordberg at Reusch Jewelry said he hadn't noticed any real increase in the sale of baby items at his store.

"We usually do get an increase in the spring time for baby gifts," he said. "And we have again this year. But it's nothing out of the ordinary."

"How can you tell if the person at your door is really a Michigan Bell Employee?"

As you may have noticed, our employees do not wear uniforms. They dress in the way they think is most appropriate to get their jobs done. While this permits them to look like the individuals they are, it really doesn't help you identify them as Bell employees. But, there is a way. Every Michigan Bell employee is required to carry a Michigan Bell identification card giving his or her name, photograph, and signature. For your protection, be sure to see this card before you admit them into your home. They'll be happy to show it to you.

Individualized learning important at K-5

The individualized system, called stranding, is an interesting combination of old and new educational techniques.

"The stranding system works like the old one-room school where the teacher taught each child where he was at and not according to how old the student was or what grade he was in," Betty Potter, resource center teacher and an important part of the individualized program, explained.

The program is based on the premise that everything a student learns in school can't be set up on a timetable according to what grade the student is in or how old he or she is, Ralph Raymer, elementary school principal, said.

"There are a lot of things every child has to learn, like how to tell time and how to make change or use money," the principal explained. "But some children learn these things more quickly than others, who need more time at grasping the idea.

"Sometimes it is just one aspect of a certain skill that a child doesn't understand, but because he or she can't get that one part, the child has trouble learning anything else that requires that particular skill."

So, what the elementary school teachers and administrators did was break down the various skills needed to learn something–like how to tell time–into separate parts. The children work on each skill and as they accomplish it they go on to the next one until they have mastered time telling and related ideas.

In the time telling area, the students would learn clock time, days of the week, years, months, hours and other things that all involve time.

"We have worksheets in the classroom which the students use to work on a skill," the principal said. "When they have completed the worksheet then they have a test. If they pass it they go on to the next worksheet.

"If they don't pass the test, then they work on that skill some more until they do master it."

When the students have completed all of the skills they need to master a certain area, it is recorded on a special card that lists all of the skill areas the student should master before graduating from elementary school.

The card follows the students through school and as they enter each grade, the teachers know exactly what the child has accomplished.

And that's the beauty of the system as far as Principal Raymer is concerned.

"With this system we know the kinds of skills the kids have instead of what they don't have," he said. "Tests are built on failure. When you get done with a test you know what the child doesn't know.

"With the stranding you know that the student has at least say, an 80 percent proficiency in an area. That doesn't mean that the students won't forget parts of it or regress after they pass the test, but we know that they have the ability to learn it."

The system has also ended the confusion about when to reteach a skill if a child hasn't mastered it. Now the reteaching occurs until the child does muster the skill.

If the student doesn't learn the skill in the classroom, aides and parent volunteers will also work with the student using special materials to help explain the operation.

Raymer said the students seemed to like the system, too. He cited math class, where the stranding system was first used, as an example.

"Math class is probably the happiest time of day for elementary school students," the principal said. "The kids enjoy working on their worksheets. They want to get that skill checked off and go on to something different or they want to retaught right away."

The program is also advantageous for the child who has an extended illness.

"It's much easier to catch up," Raymer said. "It used to be if a student was sick for six weeks, the whole year was shot. But with this system they can catchup quickly."

The student simply works with one of the aides or parent volunteers until he or she has mastered all of the things that were taught while he or she was absent.

"The operation of the program is far more complicated than it appears at first blush," Raymer cautioned. "It is difficult to determine all of the skills that are needed to learn a certain operation."

But through a total staff effort, the teachers are slowly identifying the various skills and coming up with methods for teaching them. Raymer estimated it would be three years before the program is completed.

The program started as an outgrowth of the Fountain Valley systems management program for math and reading which the school purchased in 1975. After working with the Fountain Valley system, the teachers began adapting it to the Charlevoix school.

Now the teachers are working on creating the same system for the language arts program.

SHELIA ESSENBERG and Betty Potter, resource center director, review a skills card before Miss Essenberg, who is an aide at the elementary school tutors the students.

County board plans review of fixed millage spread

By PEG OHLE

The Ways and Means Committee of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners has recommended to the Board that it reconstitute the County Tax Allocation Board as a County Tax Advisory Tax Limitation Committee to study and review fixed millage.

The study would supposedly lead toward the development of a petition to place a fixed mill rate proposal on the general election ballot of November 7.

Charlevoix County has been operating on a fixed rate of 15 mills since January 1, 1977. This rate was established by referendum in the 1976 general election and will expire December 31, 1978.

The County Advisory Tax Limitation Committee, by law, would be made up of the County Treasurer, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Commissioners, Superintendent of the Intermediate School District, a representative from a K-12 school appointed by the Probate Judge, a resident of a municipality appointed by the Probate Judge, a citizen of the county appointed by the Board of Commissioners, a Township Supervisor appointed by the Township Association, and a representative from the smallest K-12 school district appointed by the Intermediate School District Board.

As a result of a resolution passed by the County Board of Commissioners last week, they will suggest to the County Advisory Tax Limitation Committee that "serious considerations be given to establishment of a 14 mill limitation petition developed on present percentages of interest that governments and schools now have in the 15 mill limitation rate."

The recommendation is based on the fact that "valuations of property have increased beyond what general cost of governments realistically experience."

Teenage birth rate in U.S. among highest in world

The birth rate for teenage women in this country is among the highest in the world. There are 57 births for every 1,000 females aged 15 to 19. And that's a fact that carries with it a host of heartbreaking problems – health dangers to the infant, health and emotional problems for the young mother – and that's just the beginning.

To help people understand more about it, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a new publication called Teenage Pregnancy: Everybody's Problem. It discusses the risks of early child bearing, what can be done to reduce teenage pregnancy, and how community involvement can help. For a copy of Teenage Pregnancy, Everybody's Problem sent $1.00 to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 087F, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

The adverse effects of a teenage pregnancy on a young mother and her infant make this one of the most pressing health problems in the U.S. today. For example, the infant born to a mother under 18 is three times more likely to die in the first year of life than the child of a mother aged 20 to 24.

And babies born to women under 15 years of age have three times as many brain and nervous system disorders as children born to mothers over 15.

Mothers under 16 are more likely to suffer from toxemia, a condition that may result in high blood pressure, seizures and, sometimes, even death. A young mother is also more likely to start labor prematurely and to have a prolonged and difficult labor, multiplying the hazards to herself and the baby.

In addition to health, young mothers face economic and social problems. Statistically the teenage mother will most likely drop out of school. Eight out of ten who become mothers at 17 years of age or younger never complete high school.

When teenagers marry as a result of a pregnancy, their problems may only become more complicated. Teenage parents are often isolated from their peers and from normal social life. Finishing school is difficult and as a result many drop out. And, without adequate education and skills they are qualified only for the lower paying jobs.

These pressures cause 50 percent of all teenage marriages to end in divorce within five years.

Teenage Pregnancy: Everybody's Problem ($1.00) includes a list of information resources as well as a discussion of ways to prevent or alleviate the problem. At the same time you will get a copy of the Consumer

City should resolve shade tree issue

There seems to be quite a misunderstanding in this community about the status of the Shade Tree Commission and the shade tree planting program.

The planting program has been the subject of numerous petition drives, both for and against the program. In fact, the shade tree program, which started out as a well-meaning beautification and replacement project, has come under so much attack that it has created a division among the citizens of Charlevoix.

Another division between city residents is the last thing this community needs. It already has enough rifts between the North side and the South side and First, Second and Third wards.

The whole issue is very simple – either there is a shade tree program in Charlevoix or there isn't one. But, for some reason Charlevoix residents tend to make things a little more difficult than that.

As a resident of a neighboring community said recently, "We wanted shade trees, so with some city funds and a lot of hard work we got them planted.

"Charlevoix the Beautiful wants shade trees, so the residents get together to fight about it. It seems like they do that all the time."

Amen.

The main objection to the shade tree program seems to be the cost. And it really isn't the cost of the program that people object to, but the fact that John Campbell, consultant for the shade tree commission, has received in excess of $20 an hour for some of the work he has done for the city.

Campbell is a trained professional much like a doctor or a lawyer. He should be receiving top wages. And while everybody kicks about the money Campbell has received, nobody is complaining about the hundreds of hours he has donated to the city – and he has donated those hours to help get this program off the ground.

Many people suggest that a Department of Natural Resources (DNR) representative could have done the same thing that Campbell did for the city only at a cheaper rate, but no one seems to have checked with the DNR to see if this is true.

One DNR official told the Courier that as a DNR forester he could not have donated the amount of time it would have taken to set up the 10-year plan the Charlevoix now has. In fact, he would have advised the city to hire a private consultant.

Charlevoix needs shade trees and it needs a shade tree planting program. The community has an economy based mostly on the tourist dollar and it must maintain its attractiveness in order to keep the tourists coming back to the area.

But more importantly, there are thousands of people who call this community home, who also want it to be beautiful.

Trees, planted in an orderly, planned fashion, can provide this beauty. Trees can also prevent erosion, help reduce energy costs and a host of other things. They are important and necessary.

But the shade tree program is not worth the constant turmoil and back stabbing that it has caused in this community. The program should be reviewed one more time and discussed among the citizens. Then after the program has been reviewed, it should be followed to the letter without further comment.

It appears that the wishes of the majority, who support the shade tree program, have been pitted against the volume of the minority. It would be disastrous to junk a program because it has few, but vocal opponents.

The situation should be resolved by the mayor and common council. Immediately.

...Speaking Her Mind

I like to go over to the Charlevoix County Building every so often because I always learn something new there.

So when I was at the county clerk's office recently, I checked the reception window for any new cartoons or sayings that might be posted there.

The secretaries in the clerk's office and other county personnel seem to always have an interesting cartoon hanging there. For instance, one of the old standbys posted off to the side of the window, presumably by the area where the marriage licenses are filled out, is the definition of a bachelor. "A bachelor is a person who likes to cook his own goose," the sign proclaims.

I was not disappointed when I visited the window. There was a new sign posted on the ledge. Neatly typed on a square of paper were the words, "The best way to have your family tree traced is to run for political office."

After a chuckle, I asked the clerk's office employees about the sign. They explained that they have been getting numerous requests from people for assistance in tracing their family tree. The sign was posted as a sort of comic relief

When I walked by the window a few days later, someone else had added a bit of their own comic relief to the window. Penned underneath the typewritten words was the sentence, "And it's cheaper, too."

But after I got over the chuckle, I started thinking about that phrase. You know, it's a sad thing that there is so much distrust of candidates for political office that their family tree has to be traced to make sure they won't take advantage of the public once they are elected to office.

It's also a sad thing that there have been all too many situations where politicians did take advantage of the people for either their own or their relatives' personal gain.

And examples of why people should mistrust politicians crop up every day. A representative from Michigan is facing federal fraud indictments and the Speaker of the House is being charged with accepting bribes from the Koreans. Perhaps if we had investigated the family tree of these characters we would have known better than to elect them to represent us.

Clockwise

I can't let this weekend go by without putting down something on paper about Patrick LaFreniere, the "governor of Beaver Island," as he liked to call himself.

I met Patrick eight years ago, shortly after he and his wife, Eleanor, moved home to Beaver Island after many years in Chicago.

Patrick's brother, Dick introduced us while Judy and I were shopping in Dick's general store in downtown St. James.

"They call him 'Pat the Truth', "Dick said by way of introduction, "because he's never been known to tell a lie."

Patrick and I shook hands and I was impressed right away with the man, not so much because of his honesty but because of his imposing girth. Patrick was a mountain of a man; and although it was a warm day, he was wearing a long-sleeved red shirt that melted into a ruddy complexion and a thatch of white hair. It was as if all of his color had drained into his shirt.

"He looks like a jolly Santa Claus on his summer vacation," Judy said after we left the store.

As regular visitors to the island over the next few years, the Clocks became good friends with the LaFrenieres. Late afternoons, you could usually find Patrick holding court at the Shamrock or the Beachcomber, discoursing at length on politics (he was a Democrat), economics, history or his favorite subject – Beaver Island.

I hadn't known Patrick very long before I realized that the nick-name "Pat the Truth" had been given to him in jest. To be sure, Patrick would start with a germ of the truth, but he had little difficulty expanding and improving upon it until his stories approached the realms of fantasy.

Patrick spoke with a rolling island brogue and had made a fine art out of the dramatic pause. Just when you thought a story was over, the best was yet to come.

Of course, Patrick's fables were always 10 times more interesting that the bald facts and I guess that is why I always enjoyed listening to him.

Patrick like to spin yarns about his boyhood and young manhood on the island – about fishing and hunting and the dreadful rigors of Prohibition.

One of my favorite stories was how Patrick led a convoy of trucks across the ice to Charlevoix in the winter of 1934 to pick up a load of building materials for the island's Roosevelt School.

Every winter, Patrick and Eleanor would close up their home on the south end of the island and move to either St. James or Charlevoix. This past winter they stayed in a house trailer at the Willie Smith farm near Norwood.

Last Sunday afternoon I was coming home from wood-cutting when I saw Patrick heading into the Airport Bar. So I wheeled my car into the parking lot and joined him for a drink.

Patrick was eagerly looking forward to going home, as soon as the boats started running. He had plans this summer to build a little year-'round home in St. James. He also talked about taking a trip to Ireland – perhaps next winter – to check up on his Irish relatives.

Patrick said he had starved himself down to 290 pounds over the winter and was feeling fine.

We also talked about taping some of his Beaver Island stories for eventual publication.

"I'll do it," he said. "if you'll edit it."

I agreed.

Friday I called the house to see if the LaFrenieres had caught the first boat to the island. Eleanor answered. Patrick had had a bad week and had checked into Charlevoix Hospital on Thursday. She told me what room he was in.

Saturday morning I stopped at the hospital to see if he needed anything but his room was empty. Thinking there had been some mistake I checked at the nurses' station.

"Mr. LaFreniere expired overnight," the nurse on duty told me.

The South Shore made a special trip to the island Sunday morning to take "the governor" home for burial.

Sprig of what?

The father of the bride-to-be was told that the flowers would cost over $200 and they must be paid for at least a week before the wedding, his wife told him.

"You'll be wearing a sprig of baby's breath," she said.

"That sounds darling," he said, "but I'm not in the habit of paying for my baby's breath before I get it. Usually the florist lets me get a grip on one end of a sprig with my left hand while I let him grab one end of my hundred-dollar bill with his left hand. We then make the exchange simultaneously, on the count of three, while shaking each other's free hand in an expression of mutual trust."

"Don't start in on me, I'm in no mood for your foolishness," she said. "I just got back from the wedding store and you won't believe what those people have done to me."

The wedding store is a quaint specialty shop with bucolic charm, located at a quiet intersection far out in the country. People sick of getting lousy service in stores in the city drive 30 miles to the wedding store to get lousy service. It hurts just as much, but the air smells more rural.

The mother of the bride-to-be has a sewing machine and she decided to save money by making the dresses to be worn by the two flower girls and the junior bridesmaid. Those dresses of course, must match the matron of honor and bridesmaid dresses made by the wedding store.

No problem. The wedding store said all the dresses could be made from the same bolt of cloth. Marvelous.

The wedding store's seamstress is actually an anonymous supplier located in an faraway big city. Customers are measured in the country, but their statistics are translated into gowns many miles away, in a non-bucolic setting, with the aid of the U.S. Postal Service, God help us all.

Given these circumstances, you might wonder if the smell of rural air is worth the tremendous potential for grief waiting at the end of the 30-mile drive. Please don't ask the mother of the bride-to-be such questions. They tend to make her scream and pound the floor with her head.

The plan was for the wedding store's supplier to make its assigned dresses and then mail them to the wedding store along with the remains of the bolt of cloth used. This would take two or three weeks, the wedding store said, leaving the mother plenty of time to make the matching dresses.

It took six weeks. The bolt of cloth didn't match the dresses. The wedding store said it was sorry, but the faraway supplier had goofed. A phone call revealed that nowhere in the world was there any cloth to match the bridesmaid and matron of honor dresses.

The despairing mother insisted that the bride's attendants could not appear in mixed colors. She said the wedding store should start all over again and finish five dresses that matched.

The wedding store agreed, but there was one problem. Such a project would take at least six weeks (translation: 12) which meant the dresses would arrive four weeks after the wedding.

The mother finally gave up, twitching. She rationalized that maybe the church would be too dark for anyone to notice the different shades of blue.

Grandvue director says thanks to many volunteers

April 13, 1978
To the Editor:

There are many caring people, and we at Grandvue are thankful for them all.

There are many who are able to come, visit, and show their concern, and express their love through the sharing of their time and talents. There are people who know when to listen, how to comfort, and what it is that makes life more meaningful.

There are many more who are unable to come to Grandvue in person, but they share of themselves in other ways. Their thoughts and prayers are evidenced by the cards, letters and other appreciated contributions they make toward a more meaningful life.

There are those who give of themselves in many ways, to many causes, and those who give of themselves more selectively – but all give of themselves generously and it is appreciated.

It is Spring – a time of renewal. It is April – the time of National Volunteers Week. And it is time to say – Thank You!

To all who serve on behalf of all who benefit at Grandvue – Thank you.

Calls nuke power plant a bucket of lemonaid

April 9, 1978

To The Editor:

Why did Detroit Edison sell the Co-Op's a nuclear plant when they could have sold them part of the new Bell River coal plant also under construction? The answer is that they want to share the lemonaid. Nuclear plants are expensive lemons being promoted by the Department of Energy and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Attorney General Kelley said on March 1, 1978 that the "utility regulatory lawyers in my office took a close look at the Fermi II plant at the time that the Detroit Edison Company proposed to resume construction on this plant in early 1977, after construction had been suspended since late 1974. They concluded that the Fermi plant power would be more expensive and less reliable than that which could be produced by coal fired plants constructed within the same time framework."

Thus, you can see that Edison wanted the Co-Op's REA loans and your money as "lemonaid."

It's probably just a rumor, but I heard that a mother in the East admitted to making a "mistake."

Is that crazy?

Right in front of her daughter she said, "I made a mistake and I'm sorry and wish to be forgiven."

Boy, even if it is just a rumor, it's enough to scare you half to death. I mean, what parent in his (or her) right mind would chance letting a child know a parent isn't perfect?

I was 30 years old before I found out. My mother had given me a biscuit recipe and left out the baking powder. My biscuits came out of the oven and looked like a stack of loose change.

Mother looked at them for a moment and said, "I must have forgotten to mention the baking powder. I made a mistake."

I just looked at her and felt a little sick like the first time I saw the tooth fairy flushing my front tooth down the john. Mistake! My mother?

There were times when I was growing up that I thought she might "break" but she never did. Like the time she told me not to slam the door and the wind blew it shut and even though I was on the other side of the room she reached over and gave me a rap. All she said was, "That was for all the times you slammed the door and I never caught you."

Perfection in parents is an unwritten law. Children seem to sense it right from the beginning. I was telling a story one day of how when my son was a baby I was bathing him on the dryer in the kitchen and turned my back for just a moment. He fell onto the floor. As I told the story he was standing in the doorway eavesdropping and shouted, "Hey Mom, you made a mistake!"

"Bite your tongue," I said. "I just wanted to see if you would bounce."

I have always found parental perfection to be a pain in the neck. I mean it. It's rotten being right all the time ... even when you're wrong. It's awesome to always be on the side of goodness, right, and reason. So many times I wanted to lean over and whisper to my child, "I blew it." But I remembered my mother's admonition, "Give 'em an inch ... and they'll take a mile."

I hope there is a mother in the East who has broken the humble barrier. I hope it starts a trend among parents who can admit to being human.

It would not only raise the age of innocence .. it would lower the age of forgiveness ... and you can't start too young for that.

Big Brothers, Sisters set plans for annual walkathon on May 6

Plans are underway for the annual Charlevoix County Big Brothers, Big Sisters Walkathon.

The 22-mile hike will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. May 6 along a new route this year, Gayle Kaczynski, Big Brothers, Big Sisters board member, said.

"We changed the route so that we could avoid the major highways in the county and make the walkathon a little safer," Mrs. Kaczynski said.

The new route will begin at the Charlevoix Elementary School and go down a short portion of U.S. 31 to the Boyne City Road to Burgess Road to Pincherry Road and back to the Boyne City Road.

Lunch will be provided to all of the hikers. Prizes will also be awarded to the youngest and oldest walkathon participants and to the person collecting the most money. Prizes will also be given to the first place finisher from the high school, middle school and elementary school.

The week following the walkathon two prizes will be awarded to walkathon participants from a drawing of all the entrants.

All of the money from the walkathon will go to the Charlevoix County Big Brothers, Big Sisters organization unless the walker wishes to designate part of it to another organization. Then 60 percent will go to Big Brothers, Big Sisters and 40 percent to the organization of the walker's choice.

Three county buildings to receive face liftings

The three county buildings – the Court House, Annex, and Sheriff's Department – will undergo a facelifting this summer, thanks to a Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) grant.

County Planner John Hess reports that the county has received $26,000 with which to hire six people to do the work. He points out that it is not regular maintenance work but extra work that will have to be done.

Among the jobs to be done, according to Hess, are painting the inside and outside of the Annex, cleaning and painting the floors in the dog pond, cleaning the chimney at the Court House, washing and painting the walls in the Court House, painting the floors in the basement, sealing the parking lot at the jail, putting sealer on the brick wall, upstairs Court House, yellow lining the parking lot, repairing heat tapes on Annex, removing two antennas on Annex, tarring garage roof, and painting entrance way covers.

Besides the building work, the crew will do some yard work at the county building complex, the Sheriff's Department, and at Whiting Park.

Meet Charlevoix ...Ronald Conkle

Ronald Conkle

Ronald Conkle has been administrator of Grandview Medical Care Facility since June 6. This week the Courier talks with him about his first 10 months, and about the new Supervised Residential Care addition, for which the county is levying one mill over a three-year period.

COURIER: Have you made any changes at the Facility since you took over?

CONKLE: Some. We have adopted a new perspective, a new goal -- "Gracious Living". In keeping with this concept, we have developed a new beauty shop, an art gallery, and a prototype room. We have also put in new hall floors and carpeted the entryways. In addition, the laundry has been upgraded, a conference room allocated, office areas reassigned, and a newspaper initiated. We have joined with the East Jordan Community Education department in a work experience program to provide outreach and a pool of trained potential employees. The general overall restyling includes a new paint job in the halls, mirrors and bulletin boards on the hall walls, roller blinds for light control in the day room, and furniture placements to induce a feeling of comfort and ease.

COURIER: Did the Tag Day money help with any of this?

CONKLE: Yes. 1976 Tag Day money bought the day room furniture, the public address music system, and the draperies. 1977 Tag Day money is allocated to furniture in the west wing parlor, wheelchairs, and other incidentals.

COURIER: How is Grandvue classified insofar as nursing homes are concerned?

CONKLE: It is a Medicare, Blue Cross, and Medicaid Certified Skilled Long Term Care Facility. It is operated by the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services.

COURIER: How large is Grandvue?

CONKLE: We have 73 patient beds. During 1977 they were occupied 99.2 percent of the time.

COURIER: Are all your patients elderly?

CONKLE: Mostly. We have one 17 year old, three middle-aged patients, and the rest are over 65. However, there is no restriction on the age of patients we accept.

COURIER: Where does Grandvue's income come from?

CONKLE: From Medicare, Medicaid, personal resources of patients, Charlevoix County, and a small amount from other sources.

COURIER: Which supplies the greater part of your income?

CONKLE: Medicaid, by far, but we did not receive as much of that this last year as we thought we would.

COURIER: How did your income compare with expenses last year?

CONKLE: Our expenses exceeded income by $78,350, which is the amount the operation of Grandvue cost Charlevoix County. This amounts to an average of $2.97 per patient day.

COURIER: When do you anticipate the new Residential Care addition will be started?

CONKLE: We plan on groundbreaking next April and occupancy about the first of 1980.

COURIER: What will the addition consist of?

CONKLE: There will be 10 residence rooms, each capable of handling three persons. However, they are adaptable for two persons, such as a husband and wife. There will also be a dining room, bathing rooms, utility rooms, etc. It will be entirely separate from the present building. The patients will eat separately, although all the food will be cooked in the present kitchen.

COURIER: How does Supervised Residential Care differ from Skilled Care?

CONKLE: The Skilled Care facility has nurses around the clock, a staff to perform a lot of nursing services. We will probably not have any nurses in the Residential Care unit. People will just live and dine there, and have what might be called "maid service."

COURIER: How will the cost of Residential Care compare with Skilled Care?

CONKLE: It will cost about one-third as much.

COURIER: Is Residential Care common in medical care facilities?

CONKLE: No. So far as we know, this will be the first one attached to a Skilled Medical Care Facility. However, we understand that Benzie County is watching our progress and Antrim County is considering a similar addition. I would like to say, however, that it is due to Mr. Tillen's (Social Services Department) efforts that this addition is becoming a reality.

COURIER: What did you do before you came to Grandvue?

CONKLE: I was administrator of a 160-bed private Medical Care Facility in the Detroit area. I've been in the business over six years now. Before that I was executive director of Junior Achievement in Lansing and an industrial engineer and salesman.

COURIER: Tell us about your family.

CONKLE: My wife, Patricia, is a Magistrate in East Jordan, and we have two girls, twins Alyssa and Rebecca. They are seven years old.

COURIER: Do you like Charlevoix County?

CONKLE: I have really enjoyed the last 10 months here and am looking forward to being here a long time. We have a great staff, they're doing a great job, and I'm happy to be working with then.

Legislators divided on solution to spiraling property taxes

Legislators as well as taxpayers are in disagreement about what should be done about the skyrocketing property tax situation in Michigan.

Don Smith, Charlevoix Township trustee, found this out after he wrote letters to more than a dozen legislators directly involved with taxation committees as well as to those elected officials representing Northern Michigan and to candidates seeking election to those offices.

Smith asked the legislators what their solutions were to the property tax problems. The township trustee penned his letter the week after notices of property assessment increases had been sent to area residents. Some people in Charlevoix Township had received assessment increases of up to 40 percent.

Several of the legislators informed Smith that they favored the Tax Limitation Proposal, which state voters are attempting to get on the November ballot through a petition drive.

The tax limitation proposal would put a freeze on taxes, so that if the property valuations increased more than the cost of living in a given year, the millage rate would be lowered so that the amount of tax charged to property owners would remain the same.

The Tax Limitation Proposal is similar to Proposal C, which was narrowly defeated during the 1976 general election.

Sen. Bob Davis, Rep. Claude Trim and Robert Wise, candidate for the 37th District Senate seat, all favor the Tax Limitation proposal.

"It is my firm belief that the only relief this year will come from a ballot drive by the voters," Sen. Davis wrote. "I fully support efforts in this direction."

Davis said he had also introduced legislation to relieve the tax burden on homeowners by shifting the emphasis from the property tax to the state income tax. This legislation had met with much opposition, however.

Rod Brown, another candidate for the 37th District Senate seat, suggested that a solution to the property tax problem in Northern Michigan would be in changing the funding of the school system.

"The current formula must be changed to include the income levels of Northern taxpayers as a factor in figuring the state school aid payments," Brown said. "With 70 to 80 percent of property taxes now being used for school operations, one realizes the tremendous burden we Northern taxpayers are shouldering to keep our schools open."

Sen. Jack Welborn suggested four things that might alleviate the property tax burden. He suggested that the sales study approach for determining property value be thrown out and replaced with on-site appraisals of the value of the property.

He also believes that agricultural land value should be determined by the production capacity and that the equalization law should be changed to make the assessments 48 percent of the value.

"Determining property value is not an exact science, but a matter of judgment," he said. "Therefore, I feel that State Equalized Value should be reduced from 50 percent to 48 percent and allow for a range of 2 percent without getting an equalization penalty factor.

Smith said he found all of the proposals interesting but he isn't sure if any of them hold the answer to the problem.

Mayor Supernaw appoints

Mayor Sam Supernaw has appointed new committees for the various city departments.

Charlevoix Common Council members serve on the various committees, discussing problem areas and making recommendations for the entire common council and the mayor to act on. Each ward is represented by one member on the committees.

The committees and their members for 1978-79 are: Finance and Budget, George Plumm, chairman; Stub Swanson, and Jeff Porter; Utilities and Streets, Stub Swanson, chairman; George Plumm and Ray Wood; Police, Fire and Ordinance, Earl Muma, chairman; Ivan Whitley and Jeff Porter; Marina, Parks, Airport and Cemetery, Ray Wood, chairman, Ivan Whitley and George Plumm; Ecology, Land Use and Economic Development, Ivan Whitley, chairman; Ray Wood, and Earl Muma; Recreation, Public Buildings, Planning, Jeff Porter, chairman; Stub Swanson and Earl Muma.

FAITH TEACHES KINDNESS TO ALL LIVING CREATURES

Many conscientious parents drill their children in the use of "please", "thank you" and the various forms of good conduct toward human beings, and yet are unaware that they may then go outside and mistreat the family pet or chase lizards around a nearby field to catch and harass them. Unchecked, this becomes an apparently acceptable outlet for rebellion and frustration. The proper early training, reinforced by your own example, should include kindness toward all of God's living creatures. The Church and Sunday school of your choice can do much to instill this benevolent feeling, which will be reflected also in their attitude toward their fellow human beings and will set the pattern for the conduct of their entire lives. They will realize the importance of all life in the wonder of God's creation.

George Richardson appointed commercial division head

George Richardson has been appointed the new commercial sales manager for Ski and Shore of Charlevoix.

Richardson and four other salesmen staff the commercial sales division of the real estate office located in the west end of the building on the corner of Bridge Street and Park Avenue.

George Richardson

"Our intent for the commercial sales division is to provide a qualified active commercial investment service to people in this area," the new sales manager explained. "We will provide sales counseling and marketing of investment real estate for both buyers and sellers in this area."

Richardson has attended nine seminars on real estate, investment, business opportunities and taxation in the last eight months to prepare for his new position. He is also a candidate for graduate realtor institute and certified commercial investment member designations.

He also holds a bachelor's degree and a masters in business administration with a major in marketing from Northwestern University.

Richardson worked for Ski and Shore on a part time basis from 1973 to 1977 when he became a fulltime employee of the real estate agency.

Two Ski and Shore Salesmen earn associate broker title

Two salesmen for Ski and Shore of Charlevoix have received their associate brokers licenses.

Richard Lobenherz and Roger Shepard both have qualified for associate broker status by successfully completing a State of Michigan examination. The men who handle general real estate sales for Ski and Shore will now be able to handle closings for customers as well as advise them about residential and commercial real estate ventures.

Lobenherz, who also holds a bachelors degree with a concentration in real estate from the University of Michigan, has worked in real estate since 1975 and has been associated with Ski and Shore for two years.

Shepard has had his real estate license since 1962 and has been working for Ski and Shore for the last three years.

Children's clothing store to open in shopping mall

A children's clothing store will soon be moving into the Captain's Corner Shopping Center on M-66.

Captain's Kids will be the name of the new store managed by Martha Themm of Charlevoix. Mrs. Themm will be working with Pat and Dick Walker, owners of the Tots to Teens children's clothing store in Gaylord.

"My husband and I have seven children between us," Mrs. Themm said explaining how she got into the children's clothing business. "All of the kids are in school now and I wanted to put whatever talents I have to use.

"So I thought I would try my hand at this."

Mrs. Themm said her children were excited about their mother's venture into business and they have been helping her decorate the store.

The 1,750 square foot clothing store will be located next to Barb's Hallmark Harbor in the shopping center.

This is Mrs. Themm's first experience in retail sales but she feels that working with the Walkers, who will act as consultants, she will be able to learn the business quickly.

Mrs. Themm plans to carry clothing for children from infant size to size 14. Some of the lines of clothing she plans to include in the store are: Carters, Healthtex, Her Majesty, Billy Kid and Wrangler.

In addition to the boys and girls clothing, Mrs. Themm plans to have accessories for the children too.

The store will open in the shopping center May 1.

Ferry opens in May

The Ironton Ferry, which spent the winter in Traverse City being inspected by the Coast Guard, equipped with a new engine, and generally overhauled is expected to be back in service by the middle of May.

Last year, the ferry operated between April 18 and December 10 and carried 43,054 cars, the annual report of the County Road Commission shows.

This was 12,726 fewer cars than crossed the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix in 1978, which was a record year for the ferry, due probably to Bicentennial traveling.

Patrick W. LaFreniere Dies

ST. JAMES, Beaver Island - - Funeral services for Patrick W. LaFreniere, 68, who died unexpectedly Saturday at the Charlevoix Area Hospital where he had been a patient for three days, were held Monday at Holy Cross church. The Rev. Charlevoix tennis team looks good this winter

"We have the potential to do very well this season," Wright said. "I expect to win the region.

"Of course, that's my goal every year, but I think we can do it. And it's always a goal of the tennis team to beat Petoskey."

The Rayders only losses last year were to Petoskey and Alpena.

"We haven't lost to a Class C or D school in three years," the coach said.

The Rayder netmen are coming off a 9-4 season and are looking forward to a full schedule of 15 dual meets and three tournaments including the Boyne Mountain Invitational, Alpena Invitational and the conference championships.

The team has been practicing since two weeks before spring vacation. They started with some drills and running, the coach said, but rain has hampered any court practice that the team has had.

Challenge matches just started last week to determine where the various players belonged on the team.

The tennis team's first meet with Grayling was rescheduled from last week for this Wednesday because of the cold weather and because neither team has been able to get much practice in.

Girls track season opens on Tuesday

Track season was expected to open for the Charlevoix High School girls' track team Tuesday as the Rayders traveled to Boyne City for a meet against the Ramblers.

Coach Dennis VanGuilder said his team would be ready for the meet. The girls have been practicing since March 21 but most of their drills and workouts have been inside due to the poor weather. They had their first workout on the track last week.

Several returning lettermen will be an important part of the team this year, VanGuilder said. Those lettermen are: Marie Buday, Cris Culbertson, Irene Cutler, Chris Jones, Tina Klams, Karen Lamereaux, Chris Lehman, Tami Mann, Tami Noirot, Carole Osterberg and Corinne Ranger.

"We also have a large corps of freshmen who are out for the team," VanGuilder said. "They are going to provide a lot of spirit and they will help build the team for the coming years."

VanGuilder, who is assisted by Mary Gengle with coaching duties, has 38 girls out for the team.

"We have a bunch of good kids," the coach said. "How well we do will depend on their attitude and if they can keep their spirits up.

"We have some people with talent and ability and we have some members with a lot of desire and together they should do well."

VanGuilder said the field events would be the stronger events of the Rayder team. Hurdles, long jump, high jump and shot put are very strong areas for the team. There are also some good sprinters on the team who will carry some of the track events.

"We're looking forward to the season," he said. "It looks like Rogers City is the team to beat again this year. They have taken the title for the last six years."

In addition to the regular dual meets, the Rayders will also participate in the Chip Relays, Rogers City Relays, Petoskey Relays and the Newberry Invitational.

Rain hampers practice for boys' track team

Rain has hampered early spring training for the Charlevoix High School boys track team, but things are shaping up fast.

"We look pretty good," Coach Plas Presnell said. "I think we'll give Rogers City (the defending league champions) a run for their money.

"Rogers City looks like they'll be pretty good again this year and Petoskey and Gaylord will be good, too. It should be a real good conference and we'll be ready for it."

Presnell said several members of the team had the potential to take top honors in the conference.

"Todd Williams in the 880, Jeff Drenth in the 2 mile and Mark Russell in the 1 mile all have a chance to take conference chamionships," the coach said.

"And Tom Jones has an outside chance to take the state title in the shot put. He took third place last year and we think he has a real good chance for first."

Presnell said the team has been practicing since spring break but it didn't start working out on the track until Thursday.

"The weather has been bad and we haven't been able to get the track ready," he said. "Of course all of the other schools are having the same problem."

In addition to the four regular meets, the team will also participate in the Chip Relays, Petoskey Relays and the Soo Invitational.

The team won't be going to the Rudyard Relays this year because it conflicts with the date for the conference meet.

The teams first meet was Tuesday afternoon.

SO SIMPLE

To many people, it may seem a far-fetched idea for the chiropractor to confine his work to the spine alone, when perhaps, remote parts of the body are diseased. Superficial thought would seem to indicate that the organ or part affected should be dealt with. These same people think nothing of it when they walk into the modern living room and push the wall switch to light the globe suspended from the ceiling. They realize a contact is made which forms a connection between the source of current and the globe itself.

This is exactly what the chiropractor does. Nerves may be compared with a very complex system wherein the brain is the source of vital energy for all function in the body. This vital energy sent from the brain through the nerves may be compared to electricity in a lighting system. It makes no difference whether it be heart, stomach, kidneys, or some other organ–each depends for its normality upon the supply of vital energy conveyed to it, through nerves, from the brain.

Often these nerves become squeezed where they leave the spine, and the organ supplied by them is affected in degree to which vital energy is thus cut off. The chiropractor "turns on the switch" and permits full expression of vital energy. Health is natural consequence.

The nerve system is the power plant of the human body. It should be checked and guarded against untoward friction and short circuits. There is a scientific way of doing this. Careful examination of the spinal column will disclose the exact condition of this important control center. Another Life & Health Article from Dr. Jeffrey Ricks D.C., Charlevoix, 547-4691.

The Leaning Tree

When is an alligator pear not an alligator pear? When it's an avocado.

Avocados are available year around but October is a peak supply month.

Avocados have one other unusual characteristic; they do not ripen on the tree. They must be detached and held at room temperature to ripen for eating. Select firm avocados at the market and ripen them at home. This way, the fruit will not have bruises from shopper mishandeling in the market. Avoid buying avocados that have dark, soft, sunken spots on their surface or appear badly bruised, for the flesh underneath is sure to be affected.

Don't pinch avocados as they bruise easily. Test for ripeness by cradling an avocado in the palm of the hand and gently pressing. If it gives, it is ready to eat. Another very simple at-home test for ripeness consists of sticking a toothpick in the fruit at the stem end. If it goes in easily, the avocado is ready to eat. Once ripe, they keep very well in the refrigerator.

When preparing avocados, use the light touch. For half-shells, cut the avocado lengthwise, then twist gently to separate halves. Tap the seed with a sharp knife edge, twist slightly and lift out seed.

To peel half-shells, place cut side down in palm of hand and strip off peeling. To keep the bright color, sprinkle cut avocado with lemon, lime or pineapple juice. In storing half of an avocado in the refrigerator, do not peel or remove the seed until just before using. Brush the cut surface with lemon, lime or pineapple juice to prevent discoloration and store in plastic wrap.

To make avocado balls, simply use a melon scoop, working on an unpeeled half. These make an attractive, tasty garnish. Avocados can also be peeled lengthwise and cut in slices, diced or cut into cubes. To mash avocado, use a fork, blender or a food mill.

GROW AN AVOCADO PLANT

You can grow a lovely avocado house plant from an avocado seed. Wash seed in tepid water, removing all pulp. Suspend seed (broad end down) into a water-filled jar by driving three toothpicks into the sides for support. The water should cover about half of the seed. Place in a warm location out of direct sunlight. Add water as needed.

When seed starts to crack, it is ready to start sprouting. This can take several weeks or months. Once the root appears, plant the seed in rich, humus-type soil in a clay pot. Leave the seed about half exposed (above the soil).

After a few weeks, a main stem will appear and will grow rapidly. When it gets about six or seven inches high, cut it off much as it pains you to do so. This action will result in a thick, bushy, branched plant rather than a spindly one.

From here on treat your avocado plant like most other house plants. Give it a little sun but not direct sunlight, a little water as the soil dries out and an occasional serving of plant food.

24 building permits issued

Twenty-four building permits were issued by the Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection during the month of March. This was three times as many as were issued in February, indicating that the spring building boom is about to begin.

Four of the permits were for new residences, one in East Jordan, two in Eveline Township, and one in Boyne Valley Township. Total cost of the four new homes will be $128,050.

Permits for nine additions to residences were also issued, six in Boyne City, one in Bay Township, one in Evaline Township, and one in Eveline Township. Total cost of these additions will be $12,992.

Permits were also issued for remodeling two residences in Melrose Township, amounting to $7,000, one garage, two commercial additions, remodeling two commercial buildings, three mobile home additions, and one sign.

Dick Mayhew, Building Code Inspector, also reported that he made 18 different inspections during the month. Two of these were final inspections, three were rough inspections, six were inspections of footings and foundations, five were on-site inspections, one was a fire damage inspection, and one was an extra inspection.

Mayhew also attended three meetings, three building trades seminars, one miscellaneous meeting, and issued one stop-work order.

County ADC caseload up

The number of families receiving Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) funds in the state dropped slightly in December, but the caseload increased slightly in Charlevoix County.

Two more families were added to the Charlevoix County rolls increasing the number from 199 to 201. A total of $54,137.83 was paid to the families with an average of $269.34 going to the group receiving the funds.

The case load also went up in neighboring Emmet County from 242 to 244 families receiving ADC payments. In Emmet County a total of $53,526.41 was paid out with the families receiving an average of $219.37 in ADC payments.

For the entire state, the caseload dropped from 194,637 to 194,048 with a total of $59,235,016.55 being paid out to ADC recipients at an average of $305.26 per family.

Motor skill development important

We often assume that our children learn how to use their muscles with little or no help from adults. We forget that children have a growth and development pattern that requires special activities at the different stages for using their growing muscles. We think that somehow the basic skills "just happen" through a mystical process called "development."

Studies in motor development show that it is very important for infants and young children to acquire and practice a wide variety of basic motor skills. Children need practice and guidance in developing these skills in order to master the use of their muscles as adults.

Summer time offers an ideal opportunity for us to redirect our attentions toward helping children acquire and practice some of these developmental skills. Adults who take time to play with their children will also find a bonus in improved physical exercise for themselves.

If your children are in early childhood consider activities that will develop fundamental motor skills. Think of activities that will include: bounce, catch, crawl, creep, dodge, dribble, fall, gallop, hop, jump, kick, leap, pull, push, roll, run, sit, skip, slide, stand, strike, stop, sway, swing, throw, trap, turn, walk, etc.

Consider specific sports, skills, and dances for your older children such as canoeing, diving, swimming, tennis, volleyball, etc. and transitional motor skills like, rope skipping, paddle tennis, wiffleball, surface diving, etc.

Small muscle skills and rhythm activities are also very important to young children. The next time your children are bored and at loose ends for something to do organize them into play activities that will develop their physical growth – and join them.

Exercise is good for all!

County 4-H'ers show their many skills

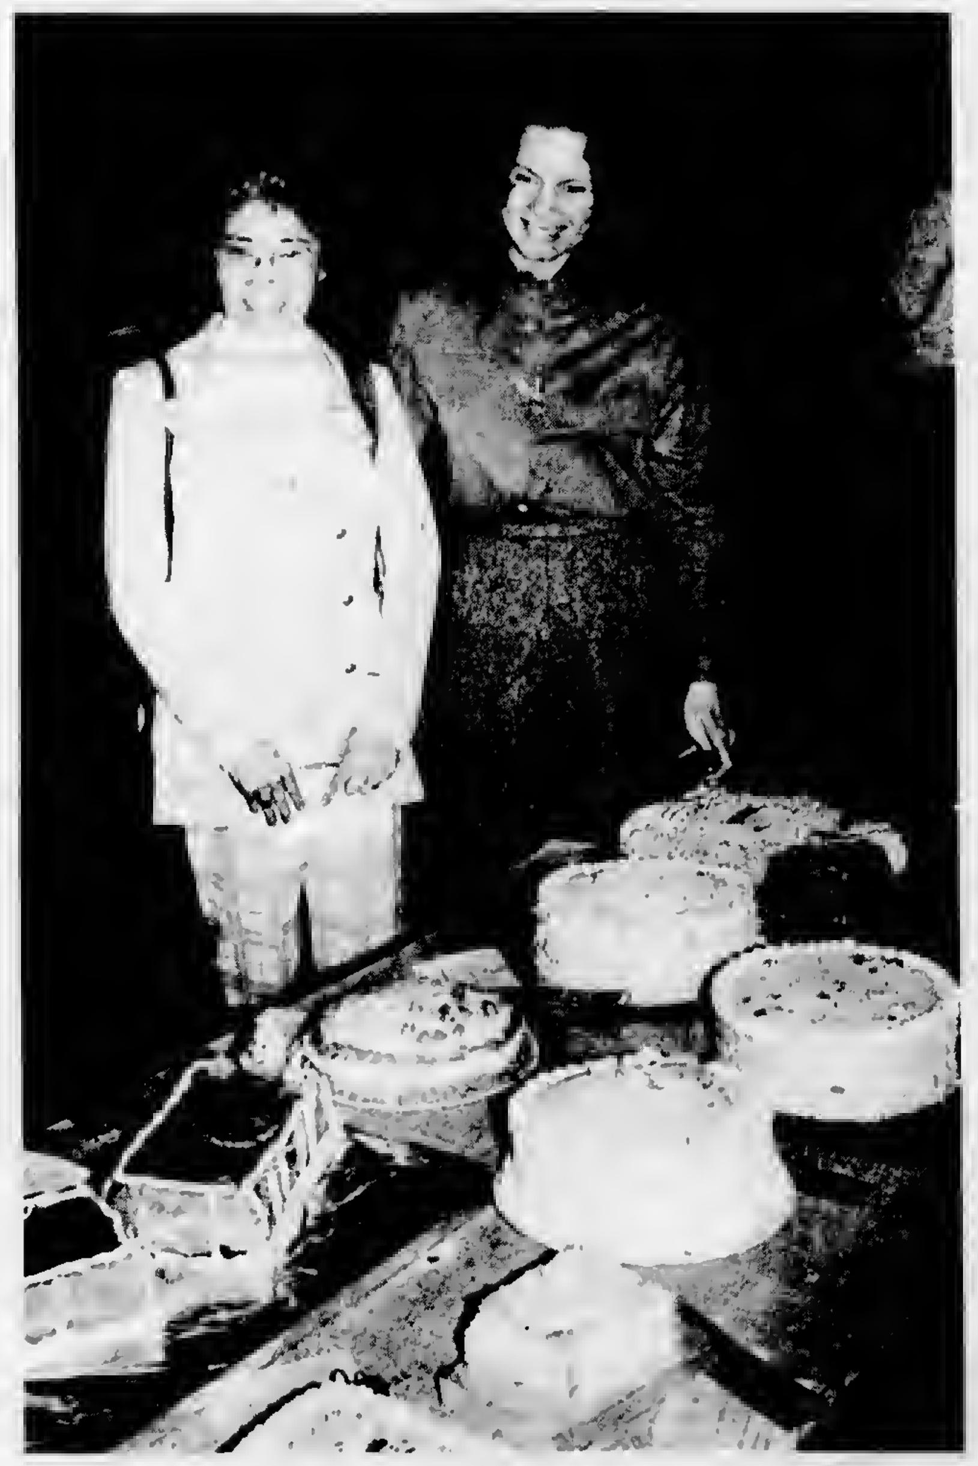
BETTY HORROCKS, regional 4-H agent, and Ed Rebman, Charlevoix County extension agent, examine craft and sewing entries during 4-H Achievement Day Saturday at East Jordan High School. Ms. Horrocks supervises 4-H activities in Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan and Presque Isle counties.

JENNIFER MICHAEL, a member of the Jordan Valley Riders, shows her brother, Paul, the blue ribbon she won for a waxed macrame bracelet she made as a 4-H Achievement Day project.



CAKES BAKED and decorated by 4-H Club members in Charlevoix County are admired by Mrs. Austin (Hinako) Regier and Mrs. Roger (Gretsie) Ames of Charlevoix. The cakes were submitted for judging at Achievement Day.

Henrietta Boss

Mrs. Boss has 85th birthday

Henrietta Boss celebrated her 85th birthday quietly last week at a special luncheon at the home of Margaret Martin.

Mrs. Boss, who moved to the United States from the Netherlands when she was eight years old, has lived all over the Northern Michigan area.

Her parents settled in the Central Lake area and then bought a farm in Ellsworth. She also lived in Elk Rapids, Eastport, Mancelona and Grand Rapids before moving to Charlevoix.

Mrs. Boss is accomplished at crocheting and spends her time making afghans for friends and relatives.

Her family also keeps her busy. One daughter, Mary Boss, lives in the Charlevoix area, as do two grandchildren, Donna, Kelly and Marsha Himebaugh and four great grandchildren.

She also has a daughter and son in Grand Rapids as well as five grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Mrs. Boss said she had no idea what the secret to a long life is, but she enjoys living.

City building permits handled by county

Residents of the City of Charlevoix will now receive their building permits from the office of the Charlevoix County Building Inspector rather than from city officials.

As of April 1, the county took over the issuance of Charlevoix's building permits, thus completing service to all of the political bodies in the county.

The county building inspector's office is in the lower level of the county building annex. Applicants for building permits should obtain whatever other permits the city requires such as zoning and water hookup permits, before going to the county building inspector.

City officials will continue to inspect any construction started under a building permit issued before April 1. However, all new construction will be inspected by the city office.

Reppers return

Former Charlevoix residents have recently returned from a three-week visit to Hawaii.

Skip and Sharon Repper of Sault Ste. Marie visited the island state on a delayed honeymoon. The couple was married last fall in Charlevoix and Repper was transferred to the Soo with the U.S. Coast Guard.

Mrs. Repper is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Olson of Charlevoix.

ONE OF THE multiple reading groups competing for the Charlevoix High School forensics team consists of Janeen Boal, Wendi Wright and Mary Egler.

County-wide Camp considered for kids

The feasibility of operating a county-wide children's camp at Whiting Park this summer is now being studied by the Park Commission, County Planner John Hess, and Recreation Directors Gary Heise and Mike Davis.

The planning group has been promised the services of four Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) people to conduct the program.

The problem of transporting children from Charlevoix to the park is now being studied. It is hoped that a mini bus will be available for the purpose.

Preliminary plans call for a varied program for boys and girls between 8 and 13. Heise envisions such activities as nature hikes, fishing, cookouts, wilderness survival seminars, backpacking, ball teams, drama, music, archery, and many others.

"This will not be a baby sitting program," Hess emphasized, "but a wurthwhile summer experience for the children." The camp will be free but there will be u charge for any transportatian that is provided.

Consumers Power Company offers new solar film

A prize-winning motion picture on solar energy is now available ta Northern Michigan residents through the Cheboygan office of Consumers Pawer Company.

The sound-color motion picture shows the historical development of solar energy, present solar applications and future developments including a futuristic city relying on solar energy. Much of the film was photographed in Michigan at homes and other buildings where solar energy is already used.

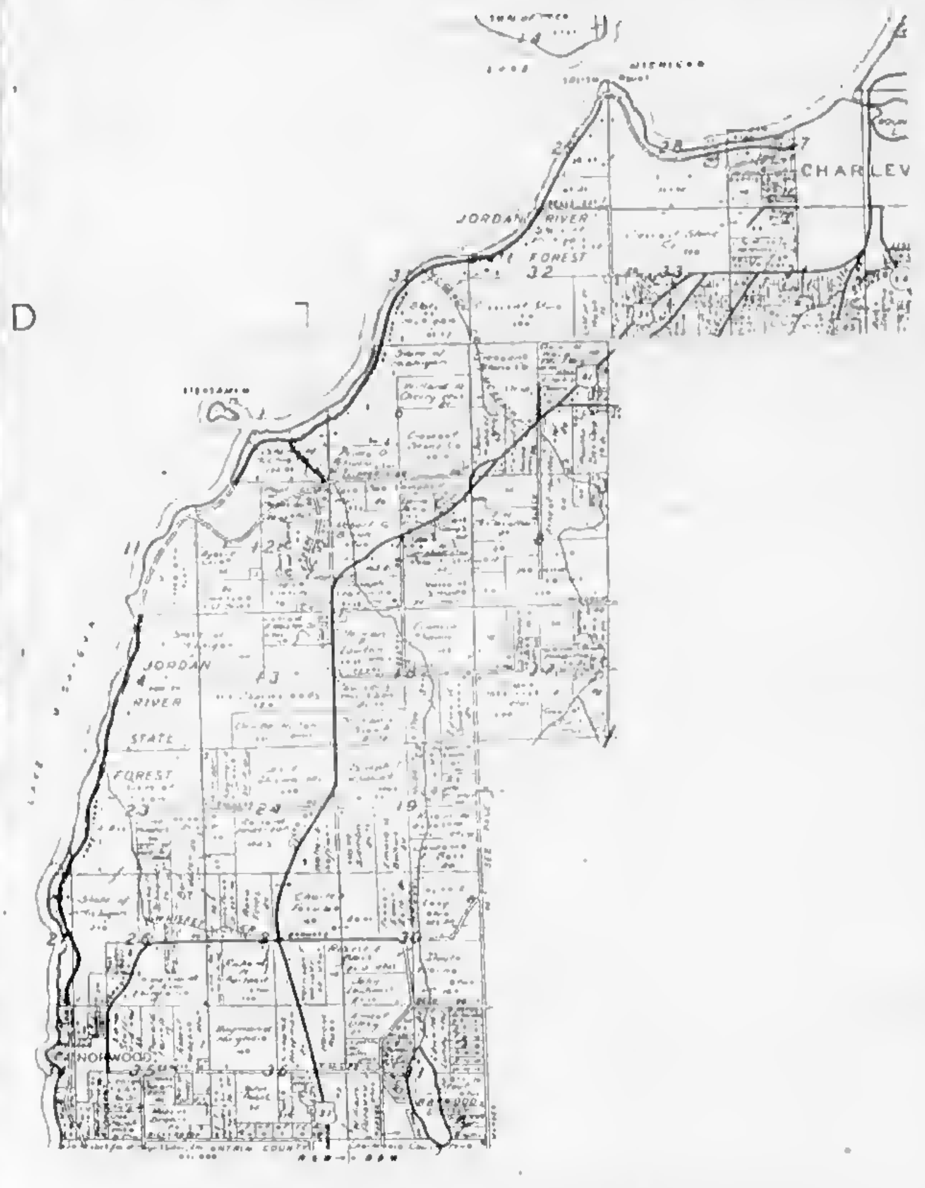
Lake Shore closing up for discussion again



THIS MAP SHOWS the portion of Lake Shore Drive that the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) would like to close in order to begin operating a state park in the Bell's Bay area. A public hearing on the matter will be held at 8 p.m. May 5 in the Charlevoix County Building court room.

On May 5, the Charlevoix County Road Commission will hold a public hearing ta determine if it should abandon portions of county road, Lake Shore Drive.

The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) requested the hearing for the road abandonment. The DNR would like to gain control of the road so that it can establish a state park in the Bell's Bay-Fisherman's Island area.

The hearing is slated for 8 p.m. in the Charlevalx Caunty Building court room.

It is the second such hearing that the DNR has requested on the proposed road abandonment. The first request in 1975 was drowned out by the protests of more than 100 people who opposed the road closing and the development of a state park in the area, to be knawn as Fisherman's Island State Park.

According to James T. Andrus, assistant regional parks supervisor, who is responsible for the development of the Fisherman's Island State Park, the whole idea for the park began in 1974.

"We held a public hearing to determine whether or not we should establish a state park in the area," Andrus recalled.

Fisherman's Island was privately owned at that time and the state had been offered a chance to purchase the property. Andrus said the farestry division was not interested in purchasing the island and that the parks division wasn't interested in owning the island, either, unless it would lead ta the development of a state park.

"At the time of the first hearing ta determine whether ar not to try and establish a park, the general reaction of the residents at the meeting was that it was better to have a state park in the area than to let a developer purchase the land and subdivide it," the parks supervisor said.

So the parks division set about clearing the way for the establishment of a state park in the area. The next step was to gain control of portion of Lake Shore Drive from Charlevoix County so that the state could fence off the road and begin constructing a new entrance to the park.

But when the DNR went to the road commission with a request for the road abandonment, it was turned duwn following the protests of the residents.

"The parks department continued to purchase the land within the project boundaries of the proposed park and now we're ready to seek abandonment of the road again," Andrus explained.

This time the DNR has done a little more home work in drumming up support for the plan. It has gotten the approval of the county board of commissioners, the Charlevoix Township Board and the Norwood Township board for the abandonment of the road and the establishment of the park.

"We didn't do that before because we figured everybody was in favor of the park," the supervisor explained.

The elected officials agree that abandonment of the road would give the DNR more control of the area and that would prevent the unauthorized camping and partying which now takes place in the area. Some of the goings on in the area have developed into a nuisance to other campers trying to enjoy the area and into a law enforcement problem for the townships and the county.

If the road commission approves the abandonment of the road, the DNR plans to immediately construct a gate at the end of the paved road in the current campsite area. All of the land inside the gate area would operate according to established state park rules.

No noncampers would be able to enter the park area after 10 p.m. during the summer months. Alsa all unauthorized camping, that is all camping is undesignated areas will be halted and all off road vehicle activities, especially those taking place on the beach between Inwood Creek and Clipper View would be stopped

A ranger and a trailer for his residence would also be moved into the park area to enforce the state park rules.

"If we don't get some sort of control of the area soon it will be so exploited that it will be permanently damaged," Andrus cautioned. "If the area is going to be used by the public it will have to be under some type of control so that it isn't ruined.

"The townships can't really afford to take care of a 3,000 acre park. The costs will only go up. That is why the state is interested in taking care of the area and turning it into a state park.

The octual development of the park area would begin in 1979 with the construction of o new road and entrance to the park through the center of the state land. The north part of the park will be expanded into a camping, picnicking and swimming area, while the southern end of the park will remain pretty much as it is with the addition of some hiking trails.

"But no action on the development of the park will take place without the input of the public first," Andrus said. "And that's the way we've tried to operate all along.

"All we're asking is that people get the facts and make up their own minds about the value of having a state park in this area."

Andrus pointed out that the park would be under restricted hours only during the summer months with it being completely open during hunting, smelt dipping and sucker spearing seasons.

The parks supervisor said that if the road abandonment request was turned down again, the plans for developing the park area would be put an the back burner for a few years.

"Then we test the water again," Andrus said. "The state has invested too much money in the area for it not to do something with it. We'll keep trying."

School board holds line on request for millage levy for coming year

By FRAN MARTIN

The Charlevoix Board of Education decided to hold the line on school millage levy requests Monday night and will seek only the renewal of current millage levies.

The school board will ask voters to approve 1 mill for one year for maintenance and 2.75 mills for three years for operational purposes in the upcoming general election June 12.

The 2.75 mills for operations was approved in 1975 for three years and expired on Dec. 31, 1977. The 1.0 mill for maintenance was approved in 1977 and it will be necessary to renew this mill to continue maintenance.

This mill will be used fur repairing the roof and heoting plont at the elementary school, repairing the roof and continuing the reading program at the Middle School and replacing furniture at the high school. Approval of this millage request will enable the schools to continue existing educational programs and maintenance.

In the June 12 election voters will also name two trustees to the Charlevoix Board of Education. Candidates for the positions ore Mrs. Ardeth Wieland, who is seeking re-election to a four-year term, and Dennis W. Kusina, James J. Haggard, William Kenifeck, Larry G. Lamerand and Otis Elliott who are seeking to fill the second vacancy on the board.

In other action, the board approved the administrative contracts for twu years; appointed a baseball coach; accepted a resignation; approved funds to underwrite the cost of sending the forensic team to the state finals in Ann Arbor; selected brick for use in bricking up the windows at the middle school and delegated election responsibilities.

All administrative contracts were approved for two years. These include those of the superintendent, principals and the business manager.

Judge to recommend candidate for office of prosecutor today

A prospective candidate for the prosecuting attorney's office is expected to be discussed at today's (Wednesday) Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners meeting.

Circuit Judge Martin Breighner is expected to recommend the name of a candidate to the board of commissioners to fill the remainder of Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes' term.

Although Judge Breighner declined to name the candidate prior to the county commissioners meeting today, he did indicate that the man was from o downstate community where he is currently serving in a county prosecuting attorney's office.

Judge Breighner said he did not want to jeopardize the mon's position in his current job by releosing his name to the public before he had been considered for employment by the county commissioners.

The circuit judge, along with a selection committee composed of himself, District Judge David Fershee, Prosecutor Hayes and a member of the county board of commissioners, has been reviewing applicants for the prosecuting attorney's job.

Prosecutor Hayes indicated last month that he intends to resign his post to go into privnte practice. Hayes said he was holding off turning in his resignation until a replocement could be found.

Hayes said he now anticipates tendering his resignation effective June 15.

Hayes announcement of his intended resignation triggered much debate among the county eammissioners about the state of the prosecuting attorney's office. The cammissioners questioned Hayes at length about the virtues uf having a fulltime prosecutor as apposed to having a part time prosecutor for the county.

Prosecutor Hayes is the first full time prosecuting attorney thot Charlevoix County has had.

Hoyes strongly urged the commissioners to consider maintaining the prosecutor's office as a full time position. He believes thot the full time position can serve the residents of Charlevoix County more efficiently and effectively.

The prosecutor did point out that he was having difficulty finding candidates for the position and he urged the board to consider a different pay scale for the position to make it more attractive to area attorneys.

Frank Hoffman, locol attorney, also appeared before the board suggesting they consider two port time people to fill the prosecuting attorney's position. The prosecutor would work three days a week and also maintain a private practice and the assistant prosecuting attorney would work two days a week and maintain a private practice under Hoffman's plan.

The commissioners have not yet arrived to a consensus on the part time-full time question. It is expected that Judge Breighner will recommend that the new prosecuting attorney be hired on a full time basis.

Horton Bay man throws hat in ring for Ruppe's seat

By PEG OHLE

Horton Bay, Charlevoix County, is well known as the playground of young Ernest Hemingway and the home of three famous restaurants that no longer operate.

Now, Horton Bay is in the news as the home of a candidate for the United States House of Representatives. James Vol Hartwell, descendant of Horton Bay pioneers, has put his hat in the ring, seeking the 11th Congressional post being vacated by Philip E. Ruppe.

Not since Alonzo Stroud left Horton Bay in 1905 to serve in the State Legislature has the tiny hamlet had a politician seeking or winning a state or national office.

Hartwell is running as a Democrat, even though he lives in a solid Republican community. However, Carl Skornia has run and been elected township supervisor on the Democratic ticket for several terms.

"I used to be a Republican," Hartwell says, "but I became a Democrat when I worked with McGovern in his campaign for the presidency. I've always voted Democrot and am a member of the lacal Democratic party."

Hartwell intends to conduct his campaign on a person-to-person basis. His organization is all volunteer but not yet fully formed. The 11th Congressional District consists of 27 counties, including all of the Upper Peninsula and the northern part of the Lower Peninsula. Candidates must have a minimum of 1,250 signatures on their petitions to be put on the ballot.

"I plan to have leaders in various areas, people I know or those I meet through party connections," Hartwell says.

"The western UP is important to me or any candidate," he adds. "Emmet and Charlevoix Counties are strongly Republican counties but I hope they will get behind me in the primaries."

Hartwell's interest in politics dates back to his college days. He majored in political science at Central Michigan University, from which he received a Bachelor of Science degree in 1967, and at the University of Hawaii, from which he received a Master of Science degree, also in political science, with emphasis on Asian politics.

Before entering the University of Hawaii, Hartwell served two years with the Peace Corps in Malaysian Borneo as a volunteer and learned to speak Malaysian fluently. He later worked as a staff coordinator for the Peace Corps in the same area. He was also a teacher and college counselor in the Hawaiian Islands.

A world traveler, Hartwell has spent time in Mexico, Japan, the Philippines, Indonesia, India, Israel, and many European countries, including Russia.

It is his knowledge of and interest in foreign affairs that first attracted Hartwell to the Congressional job, he said, when asked why he didn't start his political career at the county or state level.

"I have experience in foreign affairs and know foreign people and countries. I have seen what the lives of people in the Third World are like."

Besides foreign affairs, Hartwell is interested in doing something about unemployment, especially in the Upper Peninsula. He states, further, that his work as a restaurant cook and small retail shop owner has equipped him to understand the problems of the laborer and small business man.

Hartwell is 33 and a bachelor. He is a member of the United Methodist Church and attends Greensky Indian Church.

Auction marks end of Blu Dot Farm

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

The auction of equipment and machinery at Blu Dot Farm began promptly at 10, Saturday morning.

Jim Brannan, local auctioneer, held up a pitch fork.

"Mother's Day's comin', boys. Whodalhear?"

The pitch fork went for $3.

"Come and get yer goodies," the auctioneer hollered over the portable PA system he and his brother, Sam, alternately carried around the Blu Dot Farm's buildings and race track as all the race horse stables's moveable goods–from pitch forks to tractors and snow blowers–went up for sale.

The land mark 189-acre farm itself is being sold separately.

The Robert Dyksterhouse family, which has owned and lived on the farm for the last 20 years, hopes that the land will be sold as a whole.

For years, newborn foals, spindley-legged, gambolling across the fields adjacent to the Boyne City Road, have been as much a part of spring in Charlevoix as the deer grazing on the other side of the road.

"At this point, I don't think I will sell until I find one buyer," Robert Dyksterhouse said.

"I've had opportunities to break it up, but I don't want to," he said as he watched the crowd of anxious buyers gathering in front of the wagon heaped with miscellaneous goods.

After 20 years of raising trotters and pacers – Standardbred horses - for the track, the Dyksterhouses are not entirely giving up the horse business.

The children are keeping up the tradition. Robert Jr. in Greenville, Florida, is in the horse business, his father reports, and Michael at Orlando, is with the Ben White Raceway, working in colt training.

The senior Dyksterhouse explained that for health and business reasons he is selling the farm and moving across the Boyne City Road to property he owns on Oyster Bay.

Dyksterhouse will be devoting his time to developing two new plants that supply the automotive industry with wires and wire end harnesses for new cars, in Mancelona.

Since moving to Boyne City from Grand Rapids more than 20 years ago, Dyksterhouse, an inventor and business enterpreneur has established some 11 small automotive related manufacturing plants, which he in turn sold in order to move onto his next project. Among his patents is the cradle for automobile directional switches. He holds 42 patents on component parts of automobiles.

But, he said, once his sons are finished school, he is thinking of buying a horse farm in Florida and getting back to the breeding, raising and training of trotters and pacers.

Dyksterhouse leaned against a jeep parked near the auctioneer. He was fascinated by the bidding and he admitted somewhat baffled by the whole process.

"I don't want to twist anyone's arm to take these bargains," Jim Brannan's voice boomed across the gathering.

The bargain hunting crowd consisted of farmers, horse owners, antique hunters, neighbors, curious passers-by and a nucleus of auction-addicts – regulars at auctions who buy when the fever hits. The most successful auction addicts often turn around and resell the goods they just purchased for more than their final bids, or as one local horseman did – buy a box full of odds and ends to get one special item, extract the wanted item, and in turn resell the box for his original price.

Brannan, in cowboy hat, overcoat and galoshes over cowboy boots, held up small barrels of horse hoof packing material.

"Don'tcha ever get sore feet? I do," he hollered. He prodded the bidding to $4 a barrel.

By 1 p.m. most of the small items had been sold, including water skis, alpine skis, barbed wire, roofing shingles and piles of small tools and parts.

The crowd moved out toward the race track for the sale of large farm machinery.

Sam Brannan, who spends most of his time as a professor of mathematics at Central Michigan University, commented as he walked to the track. "The auction season is late getting started this year. It is just getting into its prime now here in the north. Spring's late this year."

The brother auctioneers took turns cajoling the crowd and calling out the bidding. Helpers kept track of the bids and displayed the items.

As Sam began the bidding on a York Rake – a plow-like rake used to level ground or tear out roots – his brother shouted to the crowd:

"In all my years of auctioning I only seen one other York Rake. These are rare."

Everyone tittered. An observer muttered, "Don't believe a word of that."

"You buy it, I'll borrow it," was a frequent urging from Jim Brannan.

"My golly, there's a nice V-plow. You could grade the whole Upper Peninsula with that," he nodded toward a man, obviously a heavy bidder that day.

An International Grain Seeder began at $1500 and after considerable haranguing the bidding reached $1700.

A stump grinder went for $800.

Several farmers commented that equipment was going cheaply because the long hard winter had made everyone short of cash.

"On the other hand, Ruth Price, an antique dealer and auction frequenter, observed "Some people get so excited with bidding they pay too much."

It seemed to balance out in the end, at least in the eyes of the Dyksterhouses who reported themselves, "quite happy with the auction. It went really well."

With the horses gone south and the equipment sold, the Blu Dot Farm awaits a new owner.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT DYKSTERHOUSE lean on a truck as they watch the auction proceedings Saturday at Blu Dot Farm

AUCTIONEER BRANNAN holds up a piece of farm equipment for all to see during an auction Saturday at the Blu Dot Farm. The Dyksterhouses are getting out of the horse business in Charlevoix and retiring to their Oyster Bay home on Lake Charlevoix.

New counselor joins staff of CHIP Counseling Center

By PEG OHLE

Terry Smith has joined the CHIP Counseling Center as a counselor and therapist. He joins Oren Schroeder who has been with the Center since it opened in 1978.

Smith comes to Charlevoix from London, Ontario, where he was connected with the University of Western Ontario as a counseling psychologist and community consultant.

A native of Indiana, Smith grew up and attended school in a small town near Fort Wayne. Following graduation from high school, he entered the Army and spent two and a half years in Europe.

College work and outside jobs kept Smith busy for the next few years. He attended night school at the Fort Wayne branch at Purdue University while working for International Harvester. Then he attended Manchester College for four years, and upon graduation took a job in the Manistee Public Schools, teaching languages, counselling, and coaching basketball, track, and cross country.

Later Smith received a Master's and Specialist's degree from Central Michigan University, concurrently teaching in a counseling program there and counseling at Alma College. From CMU he went to Western Ontario.

In a pattern different from that of most people, Smith decided to live in the Charlevoix area and bought property here before he had a job. He knew the Charlevoix area well, having camped many times at Bell's Bay and visited his good friends, Gerry and Jennifer Brindel, at their home in Charlevoix.

Right now, Smith is looking for a home to rent or lease for his family, which consists of Mrs. Smith and their three children, Peri Lynn, 14; Margo Theresa, 13, and Christopher James, 9. Later he will build a home on the 40 acres he owns on a ridge off the Boyne City Road overlooking Lake Charlevoix.

"I am a builder, Smith says. "I spent five years redoing an old home and two and a half years remodeling a suburban basement. If I get time, I will do most of the work on the new house myself. It will be an energy-efficient design utilizing the side of the hill."

Besides building, Smith lists his hobbies as physical conditioning and mushroom hunting. "I feel that physical conditioning is an important part of life. I believe in moderate training. Each day, I spend about an hour outdoors," he says.

Smith's job at CHIP will consist of private, confidential counselling and psychotherapy for individuals, couples, families, and groups, as well as consulting within the community.

"I don't have any answers, Smith remarks, "but the experiences I have had are helpful."

The CHIP Counseling Center is funded by the Woodbury Ransom family, Charlevoix summer residents, in memory of their son Charles A. "Chip" Ransom, who was killed in a boating mishap.

It was organized by members of the First Congregational Church but has no affiliation with the Church

Courtesy reigns in city hall with new atmosphere

Courteous.

That's the word that best describes the new atmosphere which pervaded the city hall last Monday night when Mayor Sam Supernaw presided over his first council meeting.

The change wasn't anything you could really put your finger on. But the tensions and the adversary environment that have characterized Charlevoix council meetings for most of the decade were missing.

Visitors were invited to voice their complaints, make their comments and ask their questions without interruption. Mayor Sam Supernaw and his council heard them out, took notes on their problems and agreed to find the best solutions.

No one was intimidated. No one was subjected to an embarrassing Third Degree. The "did you or did you not" type of question that used to emanate from the head of the table just wasn't asked.

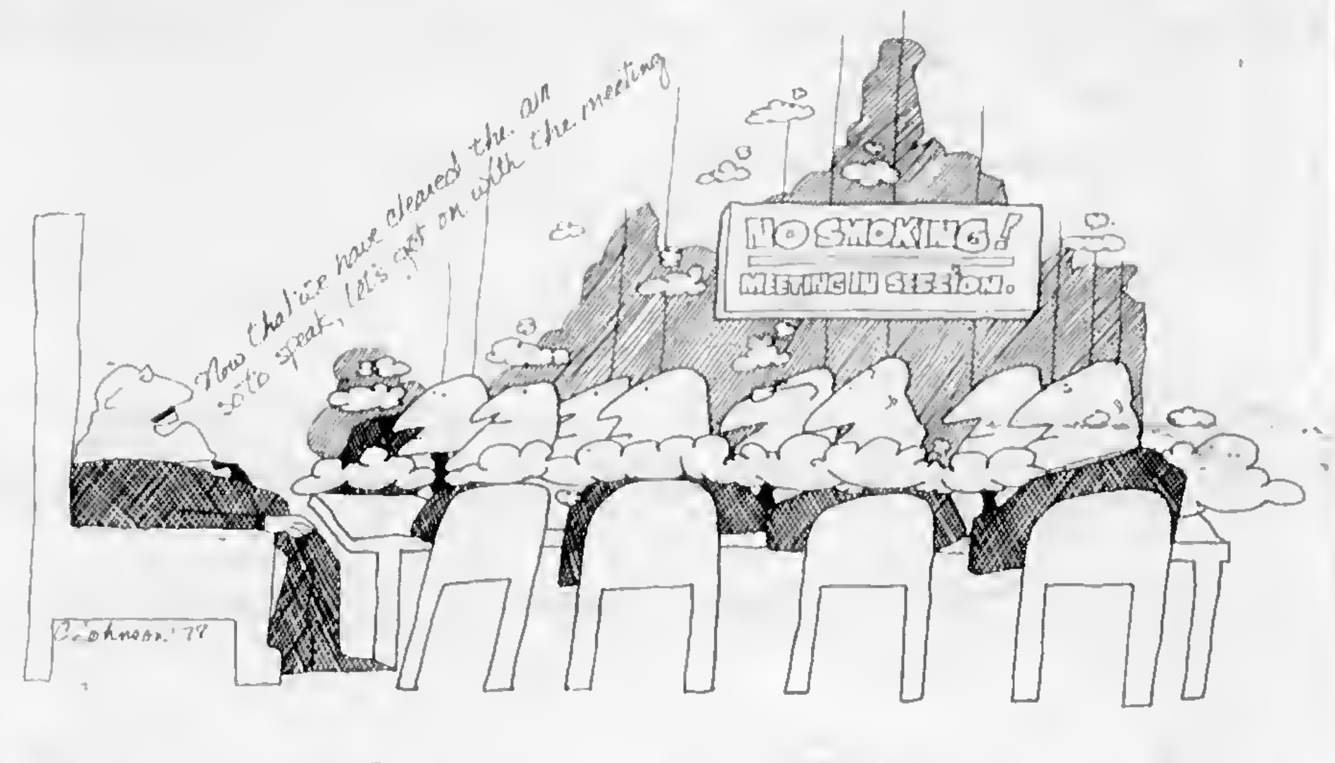
Although some of the suppliants did not receive the answers they wanted, they left with the knowledge that the new mayor and council are there to serve the people of Charlevoix – not to insult them, or chastise them or deliver unsolicited history lessons.

Appearing before the council should not be -- and never should have been – a tramautic experience for the citizens of Charelvoix. After all, the mayor and council are elected by us. They both represent us and are answerable to us when things go wrong.

There should be no "generation gap" between city fathers and the citizens of Charlevoix.

To be sure, there will be times during Mayor Supernaw's administration when tempers will flare and everyone from the mayor on down will become a little hot under the collar. But we are confident that much more can be accomplished -- more rapidly and with less folderol– if courtesy reigns at the council table.

Mayor Supernaw did an excellent job at his first meeting wading through a complicated and lengthy agenda in record time. It is apparent he is going to run a tight ship, which is just what Charlevoix needs at this point in its development.



Now that we have cleared the air so to speak, let's get on with the meeting
NO SMOKING! MEETING IN SESSION.
Bookmaker '77

Council no smoking rule longoverdue and needed

Seasoned smokers were visibly shaken Monday night when the city council voted five to one to ban smoking in the council chamber during regular bi-monthly meetings.

The motion was put on the floor by rookie Councilman Jeff Porter, a nonsmoker, who doesn't feel that he or other nonsmokers should be subjected to noxious fumes from dozens of cigarets, pipes and cigars while doing their civic duty.

He pointed out that the ventilation in the city hall leaves something to be desired.

The motion, fortunately, came at the end of the council meeting when the air was literally blue with smoke – giving his motion more dramatic impact than it would have had earlier in the session.

Of course, Dr. Porter is absolutely right. Smokers over the years have proven themselves a callous lot by lighting up whenever the spirit moves them, regarding of whom they may offend.

In recent years, nonsmokers in droves have been asserting their right to breath clean, unpolluted air. Similar restrictions on smoking have been imposed by other governing bodies. And Michigan restaurants now are required by law to provide special sections for non-smokers.

Even the U.S. Surgeon General has warned that cigarette smoking is dangerous to the health.

So Dr. Porter and the Charlevoix Council were on firm ground when they blew out the smoking lamp Monday night.

Mayor Sam Supernaw assauged hurt feelings to some extent when he said that he would be willing to call an occasional recess during meetings if any of the smokers on the council simply have to have a cigarette break.

Spectators, of course, are free to adjourn to the lobby at any time for a breath of fresh nicotine.

The move was a daring one – but long overdue in light of preset air pollution levels in the Charlevoix council chamber. (B.C.)

Clockwise

An estimated 123 million Americans watched "Holocaust" on TV last week, and for many, particularly the young, it proved to be a traumatic experience.

"Why did Hitler have it in for the Jews?"

"Did you know during the war that Hitler was killing Jews in concentration camps?"

"Why didn't the Jews try to fight back?"

We'll never know the full answer to the first question since it lies in the tangled web of fear and prejudice which has snared so many gentiles into the ranks of anti-semitism over thousands of years. And it has happened not just in our generation, but in many generations and in many countries.

Our own Michigan helped Hitler formulate some of his ideas. A series of articles entitled "The International Jew" appeared in the Dearborn Independent after World War II. The articles claimed a world-wide conspiracy was afoot among Jews to seize control of the world's money supply and other nonsense.

The articles not only had a fairly wide readership at home, but were reprinted in Germany by Adolph Hitler.

However, many Americans objected so loudly to the anti-semetic tone of the articles that Henry Ford, who was publisher of the Independent, agreed to stop publication of the articles. He also made a public apology to the Jewish people.

So Hitler's dislike and mistrust of Jews generally was something more than a personal hang-up. Plenty of misguided souls felt the same way and Hitler probably had little difficulty rounding up willing workers for the crematory at Buchenwald. One man couldn't have killed six million Jews without help. Lots of it.

Did the American people know what Hitler was doing in his concentration camps during the war?

Not really. Oh, there was talk and there was rumors. We knew that he had it in for the Jews, but I don't think anyone in this country at the time really believed that Hitler had embarked upon the systematic genocide of the Jewish people.

And if we had heard such reports, we probably would not have believed them.

I am sure that if we had known what was going on, we would have redoubled our efforts to end the war sooner.

As it was, most Americans did not learn of the horrors of Auschwitz, Buchenwald, Dachau, Beisen and other concentration camps until the Allied forces invited journalists from around the world to visit Germany and German-occupied countries after the war to examine the evidence, take pictures and write stories for consumption at home.

When Detroiters and other Michiganders read first-hand accounts by Malcolm Bingay in the Detroit Free Press, of Hitler's treachery, we knew it was the truth. And we were horrified.

In "Holocaust", most Jews were pictured walking resignedly, without so much as a scrap of resistance, into the gas chambers and to the brink of the burial pits. Undoubtedly, the producers of the show had done their homework and were presenting as factual a picture as possible of "how it was."

I suppose, after years of forced labor and hardships of life in concentration camps, many Jews actually welcomed death as a solution to their problems. I really don't know, but most viewers of "Holocaust" found the stoicism of the Jews as unbelievable as Hitler's barbarism.

"I would rather have been shot running than standing still," commented Betty Washburne of the Petoskey News-Review.

It is sobering to realize that the most barbaric acts of the world has ever known took place within the lifetimes of many of us.

And "Holocaust" should be shown at least once every generation in every country both as an example of what can happen – and as a warning that it must not be allowed to happen again.

Paula Holmes... ...Speaking Her Mind

This week is National Secretary Week and I would like to salute all of the women and men who work as secretaries.

I applaud you. Your job is probably one of the most difficult jobs that exist. I have walked a few miles in a secretary's shoes and believe you me, I had sore feet when I got done.

I was worn to a frazzle trying to keep a smile on my face and to deal with all of the people I encountered as well as to leap tall buildings with a single bound as was expected of me.

It's amazing what you have to know to handle the job of secretary. In addition to being able to type, take dictation and answer the phone, secretaries are also expected to be walking, talking dictionaries and encyclopedias, psychologists, public relations specialists, interior decorators and cooks.

On the more serious side, good secretaries are priceless. The Charlevoix Courier has an excellent secretary, Noreen Kratt. If you happen to call our office this week, why don't you tell her to have a nice day. Or, better yet smile when you see her on the street or when you deal with her in the office.

I had a chance to learn first hand the value of a good secretary a few days ago.

I had a brainstorm last week and decided that I would like to dabble in real estate. The only problem was that I needed a loan to get started.

Having never really established a line of credit I decided my best bet would be to hit my father for the loan. After all, fathers are a little easier to sweet talk than your friendly neighborhood banker. No offense Intended to the bankers, of course.

Excitedly, I dialed the phone number and breathlessly I waited for my father's voice to boam through the receiver. Instead I got my father's secretary.

There's something about his secretary. She somehow always seems to know when I'm up to something and she protects my father from any sweet talking he might get from his daughters.

The secretary politely informed me that he was out and that this time of day was a very bad time to bother him anyway. Then she asked if she could help with something.

"Oh, no thanks, Mom," I said as my dreams of becoming a real estate baron collapsed.

Those secretaries will get you every time.

Tears in Dad's Eye

As the days narrowed down to a frightening few, the father of the bride-to-be wasn't surprised to hear someone sobbing loudly.

"That must be me crying," he muttered. "It's Aretha Franklin's fault."

"That's not you crying," his son said. "You're groaning and twitching, but you're not crying. The crying is coming from the fitting room."

The father, son and assorted other uncomfortable men, including the bridegroom-to-be, were in a store that rents wedding clothes. For $45 plus deposit, the father of a bride-to-be can rent a $20 suit for a day. There are added charges for mileage risk if the wedding isn't held in the parking lot next to the rental store.

"The first suit I ever bought had 3 pairs of pants counting the knickers," the father said. "It cost $12 and I wore it for 4 years. Are you sure that's not me crying?"

It wasn't. A little boy in the fitting room was being measured for the velvet suit he must wear to be a ring bearer.

The boy didn't like a stranger wrapping a tape measure around his neck, so the kid cried. This made the kid's dad mad, so Daddy yelled and hit the kid on the butt, which naturally made him cry louder.

The father of the bride-to-be looked at the man scheduled to marry his daughter in a few weeks in a town several miles from the rental store's parking lot.

"People who get married always have kids who cry just like that brat in the fitting room. It is very annoying to their parents, especially when the kids get big enough to hit back," the father told his future son-in-law. "You still have time to dash for daylight. I will hold the door open for you. My daughter will understand why you changed your mind when I explain to her about the ring bearer."

"That little boy isn't a member of our party. There will be no ring bearer in our wedding," the son-in-law-to-be said, neatly ignoring the crux of the father's brilliant argument. "My best man will bear the ring."

The best man is the father's son. He is 19 and subject to all the frailties of the bemused age. He can lose his wallet in a phone booth. On one memorable evening he dined in a fancy restaurant in his stocking feet because he lost his shoes in the car. When he plans a 2-mile trip, he always allows 6 hours for losing his way.

"If you are paying more than 25 cents for the ring, you would be wise to rent that crying boy to carry it for you," the fasther told his son-in-law-to-be.. "But don't give the kid's father too big a deposit. For $10 he might skip the country and after the wedding you'd have to throw the kid into the trash with your no-deposit bottles."

At this point, the best man changed the subject. "Why did you say that Aretha Franklin could made you cry?" he asked the father of the bride-to-be.

Aretha just got married, and the father was disturbed by the publicity surrounding her wedding. In front-page articles, it was reported that the bride wore a 7-foot train trimmed in white mink, and her 24 attendants wore pale blue Lincoln Continentals.

Actor Lou Gossett, who posed in the church vestibule, had velour lapels on his tuxedo. The weddin was in Detroit and there were 2 receptions, one in Detroit and one in Los Angeles.

A friend of the Franklin family was quoted: "It's just going to be a good old-fashioned wedding! Aretha just wants to get married like any common person."

"My wife reads all that kind of stuff," the father of the bride-to-be explained, groaning and twitching. "For months I've been telling her we should give a modest wedding because our daughter is a common person who would be embarrassed by anything ostentatious, such as a ride to the church.

"Now, thanks to common Aretha, I'll never be able to save clothing money by convincing my wife it would be too splashy to have the wedding anywhere except in the parking lot next to the wedding rental store."

"Did you really used to wear knickers?" the best man asked.

"That must be me crying," the father of the bride-to-be said."

Kathleen Kalmbach captures American and Me contest

Three students from the Charlevoix Middle School have been named local winners in the 1977-78 "America & Me" essay contest, sponsored by Farm Bureau Insurance Group.

The three, who earned the first, second and third place awards for their school, are Kathleen Kalmbach, first; Teri Klama, second; and Beth Ford, third.

All three have received honor certificates for their achievement. In addition, the name of the school's first place winner will be engraved on a plaque for permanent display in the school.

As the school's first place winner, Kathleen's essay now advances to the state level competition from which the top ten essays in Michigan will be selected.

More than 7,500 eighth grade students from 370 Michigan schools submitted entries in the 1977-78 America & Me essay contest, which was conducted with the help of Farm Bureau Insurance agents across the state.

Open to any eighth grade student in the state, the annual contest encourages Michigan's young people to seriously consider their roles in America's future through "America & Me" essays.

On the local level, winners are selected from each school and the school's best entry is advanced to the statewide competition. Prizes for the top ten in the state include savings bonds ranging in value from $500 to $50.

As sponsor of the contest since 1968, Farm Bureau Insurance Group has received seven national awards from the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge.

A Few Things About America

By Kathleen Kalmbach

Beneath America's beautiful exterior there is another world. A world of wonderful things, and not so wonderful things.

There are the good things, like liberty, justice, and freedom to all of America's citizens.

Then there are the bad things, like several thoughtless people who are now destroying one of America's greatest natural resources, the Great Lakes.

Some people think that when something is a natural resource, we don't have any of it left, or if it's water, that it's polluted.

The Great Lakes aren't that bad; yet. However, they are not like they used to be. Just a few short years ago, you could go to the end of the pier, look down, and see to the very bottom of Lake Michigan. Now; if you walked to the end of a pier and looked down, you might see a very angry fish who just swallowed a tin can because he couldn't see what he was eating.

The laws against pollution are getting better everyday, but, we can't stop now. We must keep going, and we must keep trying to make America a better place in which to live.

Yes, America is a very beautiful place, but we, the citizens of this great land, must do our best to keep her that way.

KATHLEEN KALMBACH receives a first place plaque from Charles Elzinga for her essay in the Farm Bureau "America and Me" contest.

TERI KLAMA was the second place winner in the Farm Bureau essay contest for eighth graders across the nation. Here Teri receives an award from Charles Elzinga.

TAKING THE THIRD place award in the essay contest was Beth Ford of Charlevoix Middle School. Beth and her eighth grade classmates participated in the "America and Me" contest sponsored by the Farm Bureau.

Permit needed before owners can work on river front land

Now that spring is here, many people are thinking about doing some work on their lake or river front property.

Attorney General Frank J. Kelley is warning these people that any work they plan to do beyond the "ordinary high water mark", and some kinds of work above that line, require a permit from the Department of Natural Resources under the Inland Lakes and Streams Act, or the Great Lakes Submerged Lands Act.

If in doubt as to whether the proposed project comes under either of these laws, Kelley suggests that the DNR be contacted before proceeding.

He explains that "ordinary high water mark" is a line set by law as being the normal level for a given lake or river In "wet" years, the mark may be out in the water, in "dry" years it could be several feet inland from the existing water level.

Examples of types of work that would require permits, according to Kelley, are dredging or filling a marsh or part of the underwater bottom land, enlarging or improving a boathouse or some other structure, or digging a channel or doing something else that might change the natural features of property along the "edge" where land and water meet.

"The safe thing to do is to check first before you undertake any such work. Consult the Department of Natural Resources or a private attorney before going ahead," Kelley advises. "Proceeding without a permit can be costly, and could involve you in needless expense and delay. You could even be required to undo what you have already done."

Fire permits must be obtained by county residents

Persons living outside city or village limits in Charlevoix County and surrounding areas are reminded that a fire permit is now needed to have any open fire.

This includes leaves and other yard debris as well as accumulated trash.

Permits may be obtained by calling the Department of Natural Resources at 582-6681. There is no charge.

Kay Smith

Kay Smith

Kay Smith comes from a family of teachers but she was determined she would not be a teacher herself, so she studied Journalism at Michigan State University. Now she is completing her 18th year teaching kindergarten in the Charlevoix Elementary School.

How did it happen?

Mrs. Smith grew up in Belleville, and after graduating from MSU she worked for the Wyandotte Tribune then taught journalism and history for one year. Her father, the late E. I. Beismer, was teaching in Charlevoix; he was in charge of vocational training for farmers under the G.I. bill, and she came to Charlevoix to visit her parents.

While visiting, she met her future husband, Clayton A. Smith. Then she learned that the school system was looking for an assistant to help Dorothy McRae teach kindergarten. She started to work and found it so interesting that she went back to school to qualify as a permanent teacher. "I have enjoyed it ever since," she says.

Kindergarten has changed since Mrs. Smith started teaching. "We have a more sophisticated program now," she relates. "We used to 'read' pictures and describe them. Now we have alphabet "people" and phonetics. We start with three-letter words to recognize by sight and sound. We have a number readiness program where the children learn to recognize groups of numbers. We try to get them to count to 25 and recognize numbers to 10, also to print numbers as well as letters of the alphabet. Toward the end of the year, we touch on adding and subtracting.

"We also work in music and art and gym and try to have a little time for free play. It's a full program, two and a half hours a day five days a week, but we don't do everything every day."

Spring registration for kindergarten has just been completed. Seventy-eight children were registered, compared with the 98 to 100 usually registered at this time. However, Mrs. Smith points out that many parents move to the area in the summer and the class is usually larger than spring registration would indicate.

Local regulations require that children reach the age of five by October 1 of the year they enter kindergarten.

What can parents do to get their children ready for kindergarten? Mrs. Smith has several ideas. "Play cards with them – number games, dominoes, dice and card games. Read to them. Let them cut up old magazines. It's good muscle practice. Children don't use scissors often enough. Take trips with them. Kids love to be with their family and get the family's attention. Participte in sports with them – skiing, or even just hiking."

Mrs. Smith believes that too many children are being brought up by baby sitters these days. "They are ragged on discipline and don't have time to spend with the children except for their basic needs. If at all possible, mothers should stay home with their young children. What we really need are more nursery schools organized in a school manner."

Some television shows provide good entertainment for young children, Mrs. Smith believes. "Kids get a lot out of "Sesame Street,' she says, "because now they know they can learn." Other TV shows she recommends for young children are "Captain Kangaroo", "The Muppets", and "Mr. Rogers".

"I don't hold with children looking at a lot of TV shows, such as police shows," Mrs. Smith adds, "because it makes them too aggressive."

Mrs. Smith says that one of the purposes of kindergarten is to "get the child ready for the big experience of first grade. It will be their first normal learning experience. They must learn to sit still, listen, follow directions and respond in a coherent manner. We also try to get the children to feel good about themselves and build their self-confidence about their ability to participate. Before kindergarten, they are usually in small groups; they must learn to deal with children of various personalities.

"Kindergarten also gets the children acquainted with the school building – the cafeteria, office, gym, library, etc. We have a library day each week so the children can get books from the library on their own cards. Children in other grades often entertain the kindergarteners with puppet shows and other types of activity. Even riding the bus is an important part of kindergarten. The children learn to find their own bus and to ride with other children," the teacher explains.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have four children. Debby teaches Latin and English at Calumet High School in the Upper Peninsula. Randy is a Burns Security guard at Big Rock. Linda is finishing her sophomore year at Michigan State University. Gail is in Charlevoix and working at Village Inn Pizza.

Mrs. Smith's number one hobby, she says, is reading. "And I like gardening, too."

In closing the interview, Mrs. Smith said: "I must add that apart from all the schooling I got at college, I learned much from Dorothy McRae, who had such a way with children. Starting as her assistant couldn't have been anything more than ideal."

Vet says dogs need protection from heartworms for spring

Soon it will be summer and the mosquitoes will be out.

And while that only means annoyance to people, mosquito season poses a threat to dogs.

When a mosquito draws blood from a dog it may deposit larvae of the parasitic roundworm known as canine heartworm, David Norton, DVM, warns. And heartworms can eventually cause the death of the infected dog.

Once the larvae of the heartworm has been deposited in the dog's blood by the mosquito, the larvae mature into adult worms which begin producing thousands of embryos which move freely throughout the arteries and veins of the dog's circulatory system.

The adult worms, which can reach a length of 10 to 14 inches, collect in the heart chambers. Together the worms and the embryos cause a strain on the heart and restrict blood flow to the lungs, kidneys and liver, Dr. Norton said.

Signs of heartworm disease vary depending on the number of adult worms and their location in the dog's body. Many times a dog with heartworms may not show any symptoms at all, Dr. Norton said.

For this reason, it is important that dogs are tested before any symptoms develop.

"Dogs in this area are best tested in April so that if they don't have heartworms the preventative medication can begin in May before mosquito season," Norton said.

The preventative medication is available in a tablet, liquid or chewable which is added to the food daily.

Testing for heartworm disease is done through a blood test performed in a veterinarian's office. Some cases of heartworm have been found in the area and local dog owners are urged to have their animals tested.

The disease can be carried from dog to dog by the mosquitoes so it is important to get dogs on preventative medication programs, Norton said.

How I envy my best friend. She's married to an impulsive Instamatic-in-the-shirtpocket photographer who optimistically shoots the Grand Canyon through the car window going 35 mph.

I married a self-destructive Nikkormat with zoom lens who insisted I delay the birth of our first child until he could get a decent light reading.

There is no ledge too precarious ... no mountain too inaccessible ... no area too obscure. When there is a dog with one ear up, time stands still.

The dog-with-one-ear up shot is only one of several favorites of my husband. We have two trayfuls of slides of dogs with one ear up that has been known to sedate hyperactive children in which doctors had given up hope.

Another "trick" shot that is a perennial is the state line shot, in which the subject is shown pointing to the sign that says, "WELCOME TO INDIANA" (ILLINOIS, COLORADO, NEW YORK, FLORIDA, TEXAS, and 44 more).

For humor, there is nothing that rivals my husband's restroom shots.

Charlevoix attorneys plan May 1 Law Day celebration

With the theme "The Law: Your Access to Justice", members of the Emmet-Charlevoix Bar Association will celebrate Law Day Monday, May 1. Charlevoix Attorney Dick Pajtas is chairman for Charlevoix County.

As in the past, local lawyers will have their offices open on that day for free 20-minute consulations with the general public. However, they would prefer that advance appointments be made.

Instead of the mock trials held in area schools the past few years, teams comprised of one attorney and one police officer will visit the schools to speak on subjects pertaining to the law. Charlevoix Attorney Frank Hoffman is organizing these activities for Charlevoix County with the assistance of Joe Hayes.

The Liberty Bell Award will again be presented to a layman from each county. The award is in recognition of his or her community service, and will be presented at a luncheon at the Dilworth Hotel in Boyne City on Law Day.

Charlevoix auxiliary donates equipment to organization

In keeping with the spirit of National Volunteer Week, the Charlevoix Area Hospital Women's Guild donated some $5,000 worth of equipment to the hospital at the second annual Hospital Appreciation Tea, April 11, held by the hospital to honor the Guild.

The volunteer organization, which supports the hospital in a multitude of ways, this year donated two pieces of therapeutic machinery to the Physical Therapy Department, a diathermy machine and an ultrasound machine; a microwave oven to the Dietary Department; and another electric bed for patient rooms.

The Guild has made a practice of donating important equipment to the hospital on an annual basis. The funds for these donations are raised from membership dues ($2.00 per year) of the 140-member group, and from their hospital Showcase Gift Shop, run by member volunteers, which sells a variety of gift items for both patients and the general public. Additional revenues are raised through the rental of televisions to patients, another of the Guild's projects.

Guild members come from all parts of Charlevoix and Antrim Counties and include summer visitors to the area from around the country.

Physical Therapist Roy Brigman, who visits the hospital weekly, and his assistant Joan Gigg, who oversees the department daily, had high praise for the new diathermy and ultrasound machines.

Both machines create deep heat to stimulate circulation of blood, thus facilitating healing, in cases of strains and sprains, fractures and similar problems, as well as arthritis and bursitis and muscle spasms.

The diathermy machine has two long arms with small flat rounded discs at the end of each. The discs, which are laid on the patient's skin, conduct heat deep into muscles or injured tissues, through an electro-magnetic field, while remaining just comfortably warm themselves.

The ultrasound machine provides deep heat through a barely noticeable rapid vibration which massages the affected muscle or tissue. The rapid vibration produces heat which again stimulates circulation and helps break up such conditions as excessive calcium deposits as in bursitis.

The ultrasound machine also has a stimulator which helps precisely locate the sore place.

Brigman said diathermy covers a larger area than ultrasound, which directs the heat to a small area. Both he said bring great relief to the pain associated with arthritis, bursitis and sprains and strains.

"These are two really good pieces of equipment," Brigman commented. "It's our second ultrasound machine, which will permit us to perform deep heat and stimulator functions simultaneously.

"The diathermy is particularly useful for growing children's problems, where the stimulation of the ultrasound would be too severe."

The Women's Guild's donation of a new electric bed almost completes the hospital's conversion away from the hand-crank style, except in pediatrics where cribs are used, and intensive care and coronary care, where electric beds would interfere with monitoring equipment. The elimination of the hand-cranked bed will greatly increase patient comfort and save the nursing staff considerable time.

The new microwave oven in the Dietary Department will relieve pressure during the noon rush hour in the cafeteria. It will also make it possible for patients admitted at meal times to enjoy a hot meal soon after admission, as pre-frozen individual meals are kept on hand for last minute use.

Eleanor Schultz, Treasurer for the Women's Guild, explained that the group also offers two scholarships a year one in nursing and one in any hospital related field.

"It's remarkable, even to me, how much we are able to do," Mrs. Schultz said, talking about the Women's Guild's money raising efforts.

As individual volunteers the members give many other services to the hospital, including delivering noon lunch trays, creating special holiday favors for meal trays, making Christmas decorations and stockings for the newborns of the season, maintaining the book cart, running the gift shop, and organizing prenatal classes for expectant parents.

The Guild, which meets the second Monday of each month at 8:00 p.m. at the hospital, to plan its activities, is open to all area women who wish to become active in their hospital affairs, and encourages anyone interested to attend the meetings.

Hospital Administrator Richard Krueger praised the Women's Guild saying "The Guild's volunteer activities are extremely important to the community as well as the hospital."

Old newspaper shows times really have changed here

How times have changed. All you have to do is look at an old Charlevoix Courier and you can see that things have really changed.

Recently Charlevoix resident, Vicki Schulz brought in a July 18, 1957 edition of the Courier she had found while cleaning out the attic of her home. The grocery prices advertised in the paper were enough to make you wish for a return of the good old days.

The weekly ad for Edward's IGA featured oleo, five pounds for $1, Cheez Whiz 29 cents for an eight ounce jar and smoked picnics for 39 cents a pounds.

In the Neff Brothers (now Wharfside Market) ad, lamb breasts were featured for 25 cents a pound and prime rib for 89 cents a pound.

There was also a Kroger's grocery ad, but no ad for Oleson's. The store hadn't been built yet.

Even the price of the Courier was lower, selling for 7 cents a copy.

In the news that week was the announcement that Gov. G. Mennen Williams had been invited to Charlevoix to crown the Venetian queen, Deanna Left. There was also a story on the front page announcing that Lloyd Syron, a 21-year-old Notre Dame University varsity golfer, had captured the Michigan Amateur.

Another article announced that Beaver Island would be switching over to a modern dial telephone system for the 36 phones on the island. The residents had been using a one-line system operated by the U.S. Coast Guard.

Also in the news was the announcement that Dr. Robert G. Martin had been elected president of the Charlevoix Board of Education with Robert G. Lieberman elected to vice president, Albert H. Smith to secretary, E. D. Hawley to treasurer and John L. Boss as a member of the board.

Gary Shope brings country to Charlevoix

A bit of country will be brightening up the lives of music lovers in the Charlevoix area next month.

The Gary Shope Show featuring Interstate Country will be performing in Charlevoix May 12, live from the Grand Ole Opry.

Country-western music star Shope and his four-member band intend to show area residents the time of their lives during the "Country Concert Against Cancer" at 8 p.m. in the Charlevoix High School gym.

The Charlevoix County unit of the American Cancer Society is holding the concert as a fundraiser with the proceeds going toward the unit's 1978 goal of $15,000.

And quite a show the concert promises to be with Shope bringing to the state show business experience in country music gleaned at his mother's knee.

"I guess you could say that I was thrown into the music business," Shope explained in a recent telephone interview. "My mother and aunts had a night club act they put on at one of the local clubs and they would take me along."

Sometimes Shope would sing with his mother and aunts and sometimes he would just listen, but it made him determined to learn more about music.

"My mother taught me how to play the accordion and I would play in her act from time to time," the singer recalled. "But that didn't really trip my trigger, so my mother showed me a few chords on the guitar and I just took it from there."

The 35-year-old singer's music career didn't really develop until the last five or six years, however.

"I wasn't really serious about trying to make it in music until I got out of the service and I began playing in a few bands," he said.

Shope got his big break in 1971 when his group was asked to fill in for a band that had cancelled out at the Buck Lake Ranch. He was on the bill with Ray Price and determined to give the audience their money's worth. What happened next is history.

"We were scheduled to play for 40 minutes and the crowd kept us out there for 90 minutes," Shope recalled. "We ended up upstaging Ray Price."

The trademark of Shope's show is the interaction he gets with the audience.

"We talk to the people and joke with them and try to get them involved with what we're doing," he explained. "We let them know we're there to work with them.

"And we want to have the people join right in, that's part of the fun of the show for us, too."

People listening to the Gary Shope Show are likely to hear the music of almost any country music star plus some of the compositions of members of the band.

"I write some and some of the guys in the group have written songs," the singer said. "The audience will probably hear some of those songs during our performance in Charlevoix.

"I don't sing the songs of any one artist. I do a little of all of them. We can get down home or do the modern stuff. We try not to alienate anyone.

"I think the greatest compliment we've ever had is from the people who come up to us after we've done a show and say that they never liked country music before, but they do now that they've heard us.

"We like to think we're winning them over if they like it or not."

Shope believes the widespread appeal that country music is now enjoying stems from some basic changes in the style of the music that is associated with the hills and hillbillys of Tennessee.

"You don't hear the twangy sound that used to be associated with country music anymore," he pointed out. "Country artists have gotten into orchestration as the background music for their songs.

"Anymore you can turn on the pop stations and hear country artists and turn on the country stations and hear pop artists. Both are crossing over."

Shope, whose hometown is Canton, Ohio, also finds time to hunt and fish in addition to playing the many engagements he has across the country. He is looking forward to doing some fishing when he comes to Charlevoix and to enjoying the area.

Tickets for the performance may be purchased at the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and from businesses displaying posters in their windows.

Collecting bills constant battle for Charlevoix Area Hospital, too

"It takes hospitals 60 days, on the average, to collect bills. Suppliers, from whom the hospital buys, start getting nervous after 15 days and charge interest after 30 days, if the bill is not paid," Dave Thurston, controller at Charlevoix Area Hospital, explained.

Thurston was discussing the complexities of hospital billing and relationship to rising health care costs.

These are his concerns, as Charlevoix Area Hospital Controller. Thurston utilizes his business background to keep Charlevoix Area Hospital's financial affairs running smoothly.

"The main problem we face here, in billing," Thurston said, "is that people who have some sort of health insurance tend to feel that it will take care of everything, when in fact, very few have 100 percent coverage."

Because the majority of patients have some insurance, the hospital sends in-patient bills to the individual's insurance company, along with the majority of out-patient bills.

Then after the insurance company or Medicare and Medicaid pay their portion of the bill, the hospital bills the patient the remaining balance.

Thurston said most patients pay their portion of the bill willingly and promptly.

However, there are those few cases where the hospital has to prod the reluctant patient. Phone calls follow letters and in a few difficult situations the hospital goes to court.

Thurston says that in cases where a bill is large but not large enough for the patient to be able to obtain a bank loan to help him pay, the hospital works out a schedule of installment payments.

"We try to clear up an account within six months," Thurston said.

Naturally, billing and hospital costs are interwoven, but not simply.

Thurston was asked to trace the route of a typical bill.

"On the first working day after you are admitted we call Blue Cross, or the Department of Social Service in Lansing, and Medicaid Patients.

"We report the diagnosis and they call or send a confirmation of coverage, telling us how many days coverage you have for this diagnosis," Thurston explained.

He used the example of an appendectomy, with an average hospital stay of four days.

Charlevoix Area Hospital has an "Utilization Review Committee" consisting of physicians, personnel from medical records and Director of Nursing Services, Kathy Bass, which keeps track of how long patients stay in the hospital.

"If you are staying longer than the average length of stay, the committee asks why," Thurston continued.

"Usually there are good reasons. This review is repeated until you go home," Thurston continued.

A patient receives his bill about three days after he is discharged. When the insurer is Blue Cross, Medicare, or Medicaid, the bill will indicate to the patient exactly what is deductible is – what he will owe the hospital after the insurance pays the hospital.

Thurston explained the process becomes somewhat more complex when private insurers are involved.

"Most people pay what they owe, promptly," he repeated.

But the picture he drew made it clear that a few who don't pay are directly responsible for contributing to the increasing costs of health care. It costs time and money to collect money.

"Health care is the biggest bargain going," Thurston added. They're doing things for people that were unheard of a few years ago.

"The explosion in health care technology and the fact that health care is accessible to almost everyone, where it wasn't not too long ago, also accounts for the increased costs."

Thurston concluded comparing a hospital to a business, to dramatize their basic differences.

"If you don't pay your bill at the meat market they won't sell you anymore meat. But, the guy who hasn't paid us but comes in sick still must be treated."

That's the dilemma facing hospitals today.

VFW, Auxiliary to hold joint installation ceremonies

Plans for the casserole/salad luncheon to be presented at the American Legion post in cooperation with the American Legion Auxiliary for the benefit of the Cancer Crusade were discussed. Anyone wishing to assist or to donate food is asked to call Mrs. Clarence Goldstick after 5 p.m. or Mrs. William Farkas during the day or evening. Mrs. Willis Peters will chair the election of officers for the year. Mrs. Elmer Gibson will assist.

Members are asked to bring items for a silent auction that will be held at the meeting. This event is in charge of Mrs. Perry Smith.

Old timers conversations highlight historical meet

"Conversations with Old Timers" will be the theme of the next meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society, set for Tuesday, May 2 at 8 p.m. in the Community Room of the First State Bank Building.

Members and friends of the Society are invited to join in a round table discussion of some of the people and events that contribute to the historic lore of the area.

Old pictures and relics also provide a nucleus for stimulating recall of "Charlevoix Yesterday".

May Day bloodmobile slated at Congregational Church

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be in Charlevoix on Monday, May 1, Mrs. David Fowler has announced.

The quota for the visit will be 158 pints.

This marks the first time the Bloodmobile has come to Charlevoix since July. It will not be here again until November.

"Because of the infrequency of the Bloodmobile visits to the community we would appreciate a good turn out," Mrs. Fowler said.

The Bloodmobile will be set up at a central location for the convenience of donors, the First Congregational church at the corner of Park ave. and State st. a block from the business district. The hours will be from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m.

A calling committee will be contacting former donors for appointments. If you were a caller in the past and have not been contacted at this time, please consider this your reminder to call your donor list again, Mrs. Fowler said.

Anyone wishing to make an appointment may do so by calling 547-9314. For 17 year olds who would like to donate, permission slips are available at the high school office.

As in the past, Kappa Sigma and Xi Epsilon Gamma chapters of Beta Sigma Phi will be organizing and staffing the canteen of the Bloodmobile.

If there is a registered nurse in the community who would like to volunteer her time at the Bloodmobile she can call Mrs. Francis Left, who is recruiting the volunteer nursing staff.

Others who might like to work at the Bloodmobile may call Mrs. Alan Towsley.

'Vial of Life' program underway at senior center

A simple program designed to save lives, involving nothing more than a plastic bottle, a piece of paper, and a refrigerator, is being introduced to the area.

Dorothy Pelton of the Charlevoix County Senior Citizens' Center says that the Vial of Life is, simply, a small plastic container which can be secured in the upper right hand corner of a refrigerator with freezer tape, rubber bands, garbage bag ties, or packing tape.

"The vial contains a piece of paper which lists the kinds of information often needed in an emergency," Mrs. Pelton says. Such information could be identification of residents in a household, name of family doctor, preferred hospitals, insurance numbers, and emergency contacts such as name and telephone numbers of relatives and friends.

The paper could also list medical histories and medication that members of the family are taking.

Mrs. Pelton reports that in areas where this program has been in operation, emergency workers such as firemen, police officers, and ambulance drivers say the program saves valuable time often spent searching wallets, purses, or cupboards for information or trying to gain information from a disabled accident victim or an excited relative or neighbor. The program should be especially valuable for elderly persons or persons who live alone.

Members of emergency services in the county have been made aware of the program so they will know where to look for the vials and what information they may expect to find.

Additional information may be obtained by calling 536-7831 or 547-6282.

Growing and Drying Herbs

The gardening season is almost here, and you may want to consider growing some herbs. Parsley, dill, thyme, mint, rosemary, sage and sweet majoram are some that are fairly easy to grow.

At the end of the season, garden herbs may be dried and stored for use during the winter. When drying herbs, choose clean, fresh, young tender leaves. Wash and arrange the drained leaves on shallow trays. Cover the leaves with a single layer of cheesecloth and place in a dry, shady place until the leaves are so dry that they rumble when handled.

Store the dried herbs in clean, dry jars with airtight lids. When the herbs are to be used, crumble and rub the dried leaves through a sieve to remove the stems and midribs.

Remember to cut down in using dried herb leaves as they are four times stronger than the same measure of fresh leaves. A powdered herb is two times as concentrated as the same measure of crumbled dried leaves of the same herb.

Use Herbs Sparingly

Magic herb cookery is the result of delicacy and restraint. The cook who experiments with herb combinations in different foods will wind up with never-ending taste treats.

There are almost as many taste perferences as there are people, but good cooks use herbs sparingly and only for accent and variety. Do not use herbs in several dishes served at the same meal.

Start with about ¼ teaspoon of dried herbs in a dish for four. When using fresh herbs, cut or chop the leaves very fine. Cook all forms of herbs for a short time only as the delicate flavor and aroma are lost if herbs are heated too long. Heating herbs in cooking fat is the best way to draw out flavors quickly.

For soups and sauces, tie fresh herbs in small bunches or ground herbs in cloth bags and add them during the last half hour of cooking. In uncooked foods, such as vegetable juice cocktail, add dried herbs (tied in a bag) overnight.

The Charlevoix Rayder netters will clash with two of their strongest opponents this week when they host Alpena on Wednesday and Petoskey on Thursday. Both matches will be played at the north side municipal courts.

The team will be put to the test against these two teams, Coach Chuck Wright said in speaking of the visiting opponents. He added that until now the Rayders have had it easy but will have to play heads-up tennis if they hope to make a showing.

The Rayders won their first two meets posting a 6-1 win over Grayling and a 7-0 win over Boyne City. Between the two meets, however, Coach Wright did some re-shuffling of his team in an effort to find the best combinations.

In Thursday's effort against Boyne City, the results were as follows:

Erik Lundteigen defeated Jack Wingo 6-0, 6-1; Mark Lignell defeated Kim Kruzel 6-1, 6-0; Dave Taylor, played in the singles for the first time, defeated Gil Redmer 6-3, 6-0 and his partner in the doubles, Tom McNamara defeated Dan Mettig 6-2, 6-1.

In the doubles that saw three new pairings, Geoff Nelson and Dennis Morgridge defeated Scott Poquette and Jeff Snyder 6-1, 6-0; Jeff Cockfield and Ed Engstrom defeated Dan Notestine and Mark McClees 6-0, 6-0 and John Grooters and Pete Dunkleberg defeated Nancy Lentz and Dawn Timms 6-0, 6-0.

In an earlier meet, Charlevoix downed Grayling 6-1. The results follow:

Lundteigen defeated Tom Kaiser 6-2, 6-2; Lignell won over Skip Olson 6-1, 6-1; Morgridge defeated Dave Mansfield 6-0, 6-1 and Dunkleberg lost to Rocky Toli n 6-0, 6-1.

Charlevoix took all three doubles with McNamara and Taylor taking Mark Sloan and Randy McClain 6-2, 6-1; Nelson and engstrom defeated Baba Hoffman and Jerry Weiss 6-0, 7-5 and Rockfield and Grooters defeating Trent Bigler and Ed Alright 6-0, 7-6.

Various members of the General Public present voiced their opinions for and against the proposed permit which would allow Mr. Phillips to present drama programs at the Grey Gables. Mayor Supernaw read a statement prepared by the Chief of Police stating that he did not recommend approval of the permit as it would allow certain undesirable forms of entertainment; and, that there are not adequate parking facilities in the area of the Grey Gables to accommodate large crowds. MAYORAL
PROCLAMATION
(LAW DAY)

Citizens today enjoy more rights, greater access to our courts, and more ways and means of equitably resolving disputes than ever before.

The nation's 16,460 state trial and appellate courts and 105 federal courts today are handling more cases than at any other time in their history.

In the past few decades many few frontiers have been opened in the field of law. New laws have been written and existing ones expanded to meet the challenges of the times.

On the occasion of the 21st annual nationwide observance of LAW DAY U.S.A. on May 1, 1978, it is fitting that we, as citizens of this city, state and nation, pause to reflect on our heritage of equal access to our courts and equal protection of the laws.

The theme selected in recognition of LAW DAY is:

The Law:
Your Access to Justice

NOW, THEREFORE, I Sam Supernaw, Mayor of the City of Charlevoix, do hereby proclaim Monday, May 1, 1978, as LAW DAY U.S.A. in the City of Charlevoix in the State of Michigan and urge the people, organizations, churches, schools, and the media of public information to join in the observance of LAW DAY and to take part in community programs sponsored by state and local bar associations.

Dated at the City of Charlevoix, State of Michigan, this 17th day of April, 1978

The following Proclamation of Michigan Week was read by Mayor Supernaw:

WHEREAS, The period from May 20 to 27 has been set aside for the 25th annual observance of MICHIGAN WEEK, and

WHEREAS, the objective of this annual event is to give MICHIGAN citizens greater knowledge and appreciation of their state and their own communities; to tell the world about our assets and resources, advantages and opportunities, and to foster a spirit of co-operation among all Michigan communities and people so that they will work together to make our state even more attractive, and

WHEREAS, the theme of this year's observance, "Enjoy Michigan Hospitality", accents the concept of our friendliness and courtesy to neighbors and visitors alike, of our willingness to share our bounty and joy with our fellows.

THEREFORE, I Sam Supernaw, Mayor of City of Charlevoix do hereby proclaim May 20 to 27 as Michigan Week and urge all citizens of our community to show their pride in our state and our community and to participate actively in the celebration of MICHIGAN WEEK.

Dance has place in gym class, too

Dance? In a gym class? What's that have to do with sports?

Plenty, according to Beth Nairn, a student teacher who has been introducing dance to Charlevoix High School and middle school physical education students during the past three months.

"Dance gives students flexibility, body awareness and improves coordination," Miss Nairn said. "And it enhances their ability in other sports."

The student teacher, who is majoring in dance within the field of physical education at Central Michigan University, has had an exciting time introducing dance to Charlevoix students.

"I've taught mixed classes and it's been fun working with the students, but many of them weren't very receptive to dance in gym class," Miss Nairn smiled.

The teacher said she tried to point out that during the days of the ancient Greeks and Romans male dancers were thought of as artists and athletes.

"You had to have great stamina and endurance to participate in the religious dances which would last for hours," she pointed out.

But even in modern times, dance is recognized as more than artistic expression.

"Many professional athletes, particularly football players take dance classes," the student teacher said. "I've taught classes at Central that had several football players in them. Their coach suggested they take the class."

The dancer said the players were usually running backs and they took the class to acquire more flexibility and quickness and also to get their brains and their feet working together.

Miss Nairn said she considered the exercises and dance movements at least as strenous as those movements in other sports.

In the Charlevoix schools, Miss Nairn has worked with the students in square dancing and folk dancing. The girls also learned a little modern dance when they participated in a section of gym class on gymnastics.

At the middle school, Miss Nairn plans to offer disco dancing to the music of the movie, "Saturday Night Fever," which is about disco dancing.

"I hope it works out," she said. "It could be a fun unit."

Miss Nairn also taught a modern dance class twice a week after school for the high school students and she taught an adult education class for older women.

"I think another important aspect of teaching dance in school is the socialization part of it," the student teacher said. "It gives the students a chance to be together dancing and it makes it a little easier for them outside of school.

"And it's fun. Dance gives you a little exercise and a chance to hoot and holler and have a good time."

Mrs. Roloff receives Liberty Bell Award

A Charlevoix resident received the Liberty Bell Award from the Charlevoix-Emmet Bar Association during special law Day ceremonies Monday

Shirley Roloff, well-known for her volunteer work with Charlevoix senior citizens, was honored for her part in getting area senior citizens their day in court.

"Mrs. Roloff is a worthy candidate for the Charlevoix County Liberty Bell Award and particularly exemplifies this year's Law Day theme, "The Law: Your Access to Justice," Terry Carr, president of the bar association, said as he made the presentation.

Mrs. Roloff was deeply honored by the ceremony.

"It is a great honor to receive this award," she said quietly after the presentation. "I'm very grateful."

Mrs. Roloff became involved with the senior citizens through her volunteer work for the Charlevoix County Department of Social Services. She assisted the seniors in applying for Homestead Property Tax credits, with money management and in setting up a visitation program.

When many of the senior citizens she worked with were faced with a 25 percent rent increase at the Charlevoix Apartments, last fall, she went to bat for them. Mrs. Roloff took the case all the way to U.S. District Court in Grand Rapids where it is still under consideration by a federal judge.

In addition to working for social services, she is also an active volunteer for the American Cancer Society, is a member of the Parents Advisory Council at the Charlevoix Elementary School, and works for the Red Cross Blood Bank and Northern Michigan Legal Aid Services.

She is also a member of the Commission on Aging planning committee for the development of the senior citizen health screening program. She was also a recent candidate for Third Ward alderman.

Mrs. Roloff and her husband, William, have five children. Roloff works for Midwest Division of Ron Pair Enterprises.

A second Liberty Bell Award was presented to an Emmet County resident, Allan McCune during the Law Day luncheon

McCune was recognized for the behind-the-scenes activities he has been involved with in giving his time, energy and financial resources to many groups and organizations in the Northern Michigan area.

Charlevoix the Dump?

Charlevoix - The - Beautiful should be proud of its community. We have a beautiful little city, but, unfortunately, Charlevoix is letting the people in town run it down to Charlevoix - The - Dump!

Take a look around the town and see what is happening. In the winter the stores let the place go downhill. The Parkside restaurant is too cheap to put decent shades or drapes up, sticks paper up in the window for the town people to look at for 10 months a year while they enjoy sunny Florida.

Also, take a look at some of the houses around town. Tax the hell out of the people that are making dumps out of the town and let those people that are trying to fix up their place have a break.

Bridge Street may be zoned commercial, but some restrictions must be made and soon. That corner house on Bridge and E. Hurlbut (just as you go down the South Hill) is a disgrace. They call that an antique shop, it is an absolute mess, old cars dumped in the front and side of the house, stumps of trees cut up and on the sidewalk along with bikes and other old garbage. What kind of thing is that for people to see when they come into town? This is one example; there are others where people have garbage bags out on the lawn piling up all winter, junk piled outside the house like they are setting up business for a junk store. Something has got to be done.

Charlevoix survives a great deal on resorters, and we must remember they come to see Charlevoix - The - Beautiful.

The City Council had better start taking a look around and start setting up some restrictions before this town turns into a sore eye for the State of Michigan and a ghost town. There is no excuse to allow the things that are going on to continue.

This spring why don't all the Charlevoix residents shape up and have a little town we can be proud of. Shape up or SHIP OUT you hillbillies!

Council gets 'surprise' request

The Charlevoix Common Council received a little surprise during its meeting Monday night.

Charlevoix resident Thomas Pointner asked the council to consider adopting a "no surprise" ordinance for the city.

Pointner explained that city residents living near condominiums, particularly those on Michigan Avenue where he also resides, have been waking up in the mornings and finding surprises on their lawns.

"These surprises are caused by four-legged animals known as dogs," Pointner said with a little levity. "I think in the future the council should require multiple housing unites, especially those that pave and cover every available inch, to build dog runs so that the overflow won't be in the neighbors' yards."

Several other people at the council meeting agreed that the "surprises" were creating problems downtown as well. Mayor Sam Supernaw appointed Pointner to look into writing an ordinance.

"I guess we can call that the "scoop the poop" ordinance," Alderman Ivan Whitley joked.

In other more serious business, the council heard a report from the Charlevoix Shade Tree Commission John Campbell reported that city crews had just completed the planting of 281 trees along city streets and in the cemetery. Another 200 trees were placed in the nursery for planting next year.

Campbell said that so far 586 trees had been planted on city streets through the shade tree program and that the city currently owns 1,095 trees.

The council also adopted a new ordinance regarding the burning of leaves in the road. The ordinance prohibits any leaf burning in the road and the violation of the ordinance is punishable by $25 fine.

The council also agreed to look into requests by the Charlevoix Garden Club to designate the Father Charlevoix Park at the end of West Dixon as a legal park and to look into establishing a Memorial Garden in the boulevard at the corner of Mercer and East Dixon.

School board sets election date

The Charlevoix Board of Education set Sept. 12 as the date for a special election to vote on proposed millage for renovation and additions to the high school Monday night.

The election has been postponed from April 24.

In other action during the brief meeting, the school board acknowledged a request from the Charlevoix Education Association (CEA) to recognize the Northern Michigan Education Association as the bargaining unit for the Charlevoix teachers; named coaches for fall sports and made a decision regarding a trampoline.

Appointment coaches for fall sports were as follows: Football: Donald Carey; assistant football coaches: Plas Presnell, Hal Evans, Roger Gowell and Charles Bentley; Varsity girls' basketball, Toni Felter; JV girls' basketball, Henry Wagner; Cross Country: Peter Spieles and golf: Barry Anderson.

The board also acknowledged a request from Mrs. Connie Ford, speech coach, for permission to take two students to the State Pentathlon.

Charlevoix woman winner in national quilt contest

Seven is Beverly Espich's lucky number.

At least it brought her luck in a quilt contest sponsored by the U.S. Historical Society, Good Housekeeping magazine and the Museum of American Folk Art. Mrs. Espich was recently named a finalist in the national "Great Quilts of America" contest.

Mrs. Espich, a Charlevoix resident for the last 10 years, was completing work on her seventh quilt when her daughter, Mrs. John Zentz of Bremen, Ind., noticed the rules for the quilt contest in the October 1978 issue of Good Housekeeping.

"Originally she was going to send in a quilt I had made for her husband," Mrs. Espich said explaining how she got involved in the contest. "But I decided to enter this one, that I made for my granddaughter, Amy Bearden, instead."

So she sent in a picture of the quilt, which has a white background and features eight appliqued and six embroidered Holly Hobbie figures, to the magazine's New York office.

A short while later, she was informed that she was a state finalist in the contest and she was asked to send the quilt in for judging. After that she was named a national finalist.

"I didn't think I would win," she said recalling her original entry letter. "But you know how you hope. And then this happened."

The Charlevoix grandmother said it took her about one year to complete work on the prize-winning quilt.

"I worked on it when I watched TV," the woman said. "I can't just sit and watch TV, I like to be busy."

Mrs. Espich's interests in the arts and crafts are varied. In the past, she has tried her hand at pen and ink drawings, watercolors, and making ceramic wind chimes. When she tires of one type of craft, she tries something new. And that's how she got started making quilts.

Currently, she is working on a memory quilt for her other granddaughter, Heather Zentz, and on two twin-bed-sized friendship quilts for herself.

The memory quilt contains scenes from Heather's life. The pictures were drawn by Mrs. Espich and then embroidered.

She started the friendship quilts four years ago when she sent squares to more than 150 friends and relatives and asked them to embroider their names and whatever else they wanted on the squares, and then send them back to her.

When she finishes with the quilts, Mrs. Espich wants to try her hand at something else.

"When I'm through with these quilts, I'm through quilting," she said. "But my daughter is expecting so I suppose I'll have to make one more. But that's it."

BEVERLY ESPICH displays her national award winning quilt. The quilt, which Mrs. Espich made for her granddaughter, was a finalist in the Great Quilts of America contest. The quilt is white with eight appliqued and six embroidered Holly Hobbie figures on it.

For secretary's week

Bosses give secretaries assetiveness class

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

"You haven't been giving me my phone messages," a woman scowled at another seated beside her.

"I'm sorry, you haven't received them," the second woman smiled, "But, perhaps it is because you have so much piled on your desk."

That potentially threatening situation between secretary and boss was being played out in the conference room at the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District building.

Both women, secretaries for the administrators of the Char-Em service center, and 10 other secretaries, were attending an "Assertiveness Training Session" – a gift from their bosses during National Secretary Week.

Two counselors from the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey had been invited by the administrators to offer the session to the secretaries.

There had been the usual flowers and lunch with the boss, plus a barbecue circus, with Superintendent Jim Shepard as chef, as part of the week's recognition of secretaries, but the Assertiveness Training was something special.

Sue Shepherd, Director of Vocational Education, a boss, explained that the session wasn't a question of fomenting revolution or dealing with oppressed secretaries:

"As administrators we get to go to various meetings and conferences and occasionally they have interpersonal and personal growth exercises as part of the meeting.

"We decided to offer the same opportunity to our secretaries through the Women's Resource Center," she continued.

"We don't have oppressed secretaries here. We all make the coffee," she said answering the question.

The twelve secretaries sat apprehensively around tables as Nancy Stewart, Women's Resource Center Director, and Terri Allen, a counselor, opened the session.

"Low self-esteem is a social disease," Ms. Stewart stated.

"Women particularly are taught, 'do things for others, don't think about yourselves.' But, if we feel good about ourselves we are better equipped to help others.

"Today, forget about all you've learned about not thinking about yourselves."

The first exercise began with the participants listing, on paper, 10 positive attributes about themselves. Then they read each others.

"These are people who work together and know each other on a 'please pass the butter' level," Ms. Stewart explained afterwards. "This will help give them a deeper level of communication, as well as stimulate positive self-esteem.

"Positive self-esteem is the key to success. If you come across to others as though you don't accept yourself, no one else will accept you," Mrs. Stewart said to the group.

Continuing the communication theme, Terri Allen presented an "Assertiveness Quotient Test."

The women were asked to indicate if they were uncomfortable, moderately comfortable or very comfortable: asking questions at meetings, entering and exiting a room where men are present, using authority without feeling bitchy or bossy, refusing to apologize when they felt they were right, dealing with criticism, saying 'no', expressing anger, and a series of similar questions.

That nerves were touched was obvious from embarrassed giggles and groans.

"Is it true that the bosses get their own coffee here?" a questioner asked.

"We had to use a little assertiveness to teach them to get their own," one woman spoke out. Others laughed. "I said, 'I'm too busy, but let me teach you how to do it for yourself,' " she continued "Some had to be taught several times."

"Let's define assertive behavior," Ms. Allen began.

"Assertive behavior is standing up for one's self in such a way that one doesn't violate basic rights of others. It is direct, honest and appropriate expression of ones feeling and opinions."

"Nonassertive behavior," she continued," is failing to stand up or standing up in such a way as to be ineffectual so that one's own rights are violated."

And making a distinction between assertive and aggressive behavior she said, "Aggression is standing up for one's self in such a way that others are hurt in the process."

"Did you want to really get them," she scowled. "Or just make your point."

The secretaries who seemed initially uncomfortable with the personal nature of the session began to warm.

Role playing exercises broke the ice.

Laughter signifying recognition filled the room as the women played out scenes on how to deal with a boss who claims he isn't getting phone messages or complains that the secretary's desk is too messy.

The women took turns playing bosses and themselves, with emphasis on handling the potentially aggravating situation without feeling put down, clarifying the problem, not putting the boss down and arriving at a solution that maintained each individual's self-esteem

A Bill of Assertive Rights was discussed, again with the emphasis on the right of each individual to be responsible for herself

Commenting afterwards, one woman said, "I think a lot of us have realized that we reflect too much on our negative experiences."

Another said, "It is fun to now see others as individuals, not just people who work here."

And one woman commented, "I have learned more about myself in this session than I learned in most of my life."

What will be the upshot at the work place of all this?

The next boss who blows his cool and blames his secretary for the lost phone message may be faced by a smiling pair of eyes, self-confidently saying, "Sir, Your desk could use some organizing, maybe you'll find your messages under that pile, there."

Charlevoix County receives grant for energy conservation

Charlevoix County has been awarded a grant of $94,400 by the Economic Development Administration to carry out an energy conservation program in county-owned buildings.

The County will supplement the project cost with $23,600 of its own funds.

Storm windows, doors, and insulation will be installed in the County Building, Annex, the County Jail, and Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

In addition to conserving energy, the project will provide jobs for approximately 70 people during the next few months. John Hess, county planner, will soon be advertising for bids on various parts of the project, which he describes as follows:

County Building - The County Building will have a new insulated roof and storm windows added. The old roof will have to be dismantled, which will involve a 20-man unskilled work force working approximately five weeks. The installation of the new roof will involve a 20-man semi-skilled work force for about three weeks. The storm windows will be added to existing single glaze windows. The installation will take approximately two weeks and should involve four to five men. Budgeted cost, $66,600.

County Building Annex - The County Building Annex will have new windows, storms and insulation added to the attic. The old windows and frames are rotted out in several places, which necessitates the old windows and frames being torn out and replaced with new storms and frames. The windows and frames will take 4 men approximately 2 weeks. The old floor in the attic will be torn up and the floor joists will be built up to accept 12" of blown insulation. The floor will then be replaced so that the attic can be used for cold storage. This operation should take four men about two weeks. Budgeted cost, $6,050.

County Jail - The new jail will have a storm shed added to the front door. Storm windows will be added and insulated doors will be installed in the heated garage. The storm windows will be added to existing aluminum frames, which will take three men approximately two weeks. The jail has a covered porch and cement slab in front of the front door. The project then will be to enclose this slab and cover it, thus preventing escape of warm air when the front doors are opened. This project will take four men approximately three weeks to complete. The heated garage for emergency vehicles has fiberglas doors, which convert large amounts of warm air to the outside of the building. The fiberglas doors will be replaced with insulated doors, thus preventing the loss of heat within the garage. The removal and replacement of the doors should take four men approximately two weeks. Budgeted cost, $21,600.

Grandvue Medical Care Facility - The Medical Care Facility will have storm windows added to existing aluminum framed single glaze windows. The project should take six men approximately five weeks. Budgeted cost, $10,400.

First aid class offered

A Red Cross First Aid class directed to the needs of industrial employees in Northern Michigan is being conducted by Dr. Harry R. Custer and Edward Weliver of Consumer's Power Company.

Dr. Custer advises that at least one or more employees from each work shift be certified to administer first aid when indicated and be able to assist the Emergency Medical Technicians with their duties.

The class, called "Multi Media", is appruved and recommended by O.S.H.A. as part of an over-all safety program in environmental and industrial medicine.

Editorials/Opinions

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Do you know what Charlevoix needs? A municipal auditorium and a swimming pool, for starters. And if we could tie in some kind of a convention arena, so much the better.

Perhaps all three projects could be wrapped up in a single "civic center" in an attractive setting with lots of parking.

The need for an auditorium was brought home Saturday night when some members of the Clock family journeyed to Petoskey to see an interpretation of "Arsenic and Old Lace" by the Little Traverse Civic Theater. The play was presented in the Petoskey High School auditorium, a huge multi-purpose room with fixed seats which can be transformed into three smaller rooms, thanks to the invention of moveable walls.

The auditorium can seat several hundred people at a time' and the acoustics are so fine that we hardly missed a syllable, although we were seated well to the rear.

Aside from school gymnasiums, it would be impossible to accomodate such a crowd so comfortably any place in Charlevoix. And then, only the Middle School can offer anything much in the way of a stage.

The civic center I envision wouldn't have to be connected in any way, shape or form with our beleagured school system, which, goodness knows, has trouble enough raising money to support a bare-bones educational program. Schools, of course, would be expected to use the auditorium for dramatic and musical programs but they wouldn't be held responsible for its construction, bookings or maintenance.

I see the convention arena as a boon to Charlevoix's resort industry, putting us in a position to compete with Boyne Mountain and Boyne Highlands for Northern Michigan's burgeoning convention business. At present we can supply the sleeping accomodations and eating facilities, particularly during the "off season," but we desperately need a convention arena big enough to accomodate large meetings and their concomitant booths and displays.

We might even be able to attract such events as the annual home show sponsored by the Little Traverse Association of Home Builders. For the past three years, the show has been held at the Emmet County garage, a structure hardly suitable for displaying home furnishings and appliances in their best light. But that's the best facility the group can find in Petoskey.

Probably the most important part of the civic center would be the swimming pool. It is inconceivable that a city the size of Charlevoix literally surrounded by water except for narrow strips on the north and south – has not been able to produce some kind of facility to teach its youngsters how to swim.

The old argument that Charlevoix doesn't need a pool because it is surrounded by water is fallacious at best, because our lakes don't stay warm enough, long enough, to give our youngsters the exposure they need to develop strong swimming skills.

And when you live around water, you had better learn to swim well or you may find yourself in deep trouble.

So there you have it! A three-in-one civic center serving the whole community. I'd like to see the city council start the ball rolling by establishing a sinking fund and having plans drawn up. Surrounding townships which also would benefit from such a project also should be sounded out for financial support. Gifts and bequests should be earnestly solicited. Service clubs should be asked to do their part.

Charlevoix businessmen, who will benefit directly from increased convention activity, should be asked to spearhead the fund-raising campaign.

Of course, a project of such magnitude can't be completed overnight. But it will never be completed if it isn't started.

Community needs to get together to prevent juvenile crime, provide alternatives

It's too bad that there are always some rotten apples in the bushel.

It's too bad because even though all of the other apples may be perfect, or as close to perfect as they can get, their image is still a little tarnished because of the few bad ones.

The bad apple image has rubbed off on students at the Charlevoix Middle School. A few students have gotten out of band and they are creating a negative image for all middle school students.

Since September there have been several incidents of shoplifting and breakings and enterings of homes in the valley area during the noon hour of the middle school. While the problem is not one of epidemic proportions, according to city Police Chief Jack Mol and county Prosecutor Roy Hayes, it has caused some concern among city residents and downtown merchants.

All of the merchants surveyed by the Charlevoix Courier are sure they have been ripped off by middle school students at one time or another, although most of them can't prove it for sure. They agree that only a small percentage of the students are shoplifing, but it concerns them nevertheless.

In response to the shoplifting, several merchants have limited the number of students who can come into the stores and the parts of the stores that the students can be in. But the merchants would like to see other action taken, too.

Many of them feel the students should be required to stay on school property during the noon hour.

"It's not only the shoplifing, I don't lose that much," one merchant explained. "They shouldn't be eating candy and junk for lunch like they do. If they had to stay at school they would have to eat balanced meals."

While requiring all students to remain on school property during the noon hour may sound somewhat drastic, it may be the only workable solution to the problem.

It's a tough position for the school to be a policing agency. After all becoming an armed camp that restricts the movements of the students doesn't create a very positive learning atmosphere.

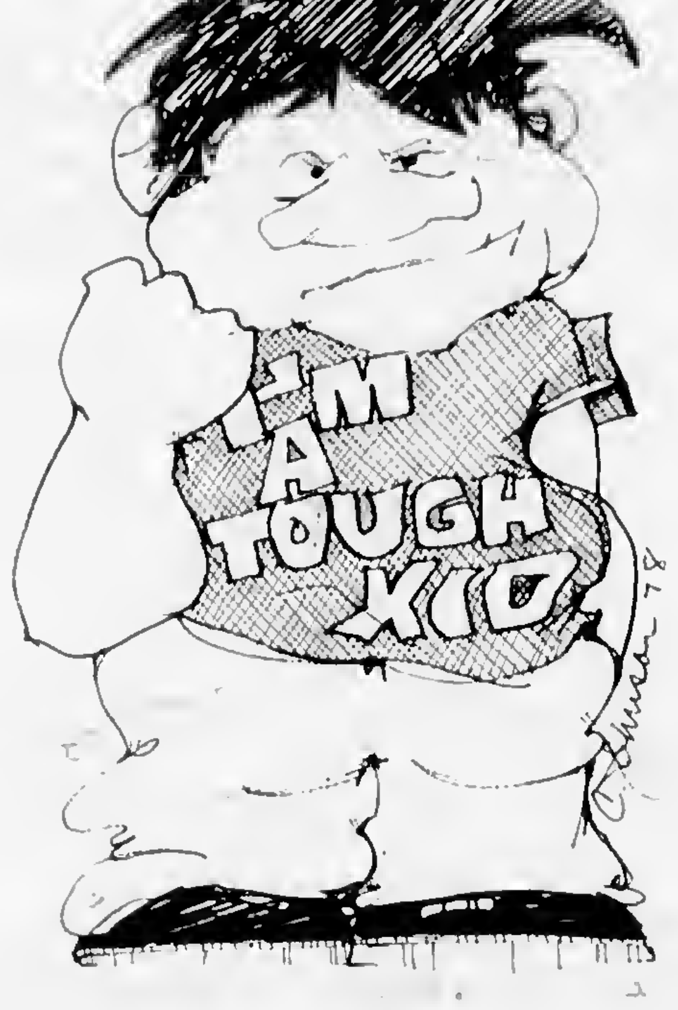
On the other hand, city policemen cannot man every store in town during the noon hour and store owners can not afford to hire all of the xtra help that would be needed to prevent any shoplifting.

And area residents cannot be expected to come home during noon hour from their jobs everyday just to ensure that some misguided students don't break into their homes.

It is a community problem and perhaps there can be a community solution. If school officials feel it would be impossible to keep students on school grounds during the noon hour, perhaps the community should pitch in and provide a center of sme sort where students with time on their hands can go.

The juvenile crime rate is as reflection of the future adult crime rate. If Charlevoix can nip its juvenile crime in the bud through community effort everyone will benefit in the future.

And there won't be so much grumbling about bad apples, either.



Erma Bombeck

I knew it was only a matter of time before men started to get testy about women in pants. One of them a carpenter from Illinois, has gotten downright militant about it and submitted 77 signatures on a petition to "get our girls, wives, and ladies back into dresses again."

Despite the fact he wants women in dresses for all the wrong reasons, I have to admit I'm bored to death with pants. At first I saw them as a lifesaver. They'd keep my legs from growing together. They'd give me freedom. They'd be a friend to my allergies: washing and ironing. They'd be a firm statement for my equality and once and for all they'd liberate me from the contents of those little chicken eggs that hatched panty hose that fit me like a respirator.

That was seven years ago. The other night while I was watching MASH, Klinger began to look good to me. He was wearing a wrap-around dress in a floral pink with a V-neck and a soft collar with a pair of pumps and a matching bag and gloves.

I looked at myself. I was wearing a pair of faded jeans with paint swatches on the knee, a T-shirt that read, "INSANITY IS CONTAGIOUS. YOU CAN CATCH IT FROM YOUR CHILDREN." My legs were bare and my tennis shoes raggy.

Dressing up for me anymore was wearing a clean T-shirt. And I wasn't the only one. From toddlers to teenagers, to matrons to elderly women, all they ever wore were pants. When I thought about it, I hadn's seen my mother's legs since the Eisenhower administration.

It occurred to me maybe we had gone too far. Suppose restaurants discriminated against us as they once did when we wore slacks? Maybe we couldn't be seated until we went home and put pants on.

If we kept going in pursuit of fashion freedom, would we one day end up like Diane Keaton (whom I love!) but who, at the Academy Awards, looked like she couldn't decide what to wear, so she wore her entire closet.

I made a monumental decision yesterday. I went out and bought a dress...a floral wrap-around with a V-neck and soft'collar.

My husband said, "Good Lord, are those your knees or are you playing the cymbals?"

Maybe, like Klinger, it needed a rifle over the shoulders.

...Speaking Her Mind

I got a taste of my own medicine recently. Every week I interview people and take pictures and write about their lives with nary a second thought.

Often the interviewees are nervous and I patiently explain they have nothing to worry about, that I don't bite and that nothing will happen to them.

Well, the shoe was on the other foot a few weeks ago. A Charlevoix Middle School student interviewed me for a story for a journalism class assignment.

I reluctantly agreed to the interview, instantly becoming nervous obout it and wondering what my thoughts would sound like when written down on paper by someone else.

When the student, Katie Clock, daughter of a well known Charlevoix journalist, appeared at the Courier office for the interview I had calmed down somewhat. That is I was calm until the questioning began.

We went through the usual questions about my name, age and educational background. Then we got into the hard stuff.

"What are your lifetime goals" she asked sweetly as I nearly swallowed my tongue. It's been a long time since I actually sat down and worked on my lifetime goals.

"Well, I guess to make the Courier the best newspaper in Charlevoix," I blurted out.

"But it's the only newspaper in Charlevoix," Katie responded as I gulped again.

Then she asked if I had accomplished my lifetime goals. I know 26 years old must seem old to an eighth grade student, but I've always felt like I had plenty of life left for accomplishing goals. I was speechless.

As the interviewed went painfully on, I tried to think of something I had thought about doing that would sound exciting and yet be truthful, too.

"Web, I would like to cover the Olympics in Russia in 1980," I confided.

Katie's eyes lit up. Evidently I had struck a responsive cord. After that she quickly wound up the interview and left. I wiped the sweat off my brow and returned to being an editor.

Last week I received a copy of the interview as it will appear in the Charlevoix Middle School Press. I must say she was true to the facts and she captured my manner but I'm not sure I would like to go through the process again.

I did learn something from it, though. I will be even more patient with people I interview in the future and I will understand when the gulp a little bit at questions I ask.

After ab, some things just aren't at the tip of your tongue.

Nuts to sweet innocence

A reader phoned to ask why there has been no comment here about the current crop of crooks and drunks in the state Legislature. I explained that, as an intrepid journalist, I'm concerned with news, not reruns.

For instance, it was this column that first revealed that our Department of Natural Resources is instructing employees on how to get rid of underarm odor. That was news about your tax dollar at work.

It is not news that your tax dollars are paying the salaries and expenses of crooks and drunks in the Legislature. It was ever thus.

I received my legislature baptism around 1950, when I was a journalism student at Michigan State University. The teachers thought it was dandy that the Capitol was just a few blocks down the road from the college. This allowed journalism students to observe their legislators at work, close up, and write about it.

I had several interviews with the legislator from my home district. We always met in his favorite bar. I kept asking him earnest questions, such as how did he handle the responsibility of making laws for millions of people to obey? He kept asking me to fix him up with a coed.

He was a friendly man, except when he got drunk. Then he liked to argue with college students who expressed cynical views of the legislative process. One night some friends and I argued that Michigan would be better off if the Legislature changed its schedule and, instead of convening once a year, convened once a century. He retorted loudly, yelling with both arms and breaking several beer bottles.

All this noise made the bar management unhappy, but not unhappy enough to evict a state representative. Instead, my friends and I were told to leave. And from that night on, we were barred from that saloon if my legislator was there, which was usually.

A few days later I attended my first session of the House of Representatives. I watched with growing surprise while the House speaker declared legislative business suspended so that House members could be entertained. Several songs were then played and sung by the small band which performed regularly at my legislator's favorite bar. He had brought them back from lunch with him. It was probably against the law for me to listen, so I left.

Honest, it really happened. And another thing that really happened was that my legislator invited me to a party at his apartment. The booze poured freely from bottles supplied by the Liquor Commission. Each bottle was labaled "sample." My legislator admitted that it was his favorite brand.

In the 25 years since my college experience, I've always kept a bemused eye on the Legislature. Nothing has changed. The majority of members are decent people, but not decent enough to do something terminal about the few drunk and crooked members who give them all a lousy reputation.

Right now, along with the usual assortment of drunk drivers and expense-account cheats, there is a convicted felon in the Legislature. His fellow members are afraid to boot him out. Instead, they've appointed one more committee to study the situation and make a recommendation sometime next month. Whoopee. The next time you're convicted to robbing a bank, demand that your boss appoint a committee to decide whether you should be fired.

While the jelly legislators spend weeks determining whether a lawbreaker should make laws, they get nothing else done. Taxpayers are gypped. Media reports on legislative activites should sound like they're coming from the police station. And the "innocent" legislators sob that they're being tarred by an unfair brush.

Nuts to those sweet innocents. They have the power to fix it so they could never again be so embarrassed by the crooks and drunks. But too often the "innocent" legislator won't support needed reforms because he believes in the golden rule. The next legislator caught stealing might be him, and he wants to be done unto as he did unto.

It's a sad situation, but it's not news. It's a rerun, year after year after year...

Glen Sheppard says road needed closing long ago

To The Editor:

Opponents of the proposed abandonment of the Bells Bay to Fisherman's Island Lakeshore Road are misleading the public and doing a tragic disservice to future generations and our beautiful lakeshore.

The road should have been closed years ago. The lakeshore, south of the Bells Bay campground, should be restored as a quiet, natural area.

A little historical perspective may be in order for the many people new to the issue and for those oldtimers who have forgotten.

Until the early 1960's when Medusa came to town and ran the public off South Point, more than a generation of Charlevoixians had used the lakeshore, from Boulder Park to Clipperview, as though it were public land. Use was light, driftwood, Petoskey stones, and skeletons of wrecked ships and, most important, quiet and nature were plentiful.

The coming of Medusa and construction of the first small campground made many people keenly aware that times were changing. By the late 1960's the numbers of people using the lakeshore had increased manyfold. And the way they used it changed. The dunes were mauled. Their protective vegetation was destroyed by vehicles. There was no longer a scattering of litter. Now there were heaps of litter.

The possibibty that we could lose even more of the lakeshore came into sharp focus in 1968 when the DNR agreed to give Medusa the old quarry site across the road from the campground. Outraged Charlevoix citizens forced the DNR to change its mind.

Then came news that the absentee owner of the beach property south of McGeagh Creek of Clipperview–including Fisherman's Island and the postcard scenic Inwood Creek outlet–planned a residential subdivision along the lakeshore.

Most local people had considered this classically beautiful portion of the beach public property. They were shocked to find they were about to lose something they had enjoyed for generations but had never actually owned.

Under the leadership of local officials–including Ken Staley and Clarence Rabach the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, in March 1971, passed a resolution. It states, in part:

"The State of Michigan... (is) hereby urged to preserve one of the few remaining undeveloped shoreline areas of Lake Michigan by purchasing and holding for public trust as a wilderness area for state park or state forest purpose the so-called Fisherman's Island property located in the townships of Charlevoix and Norwood."

The resolution was endorsement of a plan calling for closure of the lakeshore road. County commissioners at that time were appreciative enough of the outdoors to realize you can't protect anything with a road running through it.

About the same time, the condominiums came to town, robbing Charlevoix of much of its quaint beauty and small town charm. "Cliff dwebers," Natural Resources Commissioner Mat Laitala calls them." With so much being lost in such a hurry, Charlevoixians were more determined than ever to preserve the Fisherman's Island tract.

After an involved struggle to delay the developer from slicing the lakeshore into dozens of homesites, the legislature appropriated funds to buy it in 1974.

On Oct. 23 and Dec. 10, 1974, the Dept. of Natural Resources' parks division held public hearings in the county building on its proposed management plan for the property. The plan calls for closing the road from about McGeagh Creek to Clipperview and from Norwood to Clipperview. The hearings were web attended. The overwhelming majority of persons attending endorsed the plan, realizing use had to be restricted if the beauty and quiet of the lakeshore was to be preserved.

Or, more accurately, if the beauty and quiet was to be restored. Since the early 1970's uncontrobed use of the beach has become so heavy and obnoxious that many local people have quit going to the area during the summer season.

Now a handful of very loud people, whose motives have nothing to do with what the lakeshore will look like in 10, 50 or 100 years, are whipping up an emotional attack on the road abandonment.

Oscar Ward, leader of this pack, has a personal bone to pick with the DNR. He's mad at the department for reasons having nothing to do with the road. H—, I don't blame anyone for being ticked at those skeezel-headed jerks in Lansing. Oscar sees the road issue as a way to get even. He's wrong. But that's his right.

What's tragic is that as many people who should be able to think for themselves are blindly following.

Abandoning the roadway will not lock you out of the lakeshore. There will be open access, but you will have to walk a few yard – not many. It is worth a short walk to see and be a part of the wonder of an unspoiled Lake Michigan shore.

But go to the road abandonment hearing 8 p.m. Friday, May 5, in the County Building. Get the facts and let the County Road Commissioners know where you stand. Don't let a few people rob you, and future generations, of this grand heritage.

We cannot go back to the old days when only a few of us used the shore road. Now thousands use it and in so doing misuse and overuse the lakeshore. The only way to 'keep' it the way we want to remember it, and allow those who will follow to know it in the same way, is to limit access to those who consider it worth a short walk.

Protests sale of nuke plant again

To the Editor:

The sale of 20 percent of the nuclear power plant, Fermi 2, to the electrical co-operatives of Northern Michigan has been declared "illegal" by Mr. Edson G. Case, Acting Director, Office of Nuclear Regulations, Nuclear Regulatory Commission. Mr. Case also said in his findings to me, by letter March 3, 1978, that "the Co-operatives will be required to submit applications to become co-licensees (not only co-owners) of the Fermi 2 facbity prior to issuing the amendment related to the change in ownership of the Fermi 2 facility."

Question: Since the sale of ownership violated federal law (Section 101 of the Atomic Energy Act), why are not the guilty parties being charged with federal crimes for this willful, illegal action which involves both the Atomic Energy Act and the borrowing of federal money, and getting federally-backed loan guarantees to help "pull off" this illegal sale? The amount of money involved will exceed 220 million dobars.

I urge all concerned citizens to ask for a Federal Grand Jury investigation to put the pin-strip-suited business criminals in jail.

Ray Peltz opposes military spending

To the Editor:

The President is concerned about inflation. First he is bothered by the fact that we now import $45 billion worth of oil per year. Perhaps the oil companies prefer to export oil out of politically unstable foreign countries while they can.

Then he is disturbed about unbalanced budgets. If taxes are not levied to balance budgets the deficit will be paid for by inflation, and that is the equivalent of a flat rate tax on everything.

Accumulated deficit spending between 1975 and 1979 inclusive wib be well over $270 billion and just the yearly interest on the national debt is now a major budget item, $49 billion in 1979.

As a candidate Mr. Carter criticized inefficient government, unbalanced budgets, and bloated military spending. As President he submitted the largest budget in history, $500 billion, with a $60 billion deficit, and increased military expenditures by $10 billion to $117 billion.

Military budgets have been increasing steadily since 1965 during war and peace, from about $50 billion then to $117 billion now and the Secretary of defense plans to increase those expenditures 3 percent per year above the inflation rate.

The current military argument for increased mibtary spending is that during the past decade communist conventional forces have increased significantly and their challenge must be met, but it has not been revealed how much of that additional communist conventional equipment is American equipment that was captured by, or was abandoned to, the "energy" by the American military establishment in southeast Asia.

The greatest waste of energy and national resources that are indulged in by the developed countries are armaments that they are not used, a waste that is exceeded only by armaments when they are used.

Weapons have become so destructive that mankind, as well as civilization, is threatened, yet, national military establishments of most nations continue to escalate their pace toward their rendezvous with disaster in the name of "national security."

It makes little difference if power corrupts or if those who seek power tend to be corrupt, the history of must nations demonstrates that national governments are inclined to be dishonest, devious, capricious, and dangerous.

If people everywhere renounced national allegiance and accepted the rule that any national government of any nation that would use modern warfare against any people does not deserve the support of its citizens and forfeits the right to govern, it might reverse this trend, but that is not likely.

Maybe man's mind has become too complex, too susceptible to illusion and delusion, too vicious to survive, a failed experiment in evolution, the intelligent dinosaur

Ray E. Peltz

Meet Charlevoix

...Tom Terry

By PEG ORLE

Tom Terry is a teacher in the Char-Em Schools and an avid jogger. This week the Courier talks with him about his work, and about the "Charlevoix Training Club" he and other local athletes are helping to organize.

COURIER: What is your job at Char-Em?

TERRY: I'm a school psychologist. I evaluate students' learning abilities and achievements and diagnose learning and behavior problems.

COURIER: How long have you been at Char-Em?

TERRY: This is my third year. I had ten years of teaching before I came here.

COURIER: Where did you go to college?

TERRY: At Michigan State. I have an Education Specialist degree.

COURIER: Where did you grow up?

TERRY: In Almont, in the Thumb area. I was in the same school system for 13 years.

COURIER: Do you have a family?

TERRY: Yes, my wife, Barb, and I have three children. Kristen is eight, Jonathan is six, and Timothy is one.

COURIER: When did you start jogging?

TERRY: I've jogged off and on for several years, but I began to run seriously this February. I had to get out of the house and get some fresh air and take off some pounds.

COURIER: How far do you run a day?

TERRY: About five miles. I don't take the same route every day. I usually run routes that bring me back out Petoskey Avenue to the golf course and around the Yacht Club. I like to change the route because it gives me different things to look at and different dogs to encounter. I start about 6:30 in the morning. It's a great way to start the day.

COURIER: Do you usually run alone?

TERRY: Yes, I prefer it. It's a time of solitude, concentration, and creative thinking. I often meet other joggers en route, even neighbors I'd never met before. We stop a moment to get acquainted then go off on our different trails.

COURIER: Isn't it difficult to run in the snow and cold?

TERRY: No. Snow and cold don't hurt the lungs. I look for places to run off the pavement – grassy shoulders, etc. It's easier on the feet and joints.

COURIER: Were you a track man in school?

TERRY: No. In fact, I was discouraged from running as a kid. I was told it wasn't healthy, that it would enlarge the heart, etc. Actually, running strengthens the heart, makes it more efficient.

COURIER: What are the real benefits of jogging?

TERRY: It promotes physical fitness, mental alertness, and emotional stability. It's the best way to fight fatigue. In fact, it's the best way to look and feel good.

COURIER: Is jogging for everyone?

TERRY: It's for men, women, teen-agers, children. However, anyone under a doctor's care should get his advice before starting. Some people start walking, then running short distances, and gradually work up to the distance they feel is right for them. It's an individual thing.

COURIER: What kind of equipment is necessary for jogging?

TERRY: Jogging is the most economical way to become physically fit. The important thing is shoes. They should have arch supports, good traction, and be comfortable so they don't pinch the toes. The rest of the clothing is up to the individual person. Dress to weather conditions.

COURIER: Did you ever run in a marathon?

TERRY: No, but we're planning one for this summer during Venetian week-end. There's a lot of interest in running right now.

COURIER: What about the club you are organizing?

TERRY: We're going to have our first meeting this Thursday evening at 7:30 in the Char-Em Service Center Conference Room on Mercer Boulevard. Everyone interested in physical fitness is invited – men, women, teen-agers. We are going to show a film, "Physical Fitness in 30 Minutes a Week" and Dr. Robert Polleys of Boyne City will talk on "Training for a Marathon". He recently ran in the Boston Marathon. Also, Plas Presnell, Charlevoix track coach, will discuss his plans for a body-building program for adults. Finally, we have invited Dr. Erin Arvilla to explain her aerobics class.

COURIER: So the meeting isn't just for joggers?

TERRY: No. It's for runners, joggers, walkers, cyclists, swimmers and everyone else interested in physical fitness. The Charlevoix Training Club will be for everyone.

March of Dimes contributes funds to hospital for machines

It was almost like Christmas for the Charlevoix Area Hospital recently.

The hospital was the recipient of a March of Dimes gift purchased with money raised from various campaigns.

The March of Dimes donated the funds to the hospital for the purchase of a radiant heater for the newborn work table and a fetal heart rate amplifier. Both pieces of equipment will be used in the obstetrics department.

"This equipment was chosen because of the March of Dimes' emphasis on the prevention of birth defects and newborn complications," explained Penny Schroeder, co-chairperson of the Charlevoix County March of Dimes.

Kay Chase, her co-Chairperson, explained that funds raised in Charlevoix County through the Mother's March Against Birth Defects, the Coffee Day Campaign, Walkathons, the East Jordan Rotary Pancake Supper, and through the school childrens' campaigns, made the purchase of the valuable equipment possible.

The March of Dimes gave the Charlevoix Area Hospital $588 for the radiant heater and $355 for the Doppler Heart Rate Amplifier.

Richard Krueger, Hospital Administrator, and Mrs. Chase and Mrs. Schroeder examined the new equipment with Mary Terryberry, R.N. Supervisor of the Obstetrical Unit, this past Wednesday.

Krueger explained that the radiant heater will be used in the newborn nursery to maintain the body temperature of babies while physicians and staff are treating the infant. The hospital's delivery room has another radiant heater and work table which are used to maintain the body temperature of all newborns, immediately after birth.

The Administrator also explained that the Doppler Heart Rate Amplifier is an essential diagnostic took for use before birth, enabling physicians and nurses to monitor fetal heart rate in situations where the heart rate is difficult to hear.

In addition to the donation to the Charlevoix Area Hospital, the county March of Dimes gave funds to assist the establishment of the East Jordan Family Health Center, funds to assist in the nutrition education program for pregnant teens through the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District and gave an infant heater to the Beaver Island clinic.

KAY CHASE and Penny Schroeder (left), representatives of the Charlevoix County March of Dimes, watch as Mary Terryberry and Richard Krueger, Charlevoix Area Hospital administrator, explain the doppler heart rate amplifier and the radiant heater over the work table they are standing around. The March of Dimes donated funds to the hospital so it could purchase the equipment.

These students aren't just horsing around

By LAURA GLASS

The faint odor of a horse born on a muggy day has been hanging in the halls of Charlevoix High School lately.

The smell is all due to the advanced biology project of two students, Mitch Martin and Erik Lundteigen. The seniors aren't just horsing around with their project, but are involved in a serious study of the skeletal structure of a horse.

Slowly, but surely Lundteigen and Martin are reconstructing the skeleton of a horse.

Originally, the two high school students had a smaller project planned – the skeletal reconstruction of a squirrel. However, biology teacher Pete Spieles had something else in mind.

Spieles had just received a stillborn horse and suggested the two students put their studies to use and reconstruct its skeleton.

"The two were interested in skeletons and preparing animal skins, so I figured this would be the perfect learning experience for them," the teacher said.

Skeletal reconstruction isn't as easy as it sounds. It's a long, meticulous and often messy process. Martin and Lundteigen have been working on the project for a week and the messy part of the project is over.

"The skinning and cleaning was the worst," Lundteigen said, as his partner disagreed.

"The boiling was the worst," Martin said.

And his classmates in the biology class agreed.

"The smell when boiling off the meat was the worst but after a while you'd get used to it," Martin explained. "The first day was rough because we would work on it until lunchtime."

And that affected their appetites.

There are five steps in the reconstruction process, the students explained. First is the skinning and cleaning. Next the dissection, and third the boiling in water to remove all the meat. Then the bones are boiled in potassium-hydroxide to whiten them. Finally the most interesting and difficult part of the project--identifying and labeling the bones and the reconstruction.

Lundteigen and Martin have just finished the final boiling in potassium. They have done most of the work themselves, only taking suggestions from Spieles when necessary.

"This is really new to us and it's quite an experience if you overlook the gross parts," Martin commented.

The students plan on having the entire horse rebuilt and labeled by the end of the year.

The aroma of the skeletal reconstruction has made it the most talked about project in the biology class. But the other advanced biology students are also working on projects in their areas of interest.

Several students are working with the mentally handicapped students in Ironton and at the Bergmann Center. Others are working studying plant growth and hydroponics, a specific area of plant growth.

Speech team offers entertainment

By LAURA GLASS

A special evening of entertainment will once again be offered to the public by Charlevoix High School's award winning speech team Thursday.

The speech team will offer a 90-minute show at the high school. The program will include selections from serious readings, humorous readings, story telling, oratory, the duo "Brian's Song" and the multiple reading, "Pardon Me, Is This Planet Token?"

Tickets will be available at the door with the proceedings going to defray the cost of the team travelling expenses this year.

The next tournament on the speech teams schedule is the State Final in Ann Arbor. Qualifiers for the meet are: Pan Sutherland, radio broadcasting; Laura Glass, humorous interpretive reading; Janet Van Wieren and Sheri Cook, ninth and tenth grade story telling; Matt Stangis and Scott Swonson, duo reading; and Craig Boss, Bruce Avery, John Grooters, Chris Henkel and Geoff Nelson, the cast of the multiple group reading.

Alternates for the state meet are: Ann Marie Watson, extemporaneous reading; and Debbie Tolias, story telling.

The team, under the direction of Coach Connie Ford, invites everyone to attend its performance Thursday. Tickets will be available at the door for $1.50 for Adults and $1 for students. Children under five years old will get in free.

The performance will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the study hall.

MEMBERS OF the Charlevoix High School speech team are offering an evening of entertainment this Thursday at the high school. Standing are: Pam Sutherland, Laura Glass, Ann Marie Watson, Debbie Tolias, and Sheri Cook.

Charlevoix bands receive II ratings

The Charlevoix High School bands captured two II ratings in the Michigan State Band and Orchestra Festival in Traverse City this weekend.

The Symphony Band, playing in a Class B category, received a I for performance but lost the top rating when it over ran the time allowed for set up prior to playing before the four judges, Gary Stutzman, band director explained.

The band had received two I's and a II in concert and a I in sight reading but was penalized to a II rating because of the technicality.

The 90-piece band was

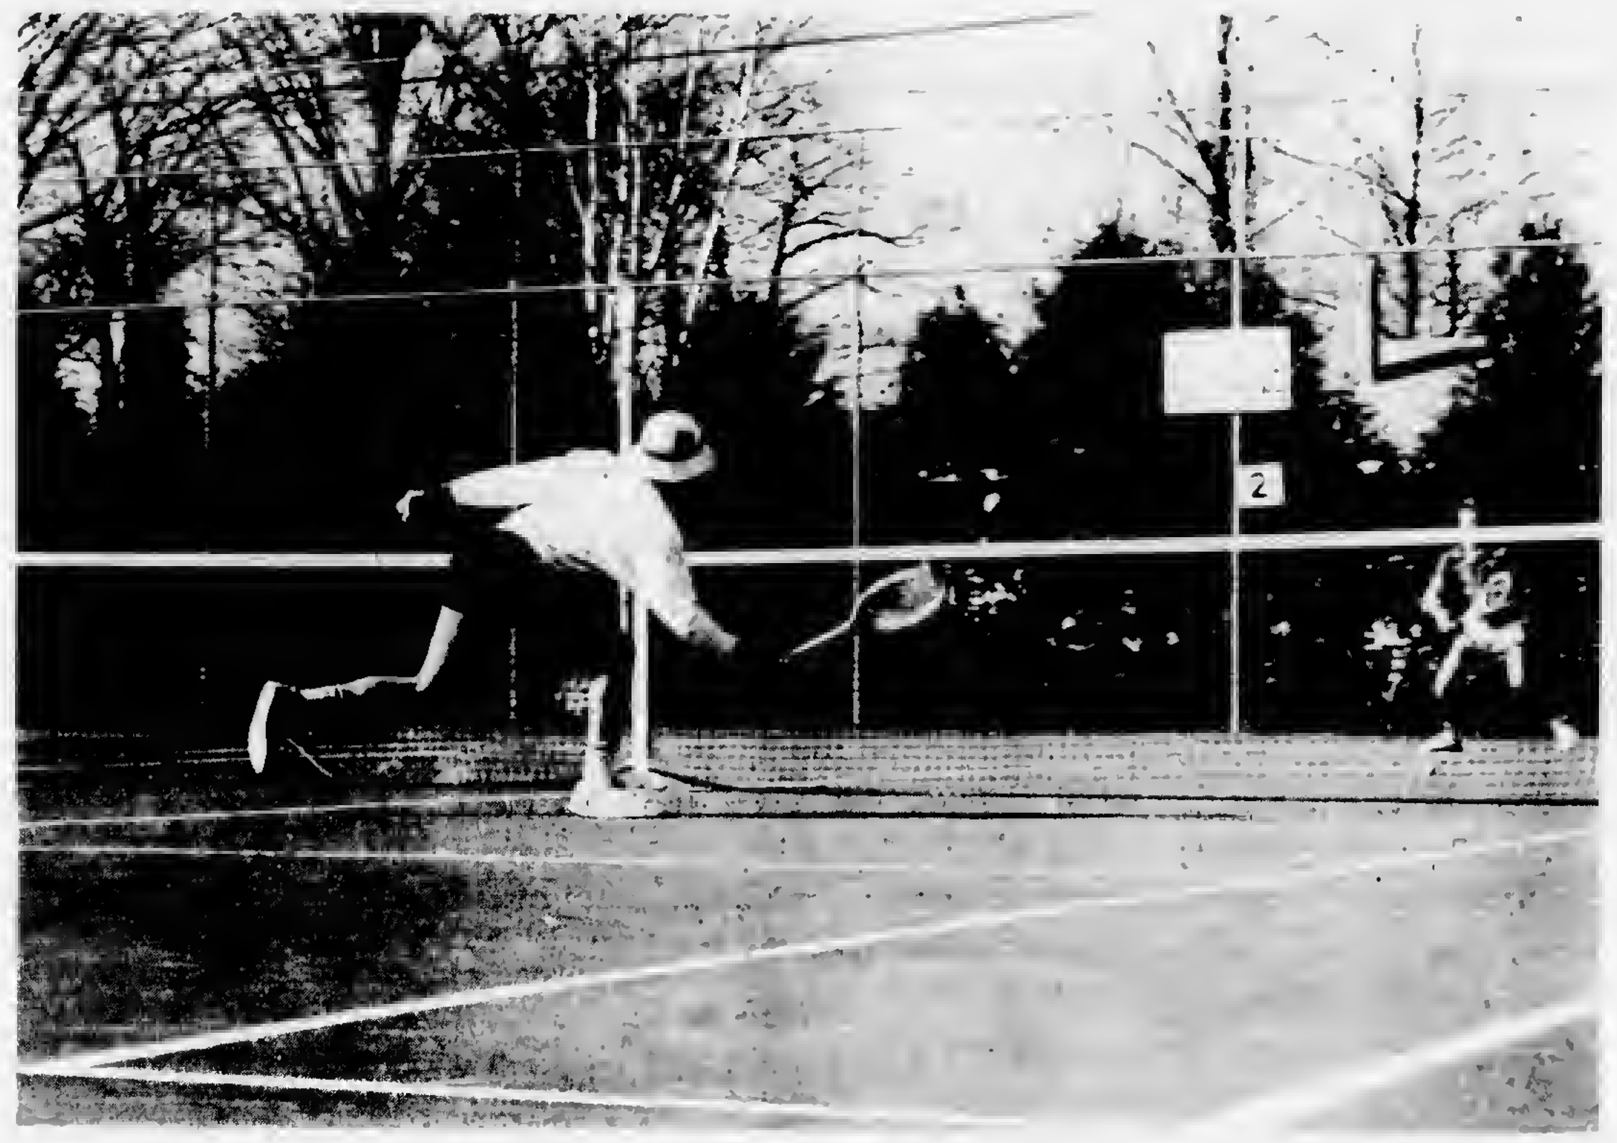
HIS PETOSKEY opponent kept him running during this match last week. Erik Lundteigen lost this match but won his match against an Alpena opponent earlier in the week.

TOM McNAMARA fought hard during this match but he couldn't put the shots past his Petoskey opponent. McNamara had a rough week losing both matches.

Rayders lose two tough ones



MARK LIGNELL races to the net in an attempt to return a shot to his opponent during the Petoskey-Charlevoix match Thursday. Lignell lost his match to the tough Class B team and the Rayders lost 5-2. Lignell also lost a match earlier in the week to an Alpena player. The Rayders also lost that match 5-2.

DAVE TAYLOR serves the ball to his opponent during this match against Petoskey. Taylor lost his match and the Rayders lost 5-2 both against Petoskey and Alpena last week.

JOHN GROOTERS prepares to serve during this doubles match while partner Jeff Cockfield waits at the net. Grooters and Cockfield won both of their doubles matches against Petoskey and Alpena last week. They were the only players to pull off double victories.

Fledgling baseball team off to good start in Charlevoix

The Charlevoix High School baseball team is off to a good start. The team won its first two games against East Jordan last week 13-4 and 3-0.

Woody Pierson was the winning pitcher for the first game giving up four hits. Scott Murgan was the winning pitcher for the second game giving up only two hits.

Coach Pete Spieles said 35 students had come out for the team and that 20 would be in uniform for each game. The team is senior-dominated, Spieles said, but juniors and sophomores also hold positions on the team.

Roger Gowell is working with the freshman and sophomore members of the team preparing them for varsity status while Spieles concentrates on working with the older players.

Spieles said it was too early to tell what his team's strengths were, however, the pitching staff has turned out to be an early strength of the team.

"One disadvantage that we're going to face is that we are a senior-dominated team and our seniors haven't played baseball for two or three years because we haven't had a team," the coach said. "It will be interesting to see how we fare against other teams that have been playing for several years."

The Charlevoix Board of Education agreed to establish a baseball team this year at the high school for the first time and allocated the team a budget of $500. The rest of the money needed to establish the team will be raised by a parents group and through money making projects of team members.

"There's been a lot of enthusiasm from the team members," Spieles said. "We started a little late, but we have a full 20 game schedule with all of our games played as double headers.

"Having a high school baseball team is something that's been needed for a long time in Charlevoix," the coach said. "It really compliments our Little League program which allows the boys to play until they are 15.

"We have a tremendous number of kids in the Little League program who enjoy playing baseball, but once they turn 15 that's it, they had no where else to go. Now they can play in high school."

Spieles said getting past the first year and over the initial equipment and uniform expenses for the team would be the major hurdle facing the program. After that the expenses of maintaining the program won't be as high.

The Charlevoix team's home field is the senior league field on Carpenter Avenue.

Steve Otmanowski participates in Salty Rooster Air Force exercises

Airman First Class Steve Otmanowski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chester F. Otmanowski of 306 Belvedere, Charlevoix, Mich., is participating in "Salty Rooster," a U.S. Air Forces in Europe readiness exercise being held at Hahn AB, Germany.

Airman Otmanowski is an aircraft maintenance specialist at Columbus AFB, Miss.

Highlighting the exercise is the augmentation of the 50th Tactical Fighter Wing at Hahn by more than 300 Air Force personnel from the Air Training Command (ATC) in the U.S. and more than 100 people from other bases in Europe.

Designed to evaluate the capability of ATC to reinforce Air Force units currently stationed in Europe, "Salty Rooster" is also testing the overall capability of a tactical fighter wing to conduct a maximum number of simulated combat missions over a sustained period of time.

Every effort is being made during the exercise to simulate a realistic wartime flying schedule, which includes refueling and rearming the aircraft after each simulated combat mission.

The airman attended Charlevoix High School.

FAITH TEACHES KINDNESS TO ALL LIVING CREATURES

Many conscientious parents drill their children in the use of "please", "thank you" and the various forms of good conduct toward human beings, and yet are unaware that they may then go outside and mistreat the family pet or chase lizards around a nearby field to catch and harass them. Unchecked, this becomes an apparently acceptable outlet for rebellion and frustration. The proper early training, reinforced by your own example, should include kindness toward all of God's living creatures. The Church and Sunday school of your choice can do much to instill this benevolent feeling, which will be reflected also in their attitude toward their fellow human beings and will set the pattern for the conduct of their entire lives. They will realize the importance of all life in the wonder of God's creation.

Community concert offers bargain

Four concerts for $10 is the bargain being offered by the Northern Michigan Community Concert Association during its 1978-1979 season.

The Association's annual membership drive is being held this week. Nearly 100 workers representing 20 communities are busy selling tickets for the series. People who are not contacted personally to buy tickets may obtain them by calling concert headquarters in Petoskey, 347-2522.

C.A. Odmark of Charlevoix is second vice-president of the Association.

The four concerts booked for the season have been called "outstanding".

The "Tapiola Children's Choir and Orchestra" of Finland, under the leadership of Erkkia Pohjola, was organized in 1963. Since that time, they have won numerous contests, including the BBC TV "Let the Peoples Sing" contest, in which 42 choirs from 17 countries participated. They have won wide acclaim on their tours to Sweden, Norway, England, Japan, France, Poland, and the Soviet Union, and a taped special UNICEF program with Danny Kaye.

Pianist Virginia Eskin "really has everything", according to the Boston Globe, "intelligence, technique, sensitivity, and on top of it all, she is beautiful". Ms. Eskin is an acknowledged authority on the music of 19th century American composers and major women composers of the United States. Her performances and recordings have consistently received critical acclaim. This year she will perform in England, Belgium, Holland, Italy, and throughout the United States.

"Scotland on Parade" is called "a thrilling exhibition of popular and traditional folk songs and dances of the Highlands and the Islands of Scotland." Folksinging guitarist Alistair MacDonald and TV and concert singing star Morag McKay head a cast of vibrant young performers, including singers, pipers, a band, a Scottish fiddler and dancers, in a panorama of authetic entertainment.

The "Ronnie Brown Trio" is headed by performer-conductor-composer Ronnie Brown, who received his B.A and Master's degrees in music from the New England Conservatory, where he also served as a faculty member. Recently he has been touring and introducing his own distinctive brand of music making to audiences who come to hear him mingle Mozart with such moderns as Gershwin, Rogers and Hammerstein, and Ellington.

Special jazz cantata offered by St. Mary's, Congregational choirs

A special musical program will be presented by St. Mary's School students and the Congregational Church junior choir next week.

The two groups of students will present "100 percent Chance of Rain," a musical story about Noah at 7:30 p.m. May 9 in St. Mary's Church.

Jeanie Brewster, St. Mary's music teacher, and Fran Tollas, director of the Congregational Church choirs, will direct the cantata. Accompanying the students will be: Laura Dziedzic on flute, Bob Wexstaff on string bass, and David Boal on drums. Gary Stewart will play the part of Noah.

The public is invited to attend the program and to enjoy refreshments in the school hall following the presentation.

Auxiliary, photographer plan pictures of area newborns

The words, "Baby face, you've got such a pretty little baby face" have been echoing in the halls of the Charlevoix Area Hospital lately.

"This is not a new idea," Paul Maue, owner of Dale's Photo, explained. "They've done it in downstate hospitals for a long time. But we thought it would be a nice thing to try here."

Maue said the baby pictures are taken on the second day after their birth when mother and child are feeling a little bit better. Gene Farley handles the photography of the newborns.

The program has been in operation for two weeks at the hospital and so far has been received very well by the parents and babies, Maue said.

commended by the judges for their fine performance. The sight reading judge in addressing the group following their performance, told the students they had no business doing as well in sight reading as they had. The music they had been given was for a AAA band.

"I am not saying your handling of the music was that good, but your ability to hand such varied instructions in so short a time tells me you have received fine instruction," he said.

Stutzman said he thought the music was difficult especially because of the ranges in time, but he was proud of how the band performed.

Commission approves road abandonment

The Charlevoix County Road Commission voted to abandon Lake Shore Drive during its meeting Monday morning.

The road commissioners had been asked to abandon the road by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to pave the way for the proposed Fisherman's Island State Park.

The DNR will not spend money to develop a park in the area unless it has control of the road and can control access into the proposed park area.

Commissioner Donald Graham said the road commission decided to abandon the road because of the degradation of the proposed park area due to misuse.

"The degrodation of the forest area and the beach area will continue at an excellerated rate if the area is left as it is," Graham said explaining the commission's decision. "The only hope for help in the area is the DNR. The public has given no indication of help despite all the talk we've heard."

Graham said the board was well aware of the feelings of the people opposing the abandonment.

"We realized at the public hearing that there were many people who oppose abandonment," Graham said. "But anyone who has been there on the weekend or during a busy holiday and seen the motorcycles outside the camp area from the end of the blacktop to the creek knows this must be done.

"We could continue to duck the issue and not take any responsibility," he pointed out. "But with the abandonment people now have a place to protest the decision if they wish to protest it."

William Korthase, chairman of the board, seconded Graham's comments.

"If action is going to be taken against the action, so be it," Korthase said. "If we hadn't abandoned the road this year it would have had to been done next year."

The DNR officials has indicated earlier that if the road was not abandoned this year, they would put the project on a back burner for a few years and then asked for abandonment again.

"The people voted to have a park in this area and this is their chance to get it," the commissioner said.

Graham said the resolutions adopted by the Norwood and Charlevoix township boards and the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners favoring the abandonment of the road had no bearing on the road commission's action. But the commissioners did appreciate the action by the three boards, he said.

A third road commissioner, Paul Hobert Mousseau, abstained from voting on the abandonment on the advice of his attorney. Mousseau had sold some land in the proposed park area to the DNR.

Now that the road has been abandoned by the county and turned over to the DNR a timetable of events will begin to take place.

A park ranger will be moved into the area and his or her headquarters and residence will be set up in the proposed Fisherman's Island park area. Telephones will be installed in the residence and the ranger will be meeting with various law enforcement officials to establish a working relationship, according to the DNR.

Within the next week the unauthorized trails created by four-wheel drive vehicles and motorcycles will be blocked off and the boundary lines will be posted along with the park rules, regulation signs and vehicle control signs.

A park entrance sign at the end of the blacktopped portion of Lake Shore Drive will be installed along with control gates at the north end by the present turn-around and at the south end in Norwood Township.

A parking area will also be established at the Norwood Township end of the park.

In addition the unauthorized campsites at Inwood and Whiskey creeks will be removed and a complete clean-up of the area will be started.

The park officials will also begin interviewing people for two positions for temporary workers and for two CETA workers to assist the ranger in operating the park.

DNR officials estimated that major improvements at the park will not begin until 1981 according to the present funding schedule

Residents hotly debate closing of Lake Shore Dr.

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

The future of Lake Shore Drive was hotly debated by more than 75 people at a public hearing held by the Charlevoix County Road Commission Friday night.

The people crowded into the Charlevoix County courtroom to discuss the question of abandoning Lake Shore Drive to the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) in the area of the proposed Fishermans Island State Park.

The county road commissioners requested that the discussion focus on the pros and cons of abandonment of Lake Shore Drive, but most speakers addressed themselves to the pros and cons of the state park, good and bad motorcycle and off-the-road vehicle owners, the United States constitution, state vs. local control and other issues.

In the final minutes of the hearing William Korthase, Road Commission Chairman, requested that speakers simply identify their stance on the road abandonment question.

Approximately 55 percent of the audience indicated that they were opposed to abandonment and 45 percent stood to announce their support for the abandonment.

Many Norwood residents spoke in favor of abandonment of the road, adding their hope that Department of Natural Resources control of the Fisherman's Island park would help them control the vandalism and noise problems of the Norwood Township Park, adjacent to the proposed state park.

Opposition to the proposed abandonment was generally couched in terms of opposition to the Fisherman's Island State Park concept as a whole.

Oscar Ward, in a wide-ranging speech of some 15 minutes, voiced his opposition to state control, with allusions to "foreign thinking" and a demand that the issue be put on a ballot. Ward maintained that control of activities in the Bells' Bay-Fisherman's Island area is up to local units of government.

Ward presented two petitions to the Road Commission: the first asking to have the issue placed on a ballot; and the second requesting that the Bell's Bay area be left as it presently exists.

One Norwood resident, responding to Ward said, "We don't have control now of the motorcyclists who are wrecking our picnic tables. Our township cannot afford to hire people to police the area.

"We are going to preserve the area by closing the road,"' the speaker concluded.

The theme that the park's natural beauty and unique near-wild state is being threatened by irresponsible use was stated by most of those who favored abandoning of the road.

DNR regional parks superintendent Dave Diltz presented the DNR's point of view at the opening of the hearing.

"The question is 'What sort of resource legacy will we leave to our grandchildren?'" he said.

Diltz said abandonment of Lake Shore Drive, and the creation of the state park, affords control over the use of natural areas. It will insure the unique Lake Michigan area can be preserved.

To allay fears, he spoke directly to several issues.

"One, no charge will be made for motor vehicles until major development monies are actually spent," He added that the summer of 1981 is the soonest any construction can take place.

He continued saying, "Two, this will be a day-use road." He explained the positioning of gates to control access to the area.

He emphasized that hunting, smelt dipping, sucker spearing and similar traditional activities would not be affected.

"From 11 p.m. to 8 a.m., from Memorial Day to Labor Day, the road will be closed to regulate indiscriminate camping in places not designated for camping."

Later he explained that many camp sites are being created by people who cut down trees, tear out brush, and develop roads to sites outside the present camping area. Diltz said that continued development of these "unauthorized" campsites will endanger the whole area.

He was careful to reiterate that while the DNR would have several staff members at the State Park on a round-the-clock basis, total control of vandalism and unauthorized use – such as off-the-road vehicles and motorcycles – was impossible.

However, he said, the DNR feels that abandoning the Lake Shore Drive and eventually developing a single entrance to the state park, near Clipperview subdivision, will enable park rangers to maintain more control than presently exists.

Discussion focussed on the control issue, with those opposed to the abandonment arguing that local law enforcement and township officials have the responsibility to control the problems.

Members of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners present all spoke out in favor of abandoning the road.

Ralph Richardson, chairman of the Charlevoix County Parks Commission compared the Bells Bay-Fisherman's Island problems with the history of Whiting Park.

"The Whiting Park through-way road had to be closed for control," he told the audience, explaining that once people could no longer drive straight through the park, they were less likely to use it as their personal garbage dump or for other inappropriate uses.

Speaking to people who felt that the establishment of the park would bring more and more downstaters north, Richardson noted that after road closure and institution of a camping fee, more local people, not downstate visitors were using Whiting Park.

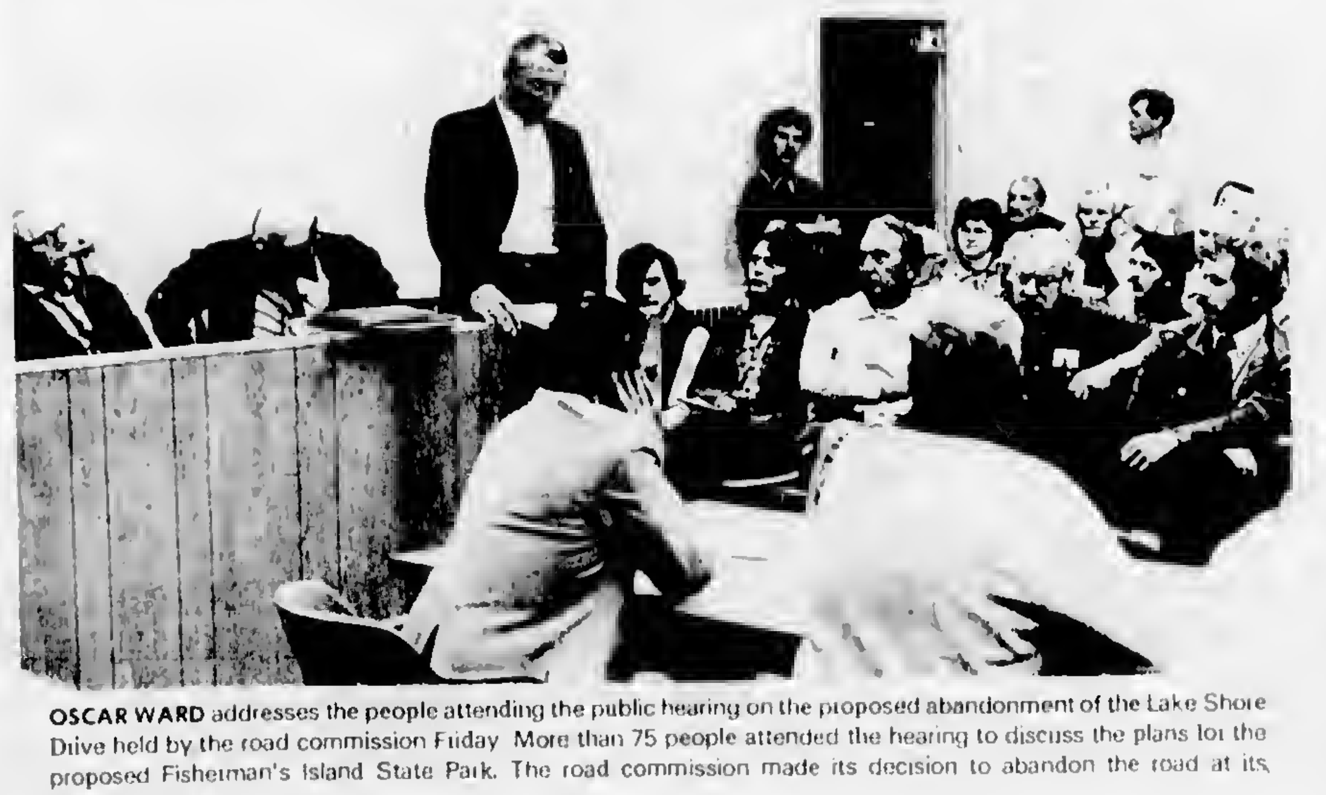
Throughout the two-hour hearing, barbed asides between long-time local adversaries produced waves of laughter.

Just prior to adjournment Charlevoix Jay Oliver rose to speak:

"As a descendant of the aboriginal owners," his opening was drowned out by applause, "I say let's pick up the broken pieces. Let's put back what we've taken out. No one owns the land. We all own it. Let's preserve it."

Oliver said later he did not want to take a stand on the abandonment question, he simply wanted the people to reflect on how they felt now that the question has become who is going to control their land.

Chairman of the road commission Korthase told the audience that the question of abandonment is to be discussed at the regular road commission meeting this Monday. Korthase would not predict what, if any, action the commission would take.



OSCAR WARD addresses the people attending the public hearing on the proposed abandonment of the Lake Shore Drive held by the road commission Friday More than 75 people attended the hearing to discuss the plans for the proposed Fisherman's Island State Park. The road commission made its decision to abandon the road at its meeting Monday.

Courier wins MEA School Bell 3rd time

Once again the Charlevoix Courier has proven that it is a real bell ringer.

The Courier was one of 10 weekly newspapers in the state to receive the Michigan Education Association's (MEA) annual School Bell award. The awards were announced during the MEA's annual awards luncheon at the Detroit Plaza Hotel.

It was the third consecutive time that the Courier had received the plaque and an engraved brass bell with a black wooden handle – a replica of the old-fashioned bell that once stood on the classroom teacher's desk.

The Courier was selected for the award based on its strong and comprehensive year around coverage of the school district and the people in it.

Other area weekly newspapers receiving the award included the Northern Michigan Herald-Times in Gaylord and the Antrim County News.

Only two daily newspapers received the award, the Petoskey News-Review and the Ypsilanti Press.

Five radio stations received School Bell awards including WJML of Petoskey and WHGR of Houghton Lake. Four television stations won with WWTV of Cadillac among them and six individual writing awards were given out including one to Lorrlane Lawrence of the Antrim County News.

DOCKMASTER SELECTION

I would like to say something in response to the choosing of a new dockmaster. Sam, you goofed. You had two workers for the price of one. I hope you never grow old. And, above all, I hope you never become ill. A disgusted senior citizen.

WALKATHON CHEATS

This is concerning the Big Brothers & Sisters Walkathon. Some people sponsoring kids have not paid or are paying less than they pledged. This doesn't give the kids much incentive to do it again.

NOT HILLBILLIES

I am calling in about the Hotline that complained about cleaning up around the houses. I think it's good that they are concerned, but I didn't like the way they signed off, saying "shape up or ship out, you hillbillies". We're from the south and we've been up here 15 or 16 years. As far as I'm concerned, it should be the Michiganders. Furthermore, if people had something to do instead of sitting around finding something to complain about, maybe more things would be done in Charlevoix.

START WITH CITY HALL

I have just read the Hotline about Charlevoix, the dump and I have a comment to add to this article. Maybe we should start with City Hall and get them to clean up their junk sitting in their parking lot and maybe then the other people in town will clean up their neighborhood, too. That old, white Pontiac has been sitting there in the parking lot like a real eyesore, with flat tires, looking like a piece of junk. How about getting rid of that?

GLEN SHEPPARD RIGHT

Mr. Sheppard is reasonable and right about the shore road. A little bit should be kept something like it was, now that machines are chugging up the whole country, and the condominiums are like the Great Wall of China.

Yours,
Louis B. Beautner

Firecracker issue explodes as summer arrives in county

Michigan residents can look forward to an explosive summer this year.

But things should be fairly quiet in Charlevoix County, according to Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes.

Recent changes in the federal fireworks law have allowed the sale of Class C firecrackers and other similar types of fireworks containing up to two grains of explosives to adults in Michigan.

In fact, firecrackers have appeared on the shelves of several stores in the county. Prosecutor Hayes said he first became aware that the explosives were being sold when his children brought some home from a Charlevoix grocery store.

Hayes said he has since advised all county law enforcement officials that although changes in the federal law allow the sale and possession of fireworks in Michigan, he believes the state restrictions pertaining to the storage of explosives remain in tact.

The state law requires that fireworks be stored in an unlighted, unheated building a specified distance from schools and occupied dwellings. The restrictions make it virtually impossible for area businessmen to store the fireworks properly.

Hayes warned law officials that businessmen may be prosecuted under the storage provision of the state law if they sell firecrackers.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Jack Mol said he had received the prosecutor's letter and had in turn informed local businessmen of Hayes' opinion. Mol said only one business in town, Edwards IGA, was carrying the fireworks.

Dick Edwards, owner of Edwards IGA, said he still had a small number of firecrackers in the store, but that he probably would not be ordering any additional supplies.

"We've got some now, but I think I'm going to drop them," Edwards said.

"I'm not enthused about carrying the firecrackers, "But I'm caught in the middle.

"People want firecrackers and if I don't sell them, they'll just get them somewhere else. But it is questionable how safe they are."

Edwards said if the law enforcement officials find out that the storage provisions in the state law are enforceable that it would make it rather difficult to sell the firecrackers.

To complicate the matter further, Jerry Hartman, Region 10 detective with the Emmet County Sheriff's Department, said there is a question about the fireworks conforming to the new law, too.

Hartman has sent some of the fireworks to the State Police lab to find out if they contain an allowable amount of explosive.

"I'm not sure that Class C fireworks in Hong Kong, where most of the firecrackers that are being sold around here were made, are the same as American Class C firecracker," the detective said. "It may be that these fireworks don't comply with the law anyway."

Prosecutor Hayes said he has taken a harsh stand on the sale of firecrackers because he believes that is the position the majority of the people support.

"There must have been a reason why the state legislature passed the law in the first place," Hayes said. "I think this is one of the areas where people wanted to be protected by legislation.

"I also believe that we will see the state legislature enact a new law by this fall prohibiting the sale of fireworks in this state."

Hayes said a technicality overturned the provisions of the state law when the federal law was changed last year.

"In the state law there is a provision that says it will be consistent with the federal law," the prosecutor explained. "So when the federal law was changed the Michigan law became inconsistent and was suspended."

Recent court injunctions against the Michigan State Police Fire Marshals and against the City of Lansing prohibited these two bodies from enforcing the state law and opened up the state to the sale of firecrackers, Hayes said.

Baseball team plans fundraiser

The Charlevoix High School baseball team will canvas the Charlevoix area late today (Wednesday) selling packages of 30 ga. bags in time for Michigan Clean-up Week.

Proceeds from the sale will go to offset the cost of equipping the high school baseball program which was introduced into the sports schedule for the first time this spring.

Hospital needs support in order to continue service to community

There's something to be said for having a community hospital. And National Hospital Week is just one of the 52 times a year that it should be said.

Charlevoix and the surrounding area is fortunate to have the Charlevoix Area Hospital. Its proximity is just one of the many advantages it affords to the residents of the area and to their health care. There are many other advantages to having a community hospital, too.

For one thing, the Charlevoix Area Hospital is still small enough to provide that personal attention that sick people need in addition to the medical attention they are getting. According to people who have been in the hospital, personal attention is one of the strongest points of the Charlevoix hospital.

The hospital staff members are often neighbors of the patients and their families. They understand what it is like to be in a hospital and they try to make the patients' stays as comfortable as possible.

But even if the staff members aren't neighbors of the patients, they understand the importance of being a community hospital and treating people as people. They aren't so busy that the patient becomes merely a broken leg or a faulty heart.

The care at the hospital is also improving. Charlevoix Area Hospital board members say they have been receiving many comments about the quality of the care of the doctors and the staff members. They say they have received assurances from many quarters about the quality of the staff and the excellent job they are doing for Charlevoix area residents.

It's nice to have a friendly hospital with a good staff that is close at hand. Actually, it's more than nice, it's a privilege. It's a privilege that Charlevoix residents too often don't take the time to think about it.

The hospital can't exist just by itself. It can't go on treating the sick people of Charlevoix County unless it receives the support of county residents, too.

Many county agencies and residents regularly show their support both morally and financially, but it is going to take the efforts of all residents if they are to retain the hospital.

Hospitals have new regulations and there are new ideas about how health care should be delivered these days.

One idea afoot is that small hospitals, community hospitals, should be closed in favor of setting up larger regional hospital that will be more efficient because they will have volumes of people to treat and to keep their beds full.

The idea makes economic sense, even if it leaves people's emotions out in the rain.

And what that melts down to is, if Charlevoix area residents want to keep their convenient, caring talented hospital staff and facility they are going to have to support it. During hospital week this year Charlevoix area residents should remember that you don't miss something until it's gone, but then it's too late.

Patty Muma thanks volunteers who helped at Cancer lunch

To the Editor:

I would sincerely like to take this opportunity to thank the V.F.W. and the American Legion auxiliaries for the outstanding salad luncheon they so generously donated to the American Cancer Society.

A thank you goes out ta the following merchants who donated products to the luncheon.

Oleson Food Store

Staley Grocery
King's
First State Bank
Charlevoix County State Bank
Essenberg's Grocery.

I especially would like to thank Rosalyn Goldstick and Mary Anne Farkas, co-chairman of V.F.W. and American Legion auxiliaries, Louis Hollow, who served as dishwasher and to all of those who gave so graciously of their time and effort to make this joint salad luncheon a success.

Without the enthusiasm and generosity of loyal citizens, such as you, our effort to reach our goal of $15,000.00 would be in vain.

I am happy to announce that the total proceeds of the luncheon was $505.

Thank you so very much and may God bless each of you.

Protests handling of PBB

To the editor:

An open letter to citizens of Michigan and their representatives in government:

As a resident of Michigan I must protest the lack of responsible, positive action on the part of our governmental decision makers concerning the disposal of PBB contaminated livestock.

This issue crosses politcal lines and effects all residents of Michigan. PBB contamination is not a local problem. The issue is the health and quality of life of each man, woman and child in Michigan today, as well as in future years. To avoid further poisoning of the state and its people, PBB contaminated livestock must be incinerated. Cost cannot be a bargaining point. We must not allow our lives to be bargained away.

Support incineration of PBB contaminated livestock. Protest further poisoning of yourself and your children. Take action by signing your name to this letter and forwarding it to your representotives in the State Legslature today.

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

If you listen to Charlevoix Realtors, one of the most pressing problems facing the city today is finding housing for the hundreds of workers who are expected to descend on the area once Medusa's $50 million expansion program gets under way in earnest.

The dilemma is the same as the one faced by the city 13 years ago when Medusa began work on its existing facilities at South Point.

At that time, many Charlevoixans opened their homes to workers and I think that everyone had a place to sleep, although conditions were sometimes a little crowded on weekends when families came to visit.

Perhaps, once again, rooms will be rented where zoning laws permit and we'll be able to squeeze through the construction phase without too much fuss and feathers.

In the meantime, I wish someone with a few bucks to invest would look into the possibility of constructing a dormitory-type residence for singles, oldsters and transients somewhere in the city of Charlevoix. And dormitory is the right word – just like the dorms on the MSU campus at East Lansing.

Back in the old days when I occupied the editor's chair at the Courier, countless young men and women stopped at the office to inquire about economical, compact living quorters on a temporary or semi-permanent basis. Many of them were school teachers, fresh out of college, who needed a place to bed down until they got their lives organized in their new profession.

If it heppened to be the "off season," I might be able to help them find a room or small apartment to rent through the classified ads. Summers there was very little available that wouldn't cost them an arm and a leg.

I remember one woman who arrived in town from Chicago, took one look at the town and stopped at the Courier demanding that I find her a place to live.

"I don't even want to go back to Chicago to pack," she announced, like a Wagnerian soprano.

I gave her a list of real estate agents and turned her loose.

The dormitory I have in mind would be just that: A building with sleeping rooms and lavatories. Period. Neither would have to be very large or elaborate. The living quarters would be communal, with a comfortable lounge, recreational facilities, and perhaps a small coin laundry.

If the dormitory were small, a compact kitchen could be provided for everyone's use. If it were large, say 20 or more units, a full time cook could be hired to prepare breakfasts and dinners at a numinal cost. Since most of the occupants would work, residents would fend for themselves at lunchtime and weekends.

Not only would such dormitories offer the companionship that is sometimes lacking in private homes, but they also would bring a number of age groups together into a family type setting. I see retirees, and young working people sharing the same lounge, TV room and dining area.

Builders tell me that a development of this type could not be constructed economically without charging exorbitant rents. I think they are wrong.

But I don't have a bundle of cash to prove I'm right.

If we had such a project today, the housing impact of the Medusa construction gang wouldn't be quite so ominous as it is.

Running in vogue?

The cocktail party conversation concerned feeling good about your body, being happy with your payche and wearing the right sneakers.

"Did you ever want to run the Boston Marathon?" a man asked. My answer was spontaneous.

"I've never wanted to run," I said.

This was very unchic of me. The man gave me a pitying look and didn't talk to me again. Instead, he talked to a tiny woman who said she had run 12 miles that morning and the pain had been divine.

It used to be that when a guy ran, it meant he was late for a date, or someone big was chasing him, or he was too skinny to make the football team so he went out for track. No more.

Today, the streets and sidewalks are full of running people who are in no hurry. They dress up in silly sweatshirts and striped shoes and run around blocks. They never get anywhere. When they finish running, they are back where they started, sometimes throwing up.

This is ridiculous. The only time I run is to catch a bus. Every morning when I come out of my apartment building, I can see the bus coming. To get to the bus stop on time, I must run about 200 yards in 30 seconds. Sometimes I make it, and sometimes I don't. When I don't, I walk to work, sometimes throwing up.

It's a game I'd rather not play, but at least there is a useful purpose to my running. I'm trying to get to work on time. What useful purpose is there in running around and around the same block?

I asked a runner this question on a recent morning when I arrived at the bus stop too late. I was standing there, throwing up, when this round little guy went running by. He runs by almost every morning. Usually I just look at him and think that he'd make better time rolling. But on this particular morning I got a brilliant idea.

I asked Tubby to stop and talk to me for a minute. I said I had a proposition for him. He said he couldn't stop running without betraying his payche, but he did agree to jog in place for a while. That's when I asked him what good it did the world for him to run nowhere every morning.

Tubby said he was trying to lose weight. This is dumb, of course. People don't get fat from not running. They get fat from eating too much. Running to lose fat makes as much sense as eating creampuffs to catch a bus. Think about it.

But I didn't tell this irrefutable logic to Tubby. Instead, I eased him into my brilliant idea. I asked him if he'd like to run to lose weight and at the same time help his fellow man. He said yes. He probably thought I was an eccentric philanthropist who got kicks from standing at bus stops, throwing up, and offering to pay $100 to the Salvation Army for every mile run by passing strangers in silly sweatshirts.

But this was a different type of charity. I explained to Tubby that I had to run to catch a bus every morning but I didn't want to lose weight. So why didn't he meet me at my door every morning and run catch my bus for me? He could hold the bus until I arrived by jogging in front of it. He would lose weight while helping his fellow man – me – to walk sensibly.

Tubby refused. He said I should do my own running because running is good for more than losing weight. He said all doctors agree that running improves health. The more you run, the better you feel when you quit, he said.

I told Tubby I knew what he meant. I had a similar experience once when I spent several hours pounding my nose with my fist. I felt a lot better when I quit.

And besides, I told him, all doctors own stock in the companies that make those silly sweat shirts and striped shoes. This has to be true because doctors own stock in everything.

But Tubby wouldn't give up. He said if I wouldn't run to get thin, or to get healthy, I should run to get high. He explained that when a runner "breaks the wall" he experiences a soaring elation and life becomes incredibly beautiful. The wall is broken when the runner runs so far he wants to die to escape the pain, and then he runs 6 more miles.

I told Tubby that if running through walls ever takes the place of bourbon, there will no longer be any reason for me to catch a bus.

...Speaking Her Mind

NASA (National Aeronatica and Space Administration) is alive and well and living at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla.

It seems that NASA had sort of gone underground following the completion of the Apollo moon flights. After that series of space flights ended, Congress cut the NASA budget and reduced the payroll by 18,000 people. Currently between 8,000 and 9,000 people work for NASA.

The manned space flights stopped and although other launchings continued, the media just didn't cover the launchings of the weather and communications satellites with the same flourish and attention that moon flights and its astronauts had commanded.

NASA has been busy launching weather and communications satellites for various corporations and for itself. About half of the launchings NASA completed in the last year were for commercial ventures and other countries. The space administration launched the satellites and the corporations or countries reimbursed it for the cost of the launch.

While NASA has appeared to by lying low, it has been accomplishing a lot, I learned during a recent tour of the space center. Exciting things are beginning to happen with NASA and the space shuttle program. The space shuttle will open up a whole new approach to space travel, NASA representatives say.

The sapce shuttle will allow man to construct bases and space and it will allow the launching of space missions in outer space instead of from earth.

Even though the space shuttle is still in the experimental stages and the first launching of the arbitor vehicle is more than a year away, reservations are already being taken for space in the cargo hold of the shuttle. Universities, corporations and individuals as well as the armed forces are vying for places in the shuttle for their experimental satellites.

Once the shuttle is operational, NASA plans to have a launching every two weeks. Five orbitors or shuttles will be constructed and reused for the various flights.

NASA anticipates that it will take about two weeks to get the orbitors refurhished and ready for the next launching. The orbitors will be used for up to 100 flights.

The shuttle will change the whole approach to space travel because it is reuseable and because it will carry cargo. It will be able to take supplies to space missions as well as to launch other space vehicles. And because it is more economical.

The space shuttle will make most of the launching pads at the Kennedy Space center obsolete except for the one pad needed for the shuttle. Everything else will be launched from the shuttle after it is in space.

The space shuttle is an amazing and exciting new concept and its bound to make space travel even more common and to increase our knowledge of the heavens around us.

But even as NASA prepares to increase its manned space travel, it is also making life a little easier here on earth. I was amazed as I viewed exhibit after exhibit of byproducts of space research that have been applied to everyday life. For instance, the insulation in sleeping bags, ski boots and ski gloves was developed for space suits used by astronauts on the moon.

Other things included: a special shock absorbent material now used in football helmets, fire resistant materials, respiratory systems and flat wire, which is used under carpeting in homes.

Solar energy collectors, heat recovery systems, pressure connectors hang glider wings and a myriad of other products now in common use are also byproducts of space research.

It's amazing how much a part of our lives and what an important part NASA is, whether it's sending men off to the moon or not.

Petitions for August primary due at clerk's office June 6

People who plan to seek public office in the August 8 primaries must have their nominating petitions signed and in the proper official's office by 12 p.m. June 6, according to County Clerk Clarence Rabach.

Petitions for township, city or village offices should be filed with the clerk of the unit of government in which the office is sought.

Petitions for county jobs, except school offices, must be filed with the County Clerk. Also those for precinct delegate, for which the deadline is May 30.

Petitions for all state and national offices which represent an area larger than one county or which cross county lines (State Senator, State Representative, Congressman, Governor) must be filed with the Secretary of State's Office, Elections Division, Lansing, Michigan, 48918.

Petition forms for all jobs are available at Rabach's office, as are "Statement of Organization" forms which must also be filed by all candidates except those for precinct delegate. Local clerks also have petition forms for township, city, and village jobs.

Rabach points out that there are different petition forms for different types of offices and that care must be taken to see that they are filled out properly. He is available to help petitioners with any questions they may have.

Some tips for circulators of petitions are:

Double-check to make sure that every blank in the heading of each petition sheet has been filled in. Do not waste time circulating petitions where the heading has not been completed. They will not be counted.

All signers must be registered voters of the city or township named in the petition heading or as otherwise indicated in county-wide petitions.

Don't leave petitions in public places unless you are there to watch them.

Don't permit anyone to sign a name other than his or her own. (Mr. Jones, for example, cannot sign for his wife or relatives.)

Every signer must write his or her address, including post office, along with the date after his or her name. Do not permit the use of zip code numbers alone as a post office address.

Signers should write their names just as they are registered. (Example: Mary Smith, NOT Mrs. John Smith).

Anita Potter initiated into Phi Beta Kappa

Anita R. Potter, a senior German major from Charlevoix, has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa at Albion College. Miss Potter is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Potter, Route 1, and a graduate of Charlevoix High School.

Students elected to Phi Beta Kappa must have a minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.5, but attainment of that average does not guarantee election. The selection group, composed of college faculty and staff who are Phi Beta Kappa members, also considers each candidate's range of interest.

Country Concert against Cancer at high school gym Friday

Strains of country western music will fill the Charlevoix High School gym Friday as the Charlevoix County unit of the American Cancer Society presents its "Country Concert Against Cancer."

The concert will feature the easy listening music of Grand Ole Opry act Gary Shope and Interstate Country and the performance of Wes McCoy and North Country, a local group featuring radio personolity Wes McCoy.

John Ray of the Chalet Inn in Gaylord will emcee the concert and keep the action rolling during the three-hour concert.

The concert was the brainstorm of Patty Muma, chairman of the county cancer unit and chairman of the Cancer Crusade. The funds raised at the concert will go toward the cancer society's goal of $15,000.

But ideas don't just translate into action, and it has taken the efforts of many people to get the concert off the ground, Mrs. Muma said.

"It's been a lot of work, but I think it will be a lot of fun, too," she said.

Mrs. Muma first started working on the concert idea when she heard Gary Shope perform last year in Traverse City. She met the performer backstage and asked him if he would consider performing in Charlevoix.

He seemed to like the idea and that started the ball rolling.

Since that time many members of the community have gotten together to donate their time and resources to help pull the concert off, Mrs. Muma said.

"Without everyone's help we couldn't have done this," she said. "And with everyone's support of the concert we will reach our goal."

Mrs. Muma will be honoring those people who took part in getting the concert off the ground during intermission at the concert. The concert begins at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are available and local shops and the Chamber of Commerce.

For Charlevoix who would be interested in meeting the star of the show, Gary Shope, a special reception will be held in the Grist Mill Room of the Weathervane Inn at 8 p.m. Thursday.

The public is invited to meet the singer and his band members.

GARY SHOPE and Interstate Country along with Wes McCoy and North Country will be entertaining at the Country Concert Against Cancer Friday at the Charlevoix High School gym. Proceeds will go toward the Charlevoix County unit of the American Cancer Society and its $15,000 goal.

Teacher Feature

...Henry Wagner

Henry Wagner

There's a coach in Charlevoix who would rather coach girls' teams than boys' teams.

"I would rather coach girls because when they accomplish something it means more to them. They seem to listen and put more into it. Last year's girls' basketball was a great experience," Henry Wagner says.

Wagner coaches Junior Varsity (ninth and tenth grade) girls' basketball, seventh and eighth grade girls' track, and seventh grade boys' basketball. He also teaches eighth grade science, Michigan history, and seventh grade math at the Middle School.

When interviewed last week, Wagner was just a little bit downhearted. His girls' track team had just lost to St. Ignace by eight points, their first loss in three years. They can now boast only a 24-1 record.

There are 28 girls on the team this year, compared with about 15 on most Huron Shores Conference teams. The Charlevoix team competes with Huron Shores members but does not meet them all in competition. The Petoskey Relays at the end of the season determine the conference winner, and the Charlevoix girls have won them the last two years.

The Middle School track women complete in just about every event that boys do, Wagner notes: shot put, high jump, long jump, 880-yard relay, 880-yard run, 60-yard dash, 75-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 440-yard dash, mile, low hurdles, 220-yard dash, mile relay, and 440-yard relay.

Wagner also enjoys his academic teaching. "Middle School students are the hardest to teach, the most challenging, yet they are the most rewarding," he believes.

Does he have discipline problems? No, he says, because the kids know where they stand with him. "They know the rules, and that's that. It's a lot better than it used to be," the teacher adds.

Science is his favorite teaching subject. The course covers basic chemistry and life sciences.

Besides teaching and coaching, Wagner delivers flowers for the Charlevoix Floral Company and is a projectionist for the local theater. His main hobby is scuba diving, which he has done in Florida, Hawaii, and Spanish Honduras.

He has worked summers running Mt. McSauba Day Camp and teaching swimming. "This year, I'm going to dive all summer," he says.

"I like to keep busy. I've built two houses for myself, including the one I live in now," Wagner says proudly.

Wagner grew up in Charlevoix. He graduated from Charlevoix High School in 1962, lettering in football, basketball, and track. His parents, the Keith Wagners, live in town, as does his sister, Shirley Lusk.

After graduating from high school, Wanger went to North Central Michigan College in Petoskey for two years, then to Western Michigan University for two years. He majored in biology and history and minored in physical education.

Wagner and his wife, Joan, have two children, Ann, 11, and Ty, 8. "We do lots of things together," he says, "canoeing, camping, snorkeling." Joan also works for Charlevoix Floral, of which Shirley Lusk is manager. Joan served for a while as a volunteer fireperson with the Charlevoix Township Volunteer Fire Department.

Gaylord resident seeks nomination in 106th District

A Gaylord resident has thrown his hat in the ring for the Republican nomination for the state representative seat in the 106th District.

The seat is currently held by E. Dan Stevens, who has decided not to seek reelection. The 106th District includes Boyne City and surrounding parts of Charlevoix and Antrim counties as well as Alpena, Presque Isle, Cheboygan, Montmorency and Otsego counties.

A Gaylord businessman, Andrews was named JC of the Year in 1977. He also serves as a member of the board of directors of the Otsego County United Way and as a coach with the Otsego County Boxing Club. He is also a member of the Gaylord Area Elks Lodge.

Born in Grayling, Andrews was raised in Gaylord. He is a veteran of the U.S. Navy and served as a combat medic with the First Marine Division in South Vietnam in 1969-70. Following his discharge, he studied at Central Michigan University, Eastern Michigan University and Michigan State University.

"I believe that my major responsibility as a state legislator should be to work aggressively with the citizens of this district to insure that our concerns receive good representation in Lansing," Andrews said. "All too often Northern Michigan seems to be forgotten when Lansing dispenses tax dollars for positive social action, yet we seem to command immediate attention when the state needs a dumping ground for such unwanted items as nuclear waste or contaminated cows.

Andrews is married to the former Karon Potts of Petoskey.

Sheriff Lasater honors ministers for work at jail

Two Charlevoix County ministers were the recipients of the latest Citizens Award given by Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater.

Rev. Clifford J. Molnar of the Assembly of God Church in Boyne City, and Rev. Dale Turner of the Missionary Church in East Jordan, were the recipients of the award.

The men were appointed to the position of jail chaplain by the Charlevoix County Ministerial Association for 1977.

Both served for more than a year volunteering more than 200 hours toward the program without pay. As jail chaplains the two men provided weekly religious services and personal counseling for inmates serving time in the county jail. In addition they were on call for any emergencies that might have arisen requiring a minister.

Sheriff Lasater said that along with honoring the two ministers he also wanted to recognize the members of the two churches and the administrative boards that allowed the men to volunteer their time to the county.

Local Shrine club donates money to crippled children

Ray Wood, Ambassador to the Northwest Shrine Club, reports that 139 members and guests attended the April meeting of the Club, held at Ricciardi's in Eastport.

Highlight of the evening was the donation of a $1,000 check to the Shrine's Fund for Crippled and Burned Children. The check was accepted by Robert Walker, Recorder from the Saladin Temple from Grand Rapids.

An afghan was also raffled off during the evening, and the proceeds from that, amounting to $257 were added to the $1,000 check.

Leaders stress that girls are not permitted to leave camp during sessions unless signed out with the Director, and there is a registered nurse on duty all day.

The Camp is also looking for unit leaders. Any adult over 18 years of age interested in girls and the out-of-doors will be trained for the job. Those with young children may place the children in the "Kiddie Unit" while they work with the Scouts.

In addition to Mrs. Smith, the Camp committee consists of Jean Zoulek, East Jordan; Betty Luebke, Boyne City; Mary Dunlap, Boyne City; Jill Washburn, Charlevoix, Assistant Directory; Shelly Saudzik, Charlevoix; Cindy Warren, Charlevoix; and Jane Russell, East Jordan.

Judy Gould named to WMU honors group

Judy Gould of Charlevoix was one of 23 Western Michigan University Honors College students who recently spent a week hiking and camping in the Great Smokey Mountain National Park.

Accompanied by three student leaders and Dr. Robert Hughes, assistant professor of biology, the students formed three sections to explore the park trails in Tennessee and North Carolina.

They report that while there were no serious problems, and no one got lost, one group was forced to find shelter in a motel one night when over three inches of snow fell at their campsite about 10 miles west of Cades Cove, Tennessee.

Highlights of the trip, according to the hikers, included climbing the giant mountain formations known as the Chimneys, sighting numerous deer and a wild bear and seeing the many varieties of birds and wild flowers.

Athletic awards, walk through set May 16 at high school

Tuesday, May 16, will be awards night at Charlevoix High School. Athletes who have participated in sports programs throughout the year will receive their letters beginning at 7 p.m. in the gym.

That evening will also be "Parents' Walk Through" night, when parents of all students and other interested people are invited to view the student's achievements during the year. All types of work will be on display, including art, shop, and science.

Members of the faculty will be on hand to chat with parents and friends.

Health department offers classes for expectant parents

The District Health Department will sponsor Expectant Parent classes beginning this Thursday.

The seven-part series will be held each Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Lockwood-MacDonald Division of Northern Michigan Hospitals, Inc.

Registration will take place during the first class period. A maximum fee of $3 will be charged to help cover the cost of informational materials given out during the classes. The fee may be waived for those couples who have difficulty in paying.

Patricia Smith, R.N., of Petoskey will coordinate the course. She will lead discussions and give information about a number of topics, from fetal development through caring for the newborn. A physician will also lecture on "Labor and Delivery" as part of the series. Some time will be spent touring the hospital facilities. Husbands are urged to attend all sessions.

Anyone wishing further information about the classes may call the Petoskey office of the Health Department, 347-6014.

Charlevoix Hospital marks special week

THE CHARLEVOIX Area Hospital will be celebrating National Hospital Week with an open house this week. Many activities are scheduled for the public.

Charlevoix Area Hospital is inviting its public, the people of Charlevoix and Antrim Counties, to tour the hospital and learn the famous Heimlich Manuevre, during a series of open house tours Tuesday through Friday evenings at 7:30 p.m.

Celebrating National Hospital Week, the Charlevoix Area Hospital has set a double theme – "Know Your Hospital" and "Your Hospital Wishes You Well."

The tours and the demonstrations of the Heimlich Manuevre – the recently developed technique for dislodging objects and food stuck in a victim's throat – are part of the hospital's themes.

Charlevoix Area Hospital pamphlets, describing the hospital's services, growth and history, have been published and may be obtained at area pharmacies and at the hospital.

The publication of the brochures was also timed for National Hospital Week, to carry out the theme of "Know Your Hospital."

The staff of this community hospital, with 44-acute care beds, is proud of its expanding services, growing medical staff and unique personalized atmosphere.

The six page pamphlet includes a section describing the Charlevoix Area Hospital Association, the organization from which the Board of Directors of the hospital is elected.

Membership in the Charlevoix Area Hospital Association is open to the public and it is hoped that increasing numbers of area citizens will take an active role in the direction of their community hospital.

The open house tours will be conducted by members of the hospital administration. At the conclusion of the tours, in the hospital's solorium, staff physicians will be on hand to assist in the instruction of the Heimlich Manuevre. A brief slide show, featuring Dr. Henry J. Heimlich, will introduce this life saving technique.

The tours will begin at 7:30 p.m. The hospital requests that any groups wishing to join the tours notify the hospital switchboard (547-4224). Individuals are welcomed any of the four nights, Tuesday through Friday.

The tours, the publication of the pamphlet and the Heimlich Manuevre demonstration, are designed to encourage interest in the hospital and most of all say, "Charlevoix Area Hospital Wishes You Well."

Wildwood Innovations, Ltd. changes hands in Charlevoix

There will be a new look about Wildwood this summer and a new owner.

Jacqueline Smigiel purchased the gift store on Park Avenue from Nancy Schrag April 29.

Mrs. Schrag opened Wildwood in the summer of 1976. She also operates a gift store in Lansing. Due to the expansion of that store and the extra attention it needed, she decided to sell Wildwood.

This is the first store Mrs. Smigiel has owned although she's been involved in the retail business for four years. She worked for Winkleman's, a womens clothing store, for four years in both sales and management.

She also holds an associates degree in accounting from Macomb Community College.

The new store owner said Wildwood would probably remain the contemporary gift store that it has always been, but she is planning some changes. She has already expanded the glassware and barware lines and will probably be expanding other areas of the store.

"Buying Wildwood fulfilled a dream of mine," Mrs. Smigiel said explaining how she got into the business. "I've always wanted to own my own business.

"The opportunity was right, the location was right, so I did it."

Mrs. Smigiel moved to Charlevoix in January with her husband, Roger, who is general manager of Ron Pair. The Smigiels relocated here when Ron Pair moved its International Headquarters to the area.

JACQUELINE SMIGIEL (left) takes over Wildwood Innovations from Judy Schrag. George Richardson of Ski and Shore of Charlevoix completed the sale.

Federal government takes over moorings on Beaver Island

A parcel of Federal land on Beaver Island is being turned over to the Michigan Department of Natural Resources by the General Services Administration.

The parcel, known as the Beaver Island Moorings, was formerly used by the U.S. Coast Guard and is worth about $20,000, according to General Services.

The two-tenths of an acre site will be used as a boat service station.

A
PLACE

I suppose each person has a quiet, hidden place
One where thoughts move at a slower pace.
Mine is a hillside, - cushioned in velvety moss, -
Overlooking the lake's shining gloss.
There, I survey the many wonders within view -
White Caps - White Clouds, - contrasted with blue
Allowing my mind to escape the endless strife
- Permitting me a fresh look at life.
My only hope, my friend, - is that you, too have found -
Your own peaceful, scenic spot of ground.
Where, you too, can lay your worries and cares aside,
And take all life's problems in your stride

PEGGY HOSMER models the mystery wedding dress that will be shown during the First Congregational Church Pilgrim Circle's "Walk Down the Bridal Path" next week.

Historic wedding gowns modeled May 16

Take a trip down the bridal path and into history with the Pilgrim Circle of the First Congregational Church next week.

The circle members are sponsoring a special program called "Down the Bridal Path" which will feature a display of the wedding gowns of 22 Charlevoix brides at 7:30 p.m. May 16 in the sanctuary of the Congregational Church.

"Many women will be modeling their own dresses," Mary Biddick, organizer of the event, said. "And those that can't fit into them any more are having a younger or an older model wear it for them."

Mrs. Biddick said wedding gowns from the Flapper Era on up to those of the 1970s will be featured during the show.

The program will be run like a wedding ceremony complete with ushers to show the audience to their seats. Fran Tollas and Vince Chew will be the featured soloists and Alice Bellinger will accompany them on the organ.

Although an actual wedding service will not be held, Rev. Ray Giffin will discuss the seriousness of marriage and the significance of weddings.

Mrs. Giffin will be the moderator for the program.

Immediately following the program a wedding reception will be held in the church parlor. Wedding cake, prepared by Boggs Pastry Shop, and coffee and punch will also be served.

Tickets for the program are available at the Shop of the Gulls, Dockside Pharmacy and Chelsea Clothe Shop.

Spring means mushroom season

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Looking daily for elusive clouds, morel mushroom hunters hope for rain.

The time is right. By now the heads of morels should be pushing aside the year's rich layer of leaf mold, becoming barely discernible on the forest floor to a trained and straining eye.

But so far this spring, even the most dedicated morelers report no sightings.

Eileen Edwards, referred to by well-informed sources as "the most serious and best hunter in the area," said she has had no luck.

"Boyne City Mayor Keith Fitzpatrick sadly said that he has heard reports of only a very few insignificant morels.

Herb Moore said he has found none, and "one farmer who came into our store the other day said he had found two or three, too small to pick."

Morels are as important to the debut of spring for some, as the opening of trout season and the rush of smelt up stream, is to others. There is a sequence of events that must be followed if the season is to fulfill the annual expectations: first smelt, then trout and morels, followed by wild asparagus and the blossoming of truck gardens.

But morels require warmth and rain – together.

If it rains this week those wild eye contestants who lay seige to the woods under the direction of the National Mushroom festival in Boyne City, will have a good year.

Stan Boris, the unchallenged record holder, once picked 900 morels in the 90 minutes allotted during the contest, which begins this Saturday, with registration at 9:30 a.m. at the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce.

However, during another dry year a woman from Ohio, won the non-resident division preliminaries with a total of three mushrooms, attributing her unique success to being able to "sniff out morels."

Naturally, the Boyne City Festival organizers are particularly anxious for rain. Mayor Keith Fitzpatrick said he's contemplating a rain dance.

"We have had people from California and Florida call or write to say they will be here," Gloria Anderson, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce told the Courier.

The Boyne City Chamber of Commerce has orchestrated a jam-packed weekend to coincide with their contest, so the visitors will have plenty of diversion.

Boyne Valley Railroad, whose first run of the season leaves Boyne City for Boyne Falls at 11:00 a.m. Saturday, is offering free rides to all participants in the mushroom hunting contest.

Tom Workman, BVRR President told The Courier:

"We have folk singers Peter Neds and Dolores Perry (formerly with Hot Sauce) from Miami, Florida, performing during the turn around at Boyne Falls."

Workman added that he hopes that some Barbershop Quartet groups, who will also be in Boyne City for the Bush League Contest this weekend, will ride the rails and sing.

The half hour ride is through some of the most scenic parts of the Boyne River Valley.

The Barbershop contest will pit Barbershop Quartets from the midwest and Canada in close harmony contests.

Saturday afternoon singing contests begin at 2 p.m., and are open to the public. At 8 p.m., Saturday evening, the winners of the traditional singing contest will put on a variety show, including performances by last year's champs, the Wayne County "Cadence Counts"; a professional group from Lima, Ohio, "The Expression Marks"; and the 20-member "Snowbelt Chorus" whose members come from Charlevoix and Boyne City.

But despite all the diversions, morels are the star attraction of the season, as well as the weekend.

Gourmet specialty stores around the world sell canned morels for prices rivalling caviar. Yet in much of the northern midwest, and especially northwestern Michigan, smart morelers can gather enough to enhance gourmet meals for the rest of the year.

Many people are drawn north by the contest but do not compete, preferring more leisurely, less frantic, ambles through the just reawakening woods.

For many morelers, actual gather of morels, like catching fish to a fly fisherman, is a bonus. Its the renewal, the moments alone in the woods.

Moreling can become hypnotic. The sighting of one of these excellently disguised fungi leads to eye-straining searching for the others "that ought to be nearby."

According to Department of Natural Resources pamphlets and the writing of Michigan's famed mycologist, Dr. Alexander Smith of Ann

Children's posters mark Be Kind to Animals Week here

This is national Be Kind to Animals Week.

And children in the Charlevoix area are reminding residents to be good neighbors with their pets through special posters appearing in the windows of local businesses.

The posters, drawn by fifth grade students, were entered in a contest held by the Charlevoix County Humane Society in honor of Be Kind to Animals Week, Mary Haggard, humane society board member, explalaed. Students at the Charlevoix Elementary School, St. Mary's Catholic School and East Jordan Elementary School participated in the contest.

Mrs. Haggard said the posters serve as reminders of the theme for the 64th annual celebration, "Show You Care." The theme places special emphasis on pet adoptions and spaying.

"We cannot stress strongly enough the need to prevent additional unwanted cats and dogs that must be destroyed," Mrs. Haggard said. "We appeal to pet owners to have their animals surgically neutered to prevent overbreeding and to keep animals in fenced in yards or leashed at all times. Show you care."

In addition to the poster contest, the humane society will be placing special canisters in businesses throughout the county to collect funds for the operation of the animal shelter located behind the sheriff's department in Charlevoix.

The animal shelter will also be open for visitors daily from noon to 6 p.m. and the humane society will hold its monthly meeting today (Wednesday) at 7:30 p.m. in the East Jordan Public Library.

Winners in the poster contest at the Charlevoix Elementary School were: Karen Carson, first place; Dianna Loder, second; Christie Pace, third; Steve Brodin, Kelly Kenifeck and Michelle Pond, honorable mention.

Winners at St. Mary's were: Ana Martin, first; David Miller, second and Carl Dhaseleer, third.

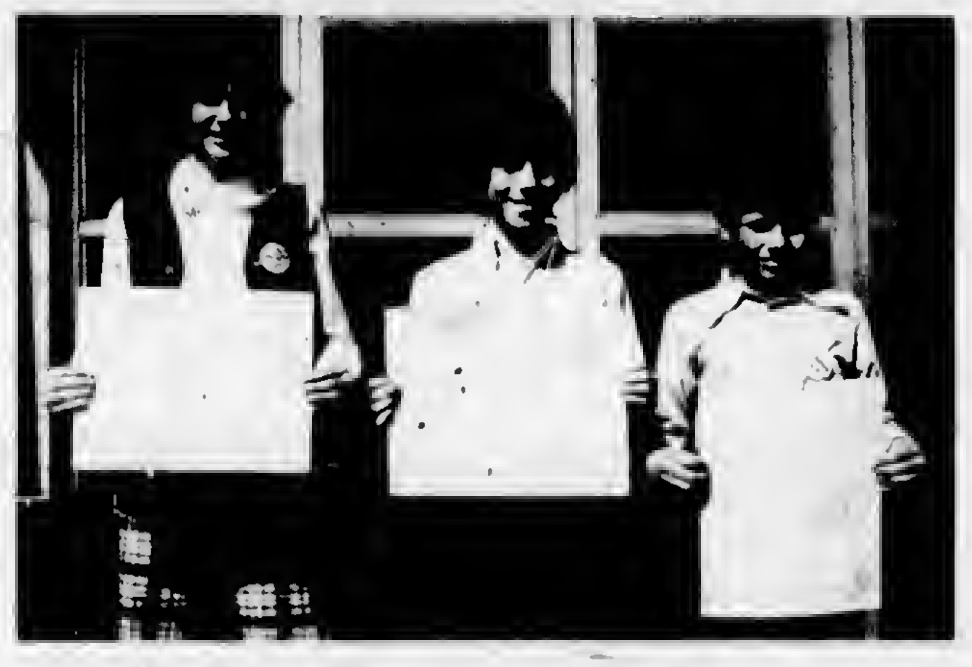
First place in overall originality and creativity in all the schools went to Amy Bartlett of East Jordan.



ST. MARY'S Catholic School poster contest winners were: (left to right) Ana Martin, first place; David Miller, second; and Carl Dhaseleer, third.

Methodist youth plan fast to understand pain of hunger

In an attempt to understand the misery and suffering of starving people around the world and in an attempt to help a few of those people, the United Methodist Youth Fellowship is going to hold a Planned Famine on May 12 and 13.

About eight students are expected to participate in the 30-hour fast that will have a two fold purpose, Barbara Miller, famine coordinator, explained.

"We plan for the youth participating in the program to stay together during the fast so that while we share the experience of feeling hungry we can also learn why hunger exists in the world and what we can do about it," Mrs. Miller said.

She explained that many factors contribute to hunger—lifestyles, population, the energy crisis and many other things. The students will learn about these factors through audiovisual presentations and other program materials. They will also be involved in a discussion of how they can be a part of a long range solution to the hunger problem in the world.

The Planned Famine program also has a practical side to it. The youth will seek out famine victims, friends and neighbors, and ask them to contribute an amount of their choice per hour of the famine or a $5 donation. The famine victims will also be asked to skip one meal and to read a fact sheet on hunger so they can be a part of the project.

"We hope to raise $500," Mrs. Miller said. "The money we raise may help feed many families or even an entire village for a month or longer."

She pointed out that 12,000 people around the world die of starvation or related disease each day.

The funds the group raises will be channeled through World Vision International, an interdenominational Christian humanitarian agency presently supporting a number of hunger relief and development programs in Latin America, Asia and Africa.

City softball group to finalize plans

The Charlevoix Softball Association will meet at the City Hall at 7:30 p.m. today (Wednesday) to finalize plans for the opening of the 1978 season, Bill Supernaw, president of the association, has announced.

The meeting is primarily for team managers and league officers Supernaw said.

Among the issues to be discussed at Wednesday's meeting will be the free substitution rule. Earlier the league voted to eliminate the five run per inning ruling that had been in effect for some time.

Managers and players are reminded that Wednesday will be the deadline for entering a team and payment of the $60 entry fee for teams and players. The latter will remain the same as last season, $8 for residents of the city and $13 for players living outside the city limits.

Managers are also advised that entry blanks are available for any team that might want to enter the Memorial Weekend tourney being sponsored by the Charlevoix Township Slo-pitch Association.

Officers of the league were re-elected at a recent meeting. They are: Supernaw, president; Charles Lehman, vice president; Mary Ann DeNio, secretary; Bill Joy, treasurer, and Jim Willis, commissioner.

Record breaking crowd participates in Walkathon

A record-breaking 256 people participated in the annual Charlevoix County Big Brothers-Big Sisters Walkathon Saturday.

The participants, ranging in age from five years old to the middle 50s, left the Charlevoix Elementary School at 8:25 a.m. for a 22-mile hike. The trail went down U.S. 31 to the Boyne City Road to Burgess Road to Pincherry Road back to Boyne City Road and along U.S. 31 to the K-5 school.

The first two people finishing the course were Charlevoix High School cross country team members Jeff Drenth and Mark Russell who completed the course in just over three hours. They arrived at 11:30 a.m.

Jeff Landon was the third participant to finish the course.

"The response was just tremendous this year," Nancy Wood, director of the Charlevoix Big Brothers-Big Sisters, said. "We've never had this many people join the Walkathon before and I've never seen such determination.

"The kids' attitude was just great. They were so determined to finish the whole 22 miles that they were going to do it if it killed them."

Mrs. Wood said the officials kept the finishing station open until 6:30 p.m. to accommodate all of the finishers.

"We said we were only going to stay open until 5 p.m. but we stayed until 6:30 to get all of the kids in," Mrs. Wood said. "We had 22 who finished the whole course after 5 p.m."

The Walkathon participants spent the last two weeks lining up sponsors who would pay a certain amount of money for each mile completed. All of the money raised went to support the activities of the Big Brothers-Big Sisters.

Walkers could also designate that part of the money go to other organizations with the Big Brothers-Big Sisters receiving 60 percent.

Mrs. Wood said that many people asked that part of their earnings also be sent to the American Cancer Society, Boy Scouts, Senior League baseball, March of Dimes, Bergmann Center and the Charlevoix High School Senior Class.

Mrs. Wood attributed much of the success of the Walkathon to the hard work of co-chairman Jim Withers who helped organize the project this year.

She said the winners of the various prizes would be announced within the next few weeks after the money raised is turned in and tallied up.

THE CHARLEVOIX County Big Brothers-Big Sisters Walkathon started off at a fast pace Saturday. More than 250 people participated in the annual event.

Mushrooms

Arbor, the earliest morel "the black morel" (Mochella angusticeps) is found in "moist aspen, birch and balsam fir woods."

The morel prize in northern Michigan is the "white morel" (Morcella Esculenta), "found in a variety of habitats, including old orchards, beech-maple forests, oak woods and burned over meadows." Experts describe this as "edible and choice."

One other "edible and choice" variety is "the giant morel (Morchella crassipes), the last one to appear, "found in oak, beech and maple forests, old orchards, in moist rich garden soil, and around elm stumps."

For years hunters have debated the wisdom of eating the so-called "Beefsteak morel" (Helvella esculenta).

However, if mycologists (university trained mushroom experts) are to be believed, no one should attempt to eat the "Beefsteak."

The DNR writes: The Beefsteak mushroom fruits along with early morels ... However helvella esculenta is seriously poisonous to some, and there is evidence that individuals who have eaten it safely for years may suddenly become susceptible."

The Poison Center at Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey has literature with a more dire warning:

"There is a very narrow margin between no effect and a lethal dose of MMM," (monomethylhydrazine, the major chemical in Beefsteak mushrooms)."

The safest way to be sure of a true morel is to halve it lengthwise. A true morel's cap is completely attached to its stalk at the base of the cap, forming one continuous piece. False morels' caps hang out over the stalk, umbrella-like, and are only attached at the top. A true morel's cap is pitted (not just wrinkles).

Old hands at picking mushrooms tell novices to: 1) read literature on the mushroom you seek; 2) only pick mushrooms about which you have no doubts; 3) do not mix types in your collecting bag; 4) an open basket, net bag or paper bag is preferable to plastic bags which can cause spoilage; and 5) take someone along on your first hunt who knows.

Once you have found your morels the next steps are easy – saute and eat, dry, freeze or can the morels.

For general fund

City council doubles millage levy rate

The Charlevoix Common Council voted to double the number of mills it will levy for operational purposes during the upcoming year Monday night.

Council will increase its operational millage from 5 mills to 10 mills for the 1978-79 fiscal year. Of the 10 mills that council intends to levy, 2 mills will be earmarked for road improvements.

Council decided to also retain the 2 mill levy for debt retirement. The 2-mill levy for debt retirement was also taxed against city residents last year.

Mayor Sam Supernaw said he and the council hope to break even budget-wise with the new millage levy.

"We think we have set a safe millage," Supernaw said. "I think the city did the extreme last year and reduced the millage too much. Even the auditors have said that it was lowered too much.

"We used up all of our reserves and now we have to levy more millage to cover our expenses."

Supernaw said the increase in millage was needed to meet inflation and to prepare the city for the time when it can no longer transfer funds from the electric and water utilities.

According to the Home Rule Charter recently adopted by the residents of Charlevoix, the city must stop transferring funds from its utilities within one year of the effective date of the charter.

Only Alderman Ivon Whitley opposed the millage increase.

"I could go for 8 mills," Whitley said. "But I think 10 is too high."

"I hope it's not too low," Supernaw shot back. I hope this will cover our expenses.

"Besides if it is too high we can always lower it the next year. But We've studied this and we think this is what we need."

In addition to adopting the new millage rate, the common council also adopted a budget for the coming year. Council approved a general fund budget of $619,760. The proposed budget represents a 10 percent increase over last year's general fund budget of $562,030.

Some of the major expenditures included in the budget were: $130,000 for the police department; $66,080 for recreation; $59,000 for the fire department and $41,300 for parks.

In addition, the council approved a $1,187,000 budget for the electric fund which was down from last year's $1,265,950.

The sewer fund budget was approved at $171,145 up from $144,170, while the water fund budget was set at $85,200 up from $84,650.

The major street fund was set at $92,080 up from $91,315 and the local street Fund was set at $123,650 up from $106,500.

No capital improvement fund was established during the budget discussion. Mayor Supernaw said he had been advised by the auditors not to set one up, but to allocate funds as the city needed them.

Mayor Supernaw stressed that this budget merely gave the council something to work from and that it could be amended as needed.

He said that the council hoped to spend more in the areas of street repair and maintenance with the 2 mills allocated specifically for that.

In other action, Supernaw presented several appointments for council approval. He reappointed Jack Mol chief of police, John Curtis fire chief, and James Whitley as utility superintendent.

He then appointed Michael Gibbons city attorney to replace Donald Berlage, who currently holds the post.

Supernaw's recommendation to hire John Martin as street was turned down by the council because Martin does not live in the city. Martin would have replaced William Brodin.

His recommendation to hire Alvin Ranger as city surveyor was withdrawn.

In other action, the council formally dedicated the Father Charlevoix Park at the end of West Dixon Avenue as park area. The Charlevoix Garden Club has asked the city to do this so that if the city ever decided to sell the land it would take a vote of the people to approve the sale of the land.

Wilma Stabnick of the garden club asked that the city also consider dedicating the Memorial Garden on Mercer Boulevard as a park. The question was put in committee.

City settles labor contracts with Teamster, CWA members

The City of Charlevoix has settled labor contracts with both the Teamsters Local and the Communications Workers of America (CWA), Donald Berlage, city attorney and member of the negotiating team, announced.

Berlage said both bargaining units had agreed to three-year contracts beginning as of March 1 this year.

The Teamsters Local, which represents the police and firemen, also received one year retroactive pay from March 1, 1977 to March 1, 1978.

The city and the police and firemen had negotiated for a contract for over a year without much success until last Friday when union members ratified the contract. The city and the Teamsters had gone through mediation and arbitration and found themselves back at the bargaining table working out basic details after those sessions.

The Teamsters received a base pay hike from $10,214 to $11,400 for 1977 and a raise from $11,400 to $12,500 for 1978. The remaining two years of the contract call for a flat 8 percent increase for the uniformed personnel.

The CWA members, who are all nonuniformed personnel such as the secret and electric crews as well as city hall employees, received an 8 percent increase in wages for 1978. For the remaining two years of the contract, the CWA members will receive a cost of living allowance hike plus a 3 percent productivity raise.

Both units will also be receiving increases in fringe benefits during each year of the contract. The fringe benefit increases are the same for both units and include the areas of master medical, vacation time, personal leave and other related areas.

Berlage said the CWA members ratified their contract two to three weeks ago. The city and CWA representative had only been negotiating since the contract was up in March.

BELLS BAY LAKESHORE AREA

How appropriate to have a County Road Commissioner (Board membership total of three) from the Boyne City area and one from the East Jordan area decide for us that the DNR is our only saviour to preserve our precious remaining natural area by developing it to the tune of $500,000.00.

Mr. Graham of the Co. Road Commission, Mr. Annear, Mr. Ingalls, and Mr. McKinnon of the County Board of Commissioners plus Dennis Joson and Walt Thorsen of the Co. Planning Commission perhaps will be thanked for endorsing the development of our Public Land but Preserving theirs by making the Jordan River Area a designated WILDERNESS not subject to any development.

Somehow I just cannot seem to appreciate their generous view.

ANTRIM STREET PARKING COMPLAINT

I would like to say something about the attitude of the owner of a business toward parking on Antrim St. in front of his business. There are no meters in front of his business. It's true that he should have clear driveways, but when you park in the other areas, he comes out and is very mad at you for parking there. Thank you.

MORE ON LITTER

As to a letter that appeared in your last issue - Charlevoix the Dump - I completely agree, word for word, regarding places mentioned plus many more I could list. It's getting to be "par for the course" to see trash and junk litter etc. around many homes.

Aren't there any rules or regulations to improve the deplorable situation in this once beautiful little town? Please let us all try to make us proud of our surroundings and beautify property, streets, parks and beaches.

I say too – ship out if not willing to shape up.

Thank you
Another respectable Charlevoix Citizen.

NO SENSE IN HEARING

There really wasn't much use in having the hearing on the closing of Bell's Bay Rd., Friday May 5th. The people at the meeting were in favor for the 30 percent to keep it open. Yet, the Board of Road Commissioners voted on Monday, May 8th to close it.

DEFINITION OF HILLBILLY

The lady from the south shouldn't have been offended by the Hotline being signed "hillbillies", because of you look in the dictionary, the definition of a hillbilly is a "person from the northern hills of Michigan".

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the Charlevoix Courier dictionary it merely defined hillbilly as somebody from the backwoods. The Courier uses Websters New Collegiate Dictionary.

LET'S CLEAN IT UP

If the council is going to survey Charlevoix dump locations, the corner of Antrim Street near Park Avenue should be placed near the top of the list. The lot has been filled with old junk from a torn-down house, old tires, old propane tanks and junk from a half-finished construction job for over a year. It's about time it got cleaned up.

ERBER RESPONDS

Tom Erber called the Charlevoix Courier last week to complain about an item in the Hotline titled "Dockmaster Selection." Erber was angered by the personal attack on Mayor Sam Supernaw and he said he felt that people who make personal attacks should be required to sign their names so that the person under attack will know who to respond to. Erber said he thought printing the Hotline comment was in "damn poor taste."

RIGGED BINGO?

Bingo used to be a real honest game. It seems now as though it's rigged on the jackpot games. A lot of times, the only numbers that are called are all O's, all B's, then all I's, etc. That way it fills up so many numbers, that you cannot possibly win the money. Now, on Sunday nights, it's always been like that. That you could not possibly win the jackpot until at least 57 or 58 numbers. But, our group of people used to feel that we could go on Monday nights and have fun and know that it wasn't a rigged thing. And now, it seems as though it's rigged also on Mondays. It's no fun going to play Bingo if you feel the games are rigged. The people that run the games should understand that it's more fun to win $10 and know it's not rigged, than to win $100 and feel as though it's not fair.

School board approves loans

The Charlevoix Board of Education moved to borrow funds for renovation and operations during its meeting Monday night.

In order to complete a major part of the renovation at the Charlevoix Middle School, the board has received permission to borrow against the anticipated income raised by the 1 mill levy, there will be enough funds to complete work on the heating and ventilating systems at the school.

With the permission of the Municipal Finance Commission, the school board will borrow $193,850. Bids will be sought for the loan.

The board also decided to borrow $800,000 against anticipated school taxes. The funds will be borrowed late this year against the taxes for 1978.

In other action, the school board received recommendations about the Charlevoix Public Library and heard a report from special education teachers.

Superintendent Gordon Van Wieren reported on the evaluation of the library made by Marlene Thayer of the State Library Committee. She advised the board to upgrade the books and to expand the book shelf area to utilize the entire building.

At the present time only the first floor is being utilized with the lower level being utilized for storage and as a meeting place. No action was taken on the report.

70 apply for administrator job

The Charlevoix Common Council has received more than 70 applications from people interested in the city administrator's job, according to Mayor Sam Supernaw.

Mayor Supernaw said he and the common council as the committee of the whole are in the process of reviewing the applications now and whittling the number down to the top few candidates.

"By the end of the week we should have weeded the number of applications down to the top half dozen or so qualified candidates," Supernaw said.

Once the mayor and council have reached a consensus on the top candidates, the interviewing process will begin.

"I hope to complete the interviewing process by the end of May so that we can get a city administrator in by June," Supernaw said.

The mayor said he was pleased with the number of applications the city had received for the administrator's job and with the quality of the applicants.

"I think the responses have been good," he said. "We got some good people in there. Whether they'll come to work for us or not is another question, but there's no doubt that some good people have applied."

Band, choral music to fill the town Sunday

Music lovers will be in seventh heaven in Charlevoix Sunday.

A myriad of concerts will fill the air with music as the Charlevoix High School Symphony Band, the high school and middle school choruses, the Community Choir and piano students of Jean Jensen perform for the public throughout the afternoon.

Highlighting the day will be the outdoor concert and chicken barbecue held by the high school symphony band in East Park. The chicken barbecue, sponsored by the Band Parents, will begin at noon in the park on the Round Lake Yacht Basin and last until 5 p.m.

The concert will begin at 4 p.m. and last 90 minutes, Gary Stutzman, band director, said.

"We're introducing a new idea in spring concerts this year with a concert in the park," Stutzman said. "We feel the audience will enjoy the mood in the park more than they would in the high school gym, so we're going to give it a try."

Stutzman said the concert will feature music of all different styles from light and entertaining numbers to heavy music literature. One of the lighter numbers on the program will be a medley of broadway tunes including: "Let Me Entertain You," "GiGi," "I Could Have Danced All Night," and "If Ever I Would Leave You." Another light number will be the "Concert of Drum Set," which will feature percussionists Jeff Wellman and Tracy Olmstead.

"One of the real show stoppers will be a selection of PDQ Bach called "Grand Serenade for an awful lot of Winds and Percussion," Stutzman said. "This selection features a duck call, police whistle, brack drums and a gargling clarinet section as well as all of the traditional instruments."

On the serious side, the symphony band will also perform many of the selections it prepared for regional and state band festival competition this year. Some of these numbers include: Alfred Reed's "Imperatrix," "Richard Franko Goldman's "The Foundation," and Clifton Williams "Symphonic Dance No. 3."

"We will close the program with some traditional John Phillips Sousa marches," the band director said. "What else could we do?"

Stutzman said he was making a big deal out of this year's spring concert because he has a very special band to work with this year.

"This band is one of the largest bands we've ever had and it is by far the most outstanding," he said. "They have sacrificed a lot to become an exceptional group."

The proceeds from the chicken dinner which will include one-half chicken and the trimmings for $3, will be used to purchase marching band equipment.

The choirs will hold their spring concert at 2 p.m. at the new Assembly of God Church on M-66 under the direction of Steve Stargardt.

Stargardt said the choirs to hold their concert in the new church because it was larger and more conductive to a concert atmosphere than the gym.

The middle school chorus will be featured in such selections as "New 23rd Psalm," "With Joy," and "Hey, Look Me Over."

The high school choir will sing the spiritual, "I Hear a Voice A'praying" "Adoramus Te," and a Joni Mitchell medley.

The Community Choir will perform parts of Schubert's Mass.

Mrs. Jensen's 43 piano students will begin their recital at 3 p.m. at the Community Church of God. The public is welcome to attend.

Sorority helps area residents in a quiet way

There's an organization in Charlevoix that quietly goes about doing things for people.

It is Beta Sigma Phi, a social and cultural sorority which has two chapters in town. The Kappa Sigma chapter was organized in 1970 and the Xi Epsilon Gamma chapter was organized in 1975.

Billie Weliver, president of the Xi Epsilon Gamma chapter, explains that Beta Sigma Phi stands for "Life, Learning, and Friendship."

Last year, the two chapters, along with chapters in Petoskey and Boyne City, hosted the state Beta Sigma Phi convention. Profits from that endeavor went toward the building fund at Little Traverse Hospital and special education equipment for the Char-Em School District.

More recently, the two chapters manned the Sightmobile and worked in the canteen at the Bloodmobile. They also have held fashion shows, with the praceeds going to the Tennis Fund to purchase the fencing, sand box, and picnic table for the children's play area at the courts. Kappa Sigma chapter still maintains the area. Each year they handle the refreshment booth at the Pro-Am Golf Tournament. And at holiday time they support the Community Christmas project.

The Xi Gamma Epsilon chapter promoted the five-week story hour session at the Charlevoix Public Library, now in its second week.

The big Beta Sigma Phi project at this time is contacting older residents who have no families in the area to set up a friendly neighborly contact. Members visit with these sometimes-lonesome people, take them cookies, deliver May baskets to them, and generally act as friends in need. The groups is also trying to find facilities in Charlevoix for a satellite Senior Citizens Center. They are working with Art Saworski of the Charlevoix County Commission on Aging on this project and would appreciate any suggestions about available quarters. It has become a problem to find quarters, Mrs. Weliver says, because Federal rules require that they be on a first-floor level with no stairs.

There are 38 women in the two Beta Sigma Phi chapters in Charlevoix. Joan Cureux is president of the Kappa Sigma chapter.

Beta Sigma Phi is international in scope, with over 12,000 chapters in 24 countries made up af over 250,000 active members.

Prosecutor Hayes reflects on term in office

Charlevoix County has come a long way with its criminal justice system in the last two years.

And the county is about to embark on a new era with the system as Prosecutor Roy C. Hayes steps down from office to go into private law practice in Charlevoix June 15.

The remainder of Hayes' term will be filled out by Scott Beatty, an assistant prosecutor in Berrien County.

Hayes has been active in the transformation of the Charlevoix County prosecutor's office from a parttime position to a fulltime position. He took some time to reflect on his past two and one-half years in office in Chorlevoix County during an interview with the Charlevoix Courier last week.

"Prior to coming ta Charlevoix, I was discouraged with our criminal justice system," Hayes, who moved to Charlevoix from Wayne County, recalled. "It didn't seem to be working. The system seemed clogged and at times uncaring.

"But I've had a rebirth of faith in the system since moving here. The American system of justice works here in this county."

The prosecutor pointed out that Charlevoix County is about the same size the entire country was when the criminal justice system was set up, so it should work here. But he has noticed other differences, too.

"I would say there is a one word difference between the criminal justice system in this county as compared with those downstate," he said. "Accountability.

"The judges, the police and the prosecutor are all highly visible in this county and they are held accountable for their actions. That isn't the case downstate."

Hayes spoke highly of the judges and police in the county praising their work.

"I'm pleased and enthused about the court system," the retiring prosecutur said. "I think it is fair, efficient and humane.

"I think the judges make sure they get the defendant's attention and many times they do it with "jail terms."

Hayes hastened to add that sending people to county jail was vastly different from sending them to state prison. He believes the judges make effective use of the county jails as a means and rehabilitation.

The prosecutor also praised the work of the police.

"I think the police do an excellent job," he said. "The three chiefs and the sheriff get the maximum out of the manpower they have and they show great cooperation with each other and the prosecutor's office."

Hayes said he believed the county law enforcement officers were as capable as any he had dealt with downstate.

He also defended the switch to a fulltime prosecutor from a parttime one.

"In the first year that I was in office some very positive things happened," Hayes pointed out. "We had better than a 110 percent increase in felony convictions. And for certain time periods we led the state in terms of the percentage of convictions per crimes reported.

"Statistics can be misleading," he added. "This doesn't necessarily mean we had more crime. I think it shows that we are catching and prosecuting more than we ever did before."

Hayes said that overall he thought Charlevoix County was a safe community.

"We do have some violent, assaultive crime but it seems to be between friends and relatives. We don't have violent street crime here."

Hayes said he was surprised at the variety of crime in the area.

"There isn't one crime that I issued a warrant for in Detroit that I haven't issued a worront for here," the prosecutor said.

In the future, Hayes sees the prosecutors office expanding.

"In the near future, I believe the county will need a fulltime assistant prosecuting attorney," he said. "The number of cases in the three courts is going to continue to grow and the county will need a fulltime assistont prosecutor."

Hayes also predicted the county would have a District Court of its own in the near future. The number of cases before the court is ever increasing and will soon be enough to keep one judge busy fulltime

Judge Fershee announces plans to seek re-election

District Court Judge David Fershee announced he will be seeking re-election to his position Monday during a morning press conference.

If he wins, it will be the first elected term Judge Fershee has served on the bench. He has been completing the remainder of the term of former District Judge Arthur Reibel, who resigned in 1975.

Fershee said he had thought long and hard before making his decision to seek re-election to the bench.

"Ordinarily it is not too difficult a decision to make," Judge Fershee said. "But I have received some interesting offers from the private sector that I have been considering.

"I wanted to weigh my future carefully before deciding what to do."

Fershee made his announcement to seek re-election three weeks before the filing deodline of June 6.

The judge said he decided to stay with the District Court because there were many things to be accomplished.

He plans to continue working to keep the court docket as current as possible. In the past three years he hos scaled down the backlog of cases from a three-year waiting period to a two-to six month waiting period.

"I think we will continue to expand the number of cases in District Court and I would like to streamline and fine tune the court administration a little bit more in order to keep the backlog to a minimum," Judge Fershee said.

Fershee said he would also continue to work to keep the District Court in Charlevoix and Emmet counties operating in the black. When the judge took office the court had a revenue of $51,095 and expenses of $109,757 for a deficiet of $54,000. Last year the court had $176,195 in revenues and $141,592 in expenses for an excess of $35,000.

The judge said he would also would continue to work to improve the image of District Court. Currently he is working on a slide presentation to educate the public about the problems of drinking and driving and he is also conducting a survey to see how successful the court is in dealing with the problem.

In future years he plans to create a similar program dealing with shoplifting. He hopes the programs will educate the public and will help reduce the crime level in the areas he serves.

The judge also credited his staff with helping him accomplish his goals and he plans to involve them in his future projects, too.

Fershee and his wife, Helen, and three daughters live in Charlevoix Township.

Park Stage back in action on plans

The Charlevoix Park Stage Committee is back in action.

The committee, which is organizing a drive to raise funds to complete the stage in East Park, recently met with an accoustician to discuss the design of the shell over the stage.

Dr. Harold Geerdes of Calvin College talked with Alvin Ranger, Hans Weimer and other members of the group who are working on the design to discuss the accoustics of the stage area.

The committee members will now be working on a design for the stage and coming up with a cost estimate so it will be able to set a goal for the fundraising drive, C.E. Odmark, chairman of the committee, explained.

The committee hopes to launch its fund drive this summer and many groups including the Lions, Kiwanis Garden Club and Beta Sigma Phi have indicated that they will assist the committee with the project.

Charlevoix Yesterday

THE OLD RIVER, called "The Upper Channel", once formed a natural shallow water connection between Round Lake and Pine Lake (now Lake Charlevoix). In 1870, a "work bee" cleared a site for a new channel, which opened the upper lake to navigation. (See story in "Bob Miles' Charlevoix - a Century in Pictures")

April busy month for building inspector

April was a big month for the Charlevoix County Department of Building Inspection.

The Department issued 67 permits for construction amounting to $7,312,484. The high construction cost figure is due to two permits issued to the Medusa Cement Company for additions to its plant which will cost $6,711,000.

Since the County Department of Building Inspection is now issuing permits for construction in the City Charlevoix, the above figures provide a complete picture of construction starts in the entire county.

The largest number of permits, 12, was issued for construction in Boyne City, followed by the City of Charlevoix, 11; Boyne Valley Township, six; Charlevoix Township, five; Hayes Township, five; Melrose Township, five; Bay Township, four; Evangeline Township, four; Eveline Township, four; Wilson Township, four; South Arm Township, three; Hudson Township two; East Jordan, one; and Norwood Township, one. No permits were issued for Boyne Falls, Chandler Township, Marion Township, Peaine Township or St. James Tawnship.

A breakdown of the permits shows that 17 were for new residences, 12 for residential additions, five for residential remodeling, 13 for residential garages, two for new commercial buildings, three for commercial additions, five for commercial remodeling, four for demolitions, one for a sign, four for mobil homes and additions, and one for a residential outbuilding

Grover Geneit honored for 25 years of county service

Grover Geneit, Charlevoix County Register of Deeds, was honored in a resolution passed by the Board of Commissioners last week.

The Board acknowledged Geneit's 25 years of service as follows:

"We, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners, would like to acknowledge Grover Geneit, Charlevoix County Register of Deeds for past and present services in the operation and dedication to his office which he has upheld in a most professional manner for 25 years.

Road commission right in taking stand to abandon Lake Shore Drive

The Charlevoix County Road Commission shuuld be congratulated on its recent action to abandon Lake Shore Drive.

Instead of ducking the controversial issue, which appears to have an equal number of proponents and opponents, and taking the safe route, the commissioners chose to take a stand and abandon the road.

As Commissioner Donald Graham pointed out, the road commission is well aware of the feelings of residents on the topic of abandonment. They have now held two public hearings in as many years and they have been made very aware of the feelings of area residents.

The commissioners have also been well-informed by the county board of commissioners and the boards of Norwood and Charlevoix townships as to their feelings. All of the governmental units adopted resolutions urging the commissioners to abandon the road.

The Department of Natural Resources (DNR) has also discussed the situation with the road commissioners and pointed out that if the road is not abandoned, they will simply seek abandonment at a later date. The State of Michigan has too much money tied up in the 2,300 acre park to let it lie fallow, the DNR officials pointed out. They also pointed out that at a public hearing before the land was purchased, area residents agreed they would rather see a state park established in the area than to have the land sold to developers.

Given the resolutions made by the various governmental units, which by the way were elected to office to represent the people of the area, and the fact that the land was purchased with tax dollars raised by all residents in the state, the road commission really had no choice but to abandon the road.

Also, by voting to abandon the road, the road commissioners have paved the way for action to be taken on both sides of the question instead of leaving the issue in limbo. Opponents can now circulate petitions protesting the action taken by the road commission. They can take action through the legal channels.

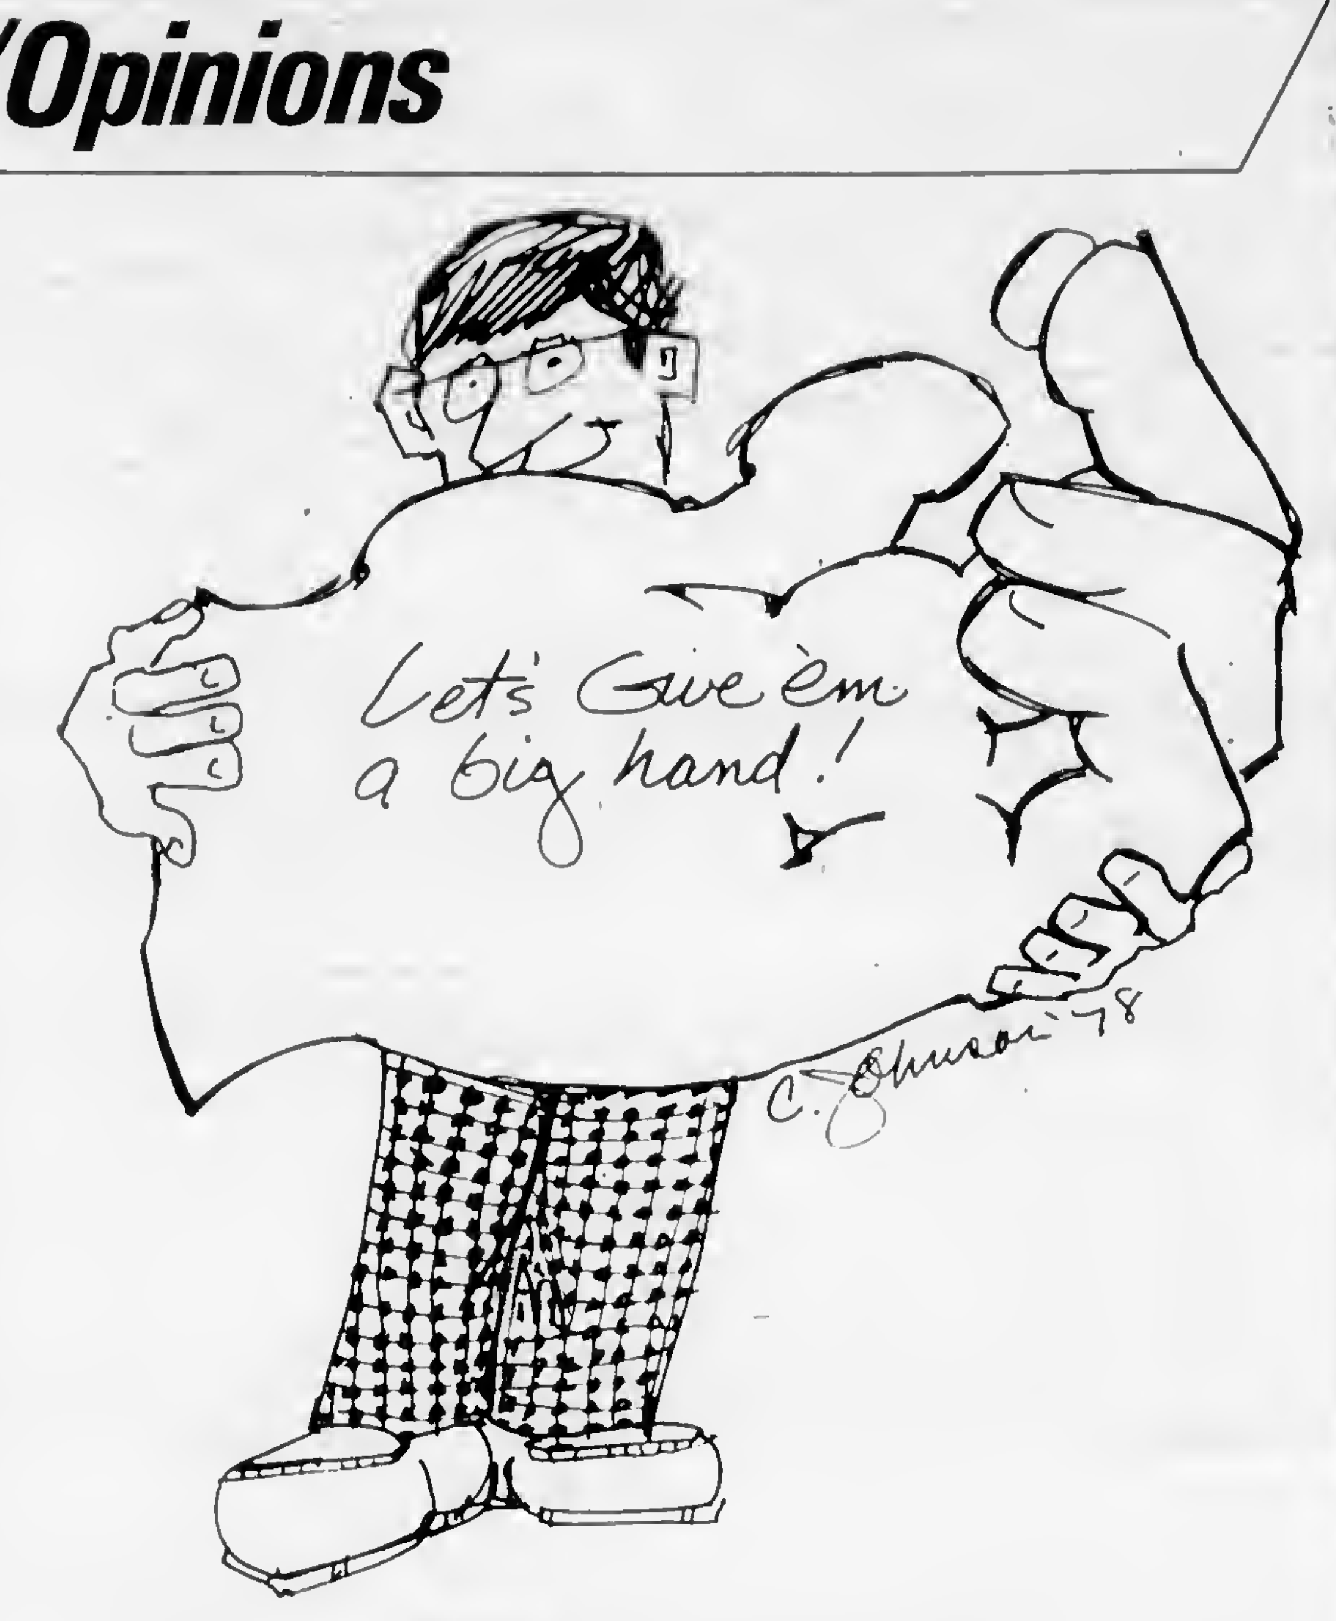
However, any personal criticism levied at the road commissiuners is wholly unwarranted. Also the criticism that they do not live in this end of the county and therefore should not have any say on how the property is used is spurious.

In the first place, most of the land which will become Fishermans Island State Park, was never owned by the public. It was privately owned.

When the owner decided to sell the island and the adjoining lake shore property, it was offered first to the state. After holding a public hearing on the sale of the land in Charlevoix County, the state determined that the majority of residents prefered to have the area turned into a state park as opposed to being sold to private developers.

There was no discussion at that time of saving it for a wilderness area, although the DNR does intend to preserve the Norwood Township half of the park as a wilderness area.

The road commissioners took a tough issue and did their job. County residents can't ask for more than that.



Let's Give 'em a big hand!

A group of us were talking the other day about being a housewife and we decided we're never going to get the respect we so richly deserve until we start limiting our numbers.

Doctors and lawyers do it. And you know whot exclusive bodies they are. As it stands now, anyone can be a housewife. Without so much as a speck of training, they walk right in off the streets, are issued a marriage license and the next thing you know they're into windows and floors.

For starters, we thought there should be a competency tests. Anyone passing it would be refused a license. After all, a utility room is no place for stability.

Career wives (those planning on staying in it until retirement) would be required to take a Hypocritical Oath to focus on domestic ethics:

If my husbnad comes home for lunch, I will move.

If he refuses to stop for food on vocations and says he is looking for Mrs. Tucker's Inn, I will relieve him of his command at the next gas station.

I will not engage in fads like hot meals, bed making, dusting and balancing checkbooks.

Ovens should be cleaned every year whether they need it or not.

Any wife over 12 shall not receive an "allowance" but will share equally in the profits.

In times of severe, inclement, and confining weather, I will do what I can with a can of pumpkin, a small jar of pimentos and five gallons of frozen milk.

This oath alone should weed out the faint-hearted – especially the part about ovens.

Organization could be of great benefit to housewives. We could call ourselves the American Motherhood Association and have the initials AMA on our license plates with perhaps a plunger as a symbol.

We could wear little electronic beepers to parties and be interrupted during the main course to go to the nearest phone and answer a question from a woman who doesn't know what to do with a washer that devoured six pairs of socks.

Why, we could get so exclusive that after awhile we'd take Wednesdays off and not make house calls.

It goes without saying, we'd censure our own. If a woman was caught saying, "I don't work. I'm just a housewife," she'd be stripped of her Pillsbury bake-off medals and would be required to turn in her spatula.

It is high time the Charlevoix County Road Commission got off its dulf and did something about paving Bells Bay Road to Medusa Cement Plant property.

If you turn back the clock 13 years, you'll recall that the paving of Bells Bay Rood was supposed to be one of the plusses accompanying the arrival of Medusa in Charlevoix.

The road at that time was little more than a gravel path, dusty in summer and fall and pocked with sinkholes and muddy ruts in winter and spring.

Although use of the road has increased many fold since then, conditions remain virtually unchanged. Thousands of dollars in auto repairs each year can be traced directly to traveling that godawful right-of-way without due care and caution.

Over the years, the Medusa Corp. has offered to supply the cement and engineering required to lay a decent road. But the offer has fallen on deaf ears.

Throughout these trying years, Medusa officials and employes have accepted the county's negligence with good-natured resignation. But after 13 years, their patience must be wearing thin.

Goodness knows, Medusa pays its share of county taxes. And the Medusa payroll has added immeasurably to the quality of life in Charlevoix and environs.

During the next few months, traffic on Bells Bay Road certainly will increase markedly as the company's $50 million expansion prograrn rolls into high gear. The dust this summer arising from the road will coat every cedar tree and fiddler fern for blocks in every direction.

Perhaps it is too late this year to do anything about the road. Maybe the company would just as soon keep the road as it is until the expansion project is completed.

But the Road Commission should start work today on planning to pave the road and establish a firm construction schedule.

Medusa and the people of Charlevoix have waited long enough.

IF YOU ARE a country music fan, I hope you made it to the American Cancer Society's Gary Shope Show at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium Friday night.

Although my tastes run more toward Dixieland and show tunes, I hnve never seen so many people at any musicol event enjoy themselves as thoroughly as did the country music fans in the audience.

Toes tapped and hands clapped as hundreds of spectators reacted kinetically to Shope's down-home music, most of which was as familiar as fried chicken and corn pone.

Wes McCoy's "North Country" combo, which did the so-called "warm-up", did an outstandingly professional job. They certainly deserve star billing on any future country music concerts in the area.

John Ray of Gaylord also turned in a first rate performance, both musically and as master of ceremonies.

Patty Muma, chairman of Charlevoix County's Cancer Crusade, put the whole show together with her unflagging energy and attention to detail.

Together, they provided a memorable night for Charlevoix County resident. And it was all for a good cause, to boot.

A real cliff hanger

The case of Congressman Charles C. Diggs Jr., reminds me that it will happen soon. A bank robber, caught in the act, will claim he is being discriminated against.

The robber will hire a lawyer who will plead that it is unfair to put one crook in jail as long as there are other crooks running around loose.

This type of defense first became popular during the Watergate years. Republicans said it would be unfair to prosecute Richard Nixon for obstructing justice because Teddy Kennedy hadn't been prosecuted for leaving a friend in a river. There was even a bumper sticker that said: "Nobody Drowned at Watergate."

The idea is that if yesterday's lawbreaker wasn't punished, today's lawbreaker should get the same treatment. This theory is hard to sell to old fashioned people who were brought up to believe that one misdeed does not justify a second misdeed.

I remember when my father discovered that I had stolen comic books from the drugstore. He took away my breathing privileges for three months. I protested that my best friend had been stealing comic books for years and nothing bad had ever happened to him.

"If he jumped off a cliff, would you jump too?" my father demanded to know.

This was my father's favorite question. What it lacked in logic it made up for in menace. I knew exactly what he meant. He meant that just because one person got away with doing something bad or dumb, that didn't make it right for another person to try the same thing. And if I were stupid enough to think otherwise, I should jump off a cliff.

I used my father's moralistic approach once during Watergate. A Republican had blasted me for "persecuting Nixon for doing nothng any worse than was done by many other presidents."

"Two wrongs do not make a right," I said.

"Don't give me that religious stuff," the Republican answered. "If you were a real Christian, you'd write something about Franklin Delano Roosevelt's mistress."

Now comes Congressman Diggs. He was recently indicted for allegedly stealing more than $101,000 from taxpayers. He had accused the Justice Department of "selective prosecution."

In papers filed in federal court, Diggs didn't claim he was pure. But he said 22 of the 35 counts against him for alleged payroll abuses should be dismissed because other congressmen had done the same thing and they hadn't been indicted.

In fact, said the Detroit Democrat, the alleged conduct of three other congressmen was "far more venal and corrupt" than anything he has been accused of doing. So how come the government didn't prosecute those other guys? It's not fair.

Diggs charged that he was being discriminated against because he often disagrees with the Carter administration. His lawyers said:

"The executive branch'a prosecution of a single congressman for conduct common in Congress, without any explanation of its selectivity, could have a chilling effect on the free speech of the administration's congressional critics."

Certainly. And the same defense should be available to persons accused of robbing banks.

If one robber is prosecuted for stealing from a bank that is commonly robbed by many crooks, and those other crooks aren't prosecuted, it could have a chilling effect on that robber's freedom to make a living.

That robber is probably the victim of selective prosecution because he often disagrees with the local sheriff. Charges should be dismissed. Blind justice should see no difference between stealing by bank robbers and stealing by congressmen.

What this nation needs is for one congressman to jump off a cliff.

Letters to the editor

Red Cross thanks community, volunteers

To the Editor:

Our thanks for the publicity you gave our Bloodmobile visit last Monday (May 1). We are sad to say that we missed our quota this time. Our quota was 158 pints, and we only collected 106 pints. As Charlevoix must hold up its end of the County quota, we'll just have to make the deficit up during our next visit November 9.

We are grateful to the 30 high school students who donated this visit. Twenty-one of them were first-time donors; we also had sixteen others who donated for the first time.

We wish to thank the Board of Trustees of the First Congregational Church for the use of their Fellowship Hall. Thanks also go to the Kappa Sigma and Xi Epsilon Gamma chapters of the Beta Sigma Phi sorority for organizing and staffing the canteen that day. Their thanks, as well as ours, go to Edward's IGA, Essenburg's Grocery, Glen's Market, Oleson's Food Stores, Wharfside Market and Staley's Market for their generous donations needed to supply the canteen for the day.

We are required to supplement the Red Cross nursing staff with Charlevoix nurses on Bloodmobile day. We thank the RN's and LPN' from our area who willingly donated their time and Mrs. Francis Left who organized their schedule. We also thank Mrs. Vernon Mathews, Jr. for her work in organizing the other volunteer workers who are needed to staff a Bloodmobile. We thank Mrs. Cliff Biddick who helped to call our telephoners. The success of our drive often depends on our calling.

Also helping us out with publicity were the Community Calendars of the area television and radio stations. WVOY, WJML and WMBN were great about providing public service announcements.

Finally, we'd like to thank the 106 successful donors and the 8 who received their "I tried" stickers. Without these people there could be no Bloodmobile. We appreciate their efforts and hope that they and others will again give in November. We hope to make our quota then.

Sincerely yours,

Rep. Nash urges people to study state police, sheriff matter

Dear Editor:

Your readers should be made aware they are about to lose the services of the Michigan State Police, who will be relegated to the duties of highway patrol if changes now under consideration in the Michigan Legislature become law.

Senate Bills 1517 and 1518 would prevent the State Police from functioning except as patrol officers on state freeways and trunk lines.

This effort is backed by metro area sheriff unions which are selling some legislators a bill a goods. It is estimated the plan will cost in the area of $10 million a year in state money allocated to pay local sheriff departments.

The Michigan State Police have an excellent record of law enforcement, a fact which I believe is appreciated by most Michigan citizens. I feel sure the voters would not support these proposals if they understood them.

The Michigan State Police deserves better treatment at the hands of our state government than these bills provide. The people of our state deserve the efficient police service which is available from the Michigan State Police.

I hope your newspaper will oppose these changes and encourage your readers to write to their legislators.

Sincerely,
ERNEST W. NASH
State Representative

...Norm Works

Norm Works

Narman Works is a vice-president al the Lexalite Carparation, president of the Northwest Michigan Industrial Association, and active in many business and social argaaizations arauad town. This week the Courier talks with him about his various activities.

COURIER: What are your duties at Lexalite?

WORKS: I'm vice-president in charge of research and development. I'm responsible for new product development. I'm a very lucky man in that I get paid for innovating and tinkering with new ideas, which is a hobby with some people. Of caurse, there is no such thing as a "free lunch" so our engineerlngteam and myself sometimes have ta burn the midnight oil ta meet tight product schedules and cost requirements. Also, today's fast technology track requires that I read periodicals and hundreds of sales charts each week to stay current. Research and development does not allow one to be a yesterday's man in tomorrow's world.

COURIER: What kind af a campany is Lexalite?

WORKS: It is a high technalogy industrial company, made up of great people. Our sales have doubled in the last four years with products that did not exist before – plastic traffic signals, transporent refractors for the new high pressure sodium lamps, tractor and snowblower parts, all-plastic railway crossing signals, enclosures for truck trailer anti-skid devices, and many more.

COURIER: Where do you market your products?

WORKS: Besides the United States, in Venezuela, Colombia, and Costa Rica. We have joint ventures with Lexalite Mexicana and Lexalite Europe, which is located in France.

COURIER: What are some of the products you are working on now?

WORKS: The Calkins pipe, (we sent 1,000 out for testing by pipe-smokers and will introduce it ta the public June 15), the solar domestic hot water heoter booster, solar photo voltaic glazing, TATA (low temperature metal spray for building molds), Ryton (a new material), and, af course we are ulways trying to improve production.

COURIER: How many employees are there at Lexalite?

WORKS: One hundred and ten or twelve. There are five in my department.

COURIER: What is the Northwest Michigan Industrial Association?

WORKS: It's a super group. We started it about five years ago when the Federal and State OSHA graups were fighting. One would pass a factory and the other flunk it. We got together and responded to the threat, then started doing ather things. We tackled the workmen's compensation problem and helped keep a damaging bill from being passed. Now we're looking at product insurance costs. Dther problems are transportation and unemployment compensation. Some day we hope to start a youth education program to educate youth on the free enterprise system. However, basically the purpose of the Northwest Michigan Industrial Association is to influence the political guys. There was no organization for manufacturers in the aren when we started. Now, most of the plants in Emmet and Charlevoix Counties belong to Northwest, as well as one in Gaylord and une in Cheboygun.

COURIER: What other organizations do you belong to?

WORKS: The Charlevoix Lion's Club, I'm vice-president this year, and our proudest nccomplishment was getting a sub-station for the eye bank at the Charlevoix Hospital. The Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, I'm a board member. The Charlevoix Yacht Club, sailing is my hobby.

COURIER: Where did you go to school?

WORKS: I studied mechanical and electrical engineering at the University of Detroit and the University of Hartford and also took some miscellaneous courses at New York University.

COURIER: Where did you work before coming to Lexalite?

WORKS: I worked for DuPont, Pratt nnd Whitney Aircraft, and the Fairbanks Morse Division of Colt Industries. We moved here six years ago from Beloit, Wisconsin. We are really happy in Charlevoix.

COURIER: Do you have a family?

WORKS: I have two sons, Steve, who is 24 and is in the United States Air Force at Portsmouth, and Mike, who is 22 and employed by the Connecticut Department of Transportation and Highways. My wife, Fran, nnd I also have a son, Jim, who is a student at the Charlevoix Middle School.

COURIER: What are your goals?

Montessori school to open here

Charlevoix residents are invited to a special meeting about the new Charlevoix Montessori Children's Home at 7 p.m. Thursday in the lower level of the First Congregational Church on the corner of Park Avenue and State Street.

Katie Donovan is opening the new school next fall and she invites all interested people ta attend the meeting and learn mare about the Montessori method. People interested in enrolling children in the school may also do so at that time.

Ms. Donovan plans on having a model Montessori classroom set up for people to inspect and she will also be presenting a movie and slide presentation to explain the theories of Maria Montessori, originator of the Montessori method.

"Maria Montessori was a doctor and a scientific observer," Ms. Donovan explained. "She observed children and let them show her what they needed. She didn't design a model based on what she thought they needed."

Dr. Montessori found that children have sensitive periods when they are more open to learning certain things and she arranged Montessori schooling to fit in with these sensitive period.

"At the Montessori school the environment is arganized to serve those sensitive periods," Ms. Donovan explained. "The children learn by absorbing the environment and the activities in it.

"Montessori gives children the freedom to learn within their own limitations. The children chaose their own work and move obout the school as they please."

Fluoride clinics set June 2-9 at public library

Brighter smiles will be on the faces of 60 Charlevoix area children this summer as they complete a special topical fluoride program.

The students will be attending a fluoride clinic from June 2-9 in the basement of the Charlevoix Public Library. The children will have their teeth cleaned on the first visit and a fluoride solution will be applied directly to the teeth. The fluoride application will be repeated at the next three visits.

In addition to the fluoride treatments, the children will also receive dental health education from the clinic personnel.

Parents of children enrolled in the program will receive appointment cards about two weeks prior to their children's first appointment.

The program is sponsored by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority in cooperation with the District 3 Health Department and the Michigan Department of Public Health.

But Brazil is home

ANNA COELHO models the dress she wore to the prom for East Jordan High School. Anna is a Brazilian exchange student staying with the Ron Conkle family.

Finding out what it's like to be a teenager in America was one of the many reasons behind Anna Coelho's trip to the United States.

And find out she has. The exchange student, who is staying with the Ronald Conkle family in East Jordan, has been participating in as many American teenager activities as she can. She is a member of the high school girls track team, was the honored guest at a "Sweet 16" birthday party and even went to that favorite event of the spring, the high school prom.

Some things about the United States are not new to Anna. Her mother is an American citizen and her two older brothers were born in this country. Her sister was an exchange student in New Jersey a few years ago and Anna has even been to this country before to visit her grandmother.

But none of that really showed her what it was like to be an American teenager, so she decided to visit this country through the Youth for Understanding program. She arrived in East Jordan in January for a six month stay with the Conkles.

Another important reason for Anna's trip is her dual citizenship. Because Anna's mother is an American citizen, Anna will carry a dual citizenship until she is 18. At that time she must decide if she will become a Brazilian or an American.

Currently enrolled at the high school as a junior, Anna enjoys her U.S. History, typing, gym, government, English and Spanish classes.

Her native tongue is Portugese which is akin to Spanish and Anna says she is having no trouble with her Spanish class. When asked if taking Spanish wasn't cheating a little, she giggled and then pointed out that it does help her learn English, too.

Anna said she enjoys her American school, although it is quite different from her Brazilian school.

In Brazil she takes 13 subjects a year and has five classes a day, but not always the same classes. She also goes to school from 7 a.m. to noon each day and then uses the afternoons for doing homework or participating in sports.

"I enjoy switching classes like they do here," Anna said talking about her American school. "We don't change classes in Brazil. You're in the same room with the same people all day, you just switch subjects."

Anna said she likes the United States and the people, but she has noticed some differences in the teenagers.

"American teenagers express their feelings more than they do in Brazil," she commented. "They tease more, too."

The exchange student said American teenagers were more open about their opinions with their teachers, too. Here students will tell teachers exactly what they think about everything, including the teachers.

"If you did that in Brazil you would be kicked out of class," Anna said.

Anna said she also noticed that American teenagers went steady a lot more than in Brazil.

"They switch more here than in Brazil," she explained. "Once you go steady in Brazil you don't break up and switch to someone else as often as you do here."

When Anna returns to Brazil in July, she will finish up the school year there and then she has one more year to go before she takes the college entrance examination.

"It's a very hard test," she said. "I'll be studying all year long for it."

When she gets to college Anna would like to study naval engineering. She said she has no interest in medicine even though her father was a doctor and her mother a nurse.

"One brother and one sister have gone into medicine," she said. "That's enough."

Anna's father was interning in the United States when he met her mother. They were married and had two sons before they decided to move to Brazil.

Currently, Anna's father is a farmer raising rice and cattle.

"My house is always full of foreign people who have come to talk with my father about the farming business," Anna said.

Anna said the students are also more involved with their schools than they are in Brazil.

"They do a lot more things with the schools here than in Brazil," she said. "You don't have as many students belonging to clubs or teams as you do here. I think that's because the teachers don't care as much about these things in Brazil and they don't put as much into it as they do here."

One thing that Anna became involved with here was the prom. She said she had been to her brother's prom in Brazil but that it was quite different than the American one she attended.

"They have proms in Brazil but only for college students," she said. "And the students are not the only ones invited to the prom. It is for their families and friends, too."

Another difference Anna has noticed in America is that people eat more.

"You have more junk food," Anna said. "We have these things in Brazil, but we don't buy them as much."

Anna said she especially enjoys chocolate which she eats in Brazil but not as often as she does here. She is especially fond of Mrs. Conkle's chocolate cakes and chocolate chip cookies.

The exchange student has also been busy purchasing gifts for friends and relatives at home. One of the things she is taking back is chocolate chips, which they don't have in Brazil, and cheese in spray cans, which they also don't have.

"I couldn't believe it when I saw cheese in a spray can" she laughed, her hazel eyes beaming.

She's also taking home a myriad of other things including calculators, doctors flashlights or pen lights, cameras and Petoskey stones.

While Anna has been learning about the United States, the Conkles have been learning, too.

"We feel like we've broadened our horizons," Ron Conkle said. "We knew hardly anything about Brazil before Anna came."

Conkle, who is the director of Grandvue Medical Care Facility, said his family decided to get involved in the program after talking with a coworker at Grandvue.

"We thought the exchange program would be fun and interesting," he said. "It was a little scary, too."

Conkle said that he and his wife, who have twin six-year-old daughters, missed having teenagers around the house and were glad to have a student living with them. Before entering the nursing home field, Conkle worked with Junior Achievement which involves only high school students.

The Conkles and their daughters have enjoyed having Anna live with them so much that they plan to have other exchange students visit them, too.

"We would like to do it again," Mrs. Conkle said. "And next time we would like to have two students, both from different cultures."

Mrs. Conkle thought it would be fun for the two students to have somebody to share their experiences with as well as the host family.

When asked if Anna would consider becoming an American she thought for a while and then said: "America is a nice country and a nice place to visit, but Brazil is home."

Homes needed for six students interested in visiting area

Homes for six Youth for Understanding students from other countries are needed in the Charlevoix-Antrim County area.

Youth for Understanding is the largest international exchange program in the world, and some 4,500 students from 26 countries will arrive in the United States this summer.

At the same time, some 2,500 American students will join host families in Europe, Latin America, Asia, and Australia. All Youth for Understanding students share life for a year with a volunteer host family, attend local schools, and become members of a new community and culture.

Students assume the costs of the exchange program. Youth for Understanding provides culture orientation and placement services. Host families offer room and board and an American spirit of generosity and cultural understanding.

More information about the program may be obtained from Mrs. James Patton, Box 150, East Jordan, phone 536-2504.

Senior citizens invited to special dinner Thursday

All senior citizens in the Charlevoix area are invited to attend the annual dinner honoring them hosted by the Leslie T. Shapton Post No. 226 and the Charlevoix Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 1153.

The event will be held at the V.F.W. post home on US 31 North with a happy hour scheduled for 6 p.m. and a dinner at 7 p.m.

All members of the service organizations and auxiliaries are invited to attend.

This dinner is open to all senior citizens even if they have not been attending other senior citizens activities.

Following the dinner, Ivan Parsons, the one-man band, will play for listening and dancing.

All that part of the Charlevoix County Road known as Lake Shore Drive, having a center line described as: Beginning at a point on the line common to Sections 27 and 34, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, just to the west of the common corner of Sections 27, 34, 26 & 35, T33N, R9W; thence, northerly across Sections 27, 23 and 14, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, to a point of ending on the line common to Sections 14 and 11, T33N, R9W, near the north-south ¼ line of said Section 14, T33N, R9W, being in all some 3.1 miles in length.

In addition, all that part of Lake Shore Drive, Charlevoix County having a center line described as: Beginning at a point on the line common to Sections 1 and 12, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, distant approximately 1,000 feet west of the north-south ¼ line of said Section 12, thence, northerly and easterly across Section 1, T33N, R9W, and Section 6, T33N, R8W, Norwood Township, and across Sections 31 and 32, T34N, R8W, Charlevoix Township to a point ending at the Charlevoix County Road known as Bell's Bay Road, being in all some 3.8 miles in length.

In addition, all of that Charlevoix County Road known as Branch Road, having a center line described as: Beginning at the corner common to Sections 1 and 12, T33N, R9W, and Sections 6 and 7, T33N, R8W; thence, northwest to the intersection of said Lake Shore Drive, being some 0.5 miles in length.

WHEREAS, after full hearing thereon, and this Board being fully advised in the premises, this Board has determined that it is advisable to absolutely abandon and discontinue the said parts of said roads as herein described for the purposes set forth in said Petition and for the best interest of the public.

WHEREAS, Mr. Lester A. Wheeler, a signer of the aforesaid petition who owns property abutting and serviced by the aforesaid Lake Shore Drive has been assured access to his property by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, as evidenced by two letters dated September 25, 1975, and September 30, 1975, addressed to Mr. Wheeler and signed by Mr. O. J. Scherschligt, Chief, Parks Division, Michigan DNR, which letters are attached hereto and made a part hereof;

September 25, 1975

Mr. L.A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

Our District Park Supervisor, James Andrus, informs me that he visited you recently relative to our proposal to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public road. He reports that you are generally supportive of this concept and believe as we do that a managed and controlled park is the answer to much of the misuse of the area's public and private lands.

Road closure petitions require by law the signatures of seven land owners in the county. Preferred are those such as you who reside on or near the road considered for abandonment.

Mr. Andrus reports that you are seeking assurance that you and your family and friends retain continued free access to your property, a very understandable position and one which I have no reservations in honoring. Although we have no immediate plans to charge for park entry, it's possible this may occur someday. Arrangements can be made at that time to accommodate your concerns for free and uninhibited access.

By copy of this letter, I am advising Mr. Andrus of this position asking that he again visit with you. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to notify this office if you have other concerns.

Sincerely,

O.J. Scherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

September 30, 1975

Mr. L. A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

This will acknowledge your September 28, 1975, letter which seeks additional assurances relative to our petition to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public thoroughfare.

I agree to your request for appropriate, free, uninhibited and unimpeded access to the whole of your 400 foot lake frontage. I also agree that such access will not be limited to you, your wife and visitors personally, but will extend to the whole of the property and to and for the use and benefit of such assignees, grantees and successors as may acquire through you.

If all goes well, we expect to operate the campground next spring as a state park. Hopefully, some of the misuse can be reduced by having appropriate park staff on duty. Your cooperation in assisting us is much appreciated.

Sincerely,

O.J. Scherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of County Road Commissioners for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, that the portions of the Charlevoix County Highways known as Lake Shore Drive and Branch Road, as herein described, be abandoned and discontinued as of May 8, 1978, as county roads, and cease to be part of the County road system, and that said Board determines it to be to the best interest of the public that said highways so abandoned and discontinued should be, and the same is hereby absolutely abandoned and discontinued.

That a notice of this determination be given by the Clerk of the Commission to the proper highway authorities and the Charlevoix and Norwood Township officials and be published in the Charlevoix Courier, a newspaper published and circulated in said county, once each week for three consecutive weeks.

That pursuant to the provisions of Act 46 of Public Acts of 1963, as amended, being M.S.A. 9.118, the portions of county roads, as herein described, shall be absolutely abandoned and discontinued as county roads.

Resolution adopted by the following yea and nay vote:
YEAS: Commissioners Korthase and Graham
NAYS: None
ABSTAIN: Commissioner Mousseau

I, the undersigned Deputy County Clerk and Clerk of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the part of the proceedings of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County on the 8th day of May 1978. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 12th day of May A.D. 1978.

Summer's here, waterskiers say

Summer came to Charlevoix last week.

The first sign of that delightful season took the form of two water skiers on Lake Charlevoix.

Keith Bailey and Scott McCorvie, members of the Pine Lake Water Ski Club, decided to hit the water late Wednesday afternoon.

"We're just trying to get the rough edges out of our Fourth of July water ski show," McCorvie explained before he got into the water.

The club, composed of friends living in the Eveline Orchards resort on the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, annually performs water ski shows around the area. This year they are planning a July 2 show at Walloon Lake and a July 4 show in East Jordan. They also annually perform at Depot Beach during the Venetian Festival.

"Actually, Keith just got a new boat and we were just dying to try it out," McCorvie said smiling. "And besides, life is no fun without some craziness."

The water skiing group got together about three years ago when someone, since forgotten, suggested they put on a performance. They've been doing it ever since.

The club members say their love for water skiing prompted them to try the performances and it is their love of water skiing and the exhilaration of it that moves them to get out on the water no matter what the weather — or the temperatures.

So they donned their wetsuits Wednesday and jumped into the water. Mildly shocked grins crossed their faces as they surfaced and within a few minutes they were out of the water and up on their skis.

"The water's great," they called to their friends in the boat. "Why don't you join us."

The water skiing episode ended about 20 minutes and three dunkings later.

"That was all right," Bailey said as he climbed into the boat. "It felt great."

Both of them also managed to get some barefoot skiing in, too.

Bailey and McCorvie aren't the first members of the club to be out in the water this year, however, another friend, Brad Crain, of Boyne City, beat them in.

Skiing in cold weather is not unusual for the group. Two years ago they were in the water on Oct. 16 having a snowball fight on their water skis.

Bailey and McCorvie are looking for some new members to participate in the club's acts this summer. Skiing in the lake while there is still ice on it is not a requirement of entering the club, but a love of water is.

"We need some new members to help us with our pyramid," Bailey said. "They don't even have to know how to water ski, we'll teach them."

People interested in joining the club can reach Bailey at 547-2659 or 536-7431.

IT'S SUMMER and time for waterskiing, according to Keith Bailey and Scott McCorvie. And to prove their point the young men went skiing on Lake Charlevoix last Wednesday.

What is ARTRAIN?

Michigan Artrain brings an extraordinary seven car touring art exhibition to communities which do not have easy access to major cultural centers. The converted railroad cars house a selection of American art of the past and present, emphasizing that art is found not only in gilt frames on walls of museums, but that humble objects of everyday use may achieve the status of art when shaped with care and sensitivity. American art, like the art of every nation, has its roots in the land from which it springs, the people who have created, and the art of the past on which it builds.

The heritage of American art is so rich and varied that no attempt is made to present a systematic history of American art. Rather, Michigan Artrain offers a celebration of art in which works in different media and from different periods are juxtaposed to suggest sometimes startling, sometimes amusing, sometimes provocative similarities and differences to challenge the perception of the viewer.

The large collection includes decorative and folk arts, 19th and early 20th Century landscapes and scenes of everyday life; contemporary paintings, prints, photographs and sculpture, and a comparison of 19th Century objects, such as tools, utensils and furniture, and their 20th Century counterparts.

The exhibition poses many questions—the questions posed by art itself. What is art? Who makes it? What inspires its creation? Where is it found? You are invited to share in the adventure of American art by discovering your own answers.

Join with Michigan Artrain in celebrating the creative American Spirit!

What's on ARTRAIN?

Common Objects as Art are displayed in mirrored cases. There is no doubt that these "everyday" items were crafted with the greatest of care and, in many instances, through bygone processes. The Henry Ford Museum and the Detroit Historical Society are principal lenders of exquisite pieces including a rare cut glass vase, a wooden Indian maiden and brass automobile head lamps.

Contemporary Directions in an entire railroad car, is a collection of the most unique examples of modern art. The meaning is in the making, not the viewing alone. Air brush, syringe, polyurethane, are words not commonly associated with "pictures." Representative paintings are included and arranged thematically relating to exhibitions on board. Charles Burchfield, Andy Warhol and Ben Shahn are among the artists as diverse as the land they represent. Works from the Detroit Institute of Art and the University of Michigan Museum of Art profoundly influence this collection. Visitors explore the gallery while a recording of Aaron Copeland conducting his "Appalachian Spring" completes this truly American setting.

Made in USA contrasts useful objects of the past with their contemporary counterparts. The results are surprising. A modern Frank Stella print is strikingly similar in pattern to a vintage Log Cabin quilt yet there is hardly a common line between a Polaroid SX-70 and an antique box camera.

The Eye of the Camera places four screens flanked by mirrors in front of the visitor for a retrospective of American culture as seen by our most distinguished photographers. Contemporary music accompanies this journey from the Industrial Age to the present.

The American Land is too vast a terrain to portray in any single exhibition, but a representative selection of paintings and graphics depicts the movement from realistic to impressionistic painting. Graphic landscapes of Detroit illuminate its growth pattern and inevitable change.

Numbers and Letters shows how signage has evolved throughout history. Early objects, including railroad logos are compared to work by contemporary artists such as Robert Indiana and Jasper Johns. In earlier days a sign not only declared the name of an enterprise but exemplified the product as well.

Michigan at the Turn of the Century features large transparencies of photographs representing changes in technology and life-style. Presented in a format which surrounds the visitor, the hallway is filled with the sounds of original piano arrangements of Scott Joplin and George Gershwin making similar statements in music.

The Artrain Studio is a converted baggage car which provides resident and community artists the opportunity to communicate the creative process. Conversations over a silk screen or potter's wheel are common here. It's the most exciting experience on board because it is live and a fitting climax to the Artrain tour.

Throughout ARTRAIN's visit, talented artists from our own northern Michigan area will be demonstrating their skills and crafts in the ARTRAIN studio. Many of these artists will also be exhibiting their work for viewing and for sale in the Saturday Art Fair noon to 6 p.m. May 27.

In addition, throughout ARTRAIN's stay, there are scheduled performing arts events for your entertainment and enjoyment. We hope you'll understand that the schedules may be subject to change without notice. Unless otherwise noted, all events will take place outside near ARTRAIN on the grounds around The Historical Museum at the waterfront, Petoskey.

Of Irish Nobel Peace Prize Winner

Beaver Island residents gearing up for visit

The Irish flags are flying a little bit higher on Beaver Island these days as the Islanders prepare for the June 3 visit of Irish Nobel Peace Prize winner Mairead Corrigan.

Miss Corrigan received the 1976 Nobel Peace Prize along with Betty Williams for her work with the Peace Peoples Movement in Northern Ireland. The two women founded the group following the tragic death of three children due to the violence in the Irish community.

Mrs. Williams witnessed the deaths and Miss Corrigan was the aunt of the three children who were killed when an Irish Republican army terrorist's car ran over them while trying to escape the British Army patrol.

"As far as I know, nothing like this has ever happened here," Joy Green, native of the island and an Irish-American Catholic said. "We're excited that Miss Corrigan would want to visit Beaver Island."

Mrs. Green said the fact that Miss Corrigan had won the Nobel Peace Prize and that she was Irish made the visit especially meaningful to the Beaver Islanders.

"We have a very strong attachment to Ireland here," Mrs. Green explained. "Everyone dreams of going to Ireland some day. Some get there and some never get there, but they still feel a part of Ireland."

Mrs. Green made her first trip to Ireland this winter.

She, along with two Protestant friends, Lillian Gregg, who is part Irish, and MaryAnn Omer, is helping to coordinate Miss Corrigan's trip to America's own Emerald Isle.

This is Miss Corrigan's first visit to Michigan, according to Sally Kaplan of Birmingham who is coordinating Miss Corrigan's visit to the state. One of the reasons she is going to Beaver Island instead of the bigger cities in the state, is that the island 33 miles off the shore of Charlevoix, is an Irish Community where Catholics and Protestants live together in peace.

"To get Roman Catholics and Protestants to live together in peace is what the Peace Peoples Movement is all about," Mrs. Caplan explained.

Mrs. Green said the fact that the two groups live together peacefully on Beaver Island is very important to the residents.

"One very strong feeling we have is ecumenicalism," she said. "It's important to us that we all get along together."

Consequently, the Holy Cross Parish Hall, where Miss Corrigan will address the public about the peace movement and its goals at 3 p.m. June 3, is the scene of almost every event on the island no matter if it is a wedding reception or a graduation ceremony for either a Catholic or a Protestant.

Likewise, when the Catholic priest had to leave the island because of illness on Thanksgiving, rather than cancel the Thanksgiving church services, Phil Gregg, lay leader of the Beaver Island Christian Church, gave the sermon and Sister Dennis Marie got special permission to give communion to the Catholic parishioners.

The Islanders are planning to give Miss Corrigan a tour of Beaver Island and to treat her to dinner at the Circle M Supper Club. They also would like to have her take part in a night of music and fun at the well-known Shamrock Bar.

"We hope it will be a real relaxed time and that it won't be impersonal," Mrs. Omer said. "We want everyone to have a chance to meet her and talk with her."

Miss Corrigan is in the United States with Betty Williams to receive the United Nations Women of Achievement Award. She will also receive the Spirit of St. Louis Award before coming to Michigan.

She is making a tour of the United States to help raise funds for peace centers in Ireland, Mrs. Kaplan said.

Miss Corrigan will arrive in Charlevoix June 3 in time to take a specially-scheduled Beaver Island ferry from the city to the island at 12:30 p.m. If more than 50 people accompany her on the peace boat, the Beaver Island Boat Company will donate the revenue from the extra tickets to the Peace Peoples Movement.

Miss Corrigan will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Wojan at their motel on the harbor. She will return to the mainland on Sunday to continue her tour.

THREE BEAVER ISLAND residents are busy making the arrangements for the June 3 visit of Nobel Peace Prize winner Mairead Corrigan. The women are (left to right) Joy Green, Mary Ann Omer and Lil Gregg.

CHRIS PUTMAN shows off his first place plaque in the Pitch, Hit and Run competition held in Traverse City this weekend. He will now participate in competition in Flint June 4.

Chris Putman wins baseball competition

A seventh grade student at the Charlevoix Middle School, Chris will represent Charlevoix at the district competition to be held in Flint June 4. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Putman.

Others who participated in the area competition at Traverse City Saturday were Pat Curtis, Kevin Pearsall, Desmond and Doug Mulligan and Jody Putman.

RESPONDS TO BINGO COMMENT

One of the articles in Hot Line in the May 17, 1978 issue of the Charlevoix Courier, stated that the Bingo game on Sunday and Monday nights are rigged, and that the jackpot doesn't go until at least 57 or 58 numbers have been called, this is not true because the Sunday night jackpot went a couple of weeks ago in only 52 numbers, so that statement is false.

As for the Bingos being rigged, there is no way with the new blower machines used for calling number that any game can be rigged.

I invite the persons making these statements to come up front and sit with the caller and we can show them that there is no way it can be done.

The Sunday and Monday night bingos do not need this type of publicity, it seems like all they're trying to do is cause trouble and spoil the fun that 99 percent of the people are having that come to these games, all they want is an enjoyable evening.

I would just as soon have these persons causing problems please stay away from these games, if they can't be fair losers as well as winners, and let the people who are having fun, enjoy it.

V.F.W. Bingo Chairman

MORE ABOUT HILLBILLIES

I would just like to say that I'm not offended by anybody calling me a hillbilly. I wouldn't change my status for anything. I think hillbillies have some of the prettiest music and some of the prettiest artwork there is. And those hillbillies sure do know how to keep their houses clean. I'm from Alabama and I wouldn't change my status for anything.

CONGRATULATIONS SAM

Congratulations to Sam an his Council on their choice of Harbor Master! As a boat owner and operator myself let me say "We don't need any more of what we had last year.

MORE ON DOG ORDINANCE

We would like to make an addition to the New Pooper-Scooper Ordinance, that Mr. Pointner and the City Council are writting up.

Please include NOISE NUISANCE, by dogs. We have two dogs in our neighborhood that bark CONTINUALLY, ALL DAY LONG, Year after year. Either the owners are away all day, and don't hear it as we do, or they must dislike their neighbors, to make them suffer from this continuous barking...Thank you.

BALL FIELD REST ROOMS

I would like to know why the restrooms are not open at the ballfield? When the kids have a game at 4:00 which is right after school, there are no restrooms to use. Also, the same problem on Saturday mornings. I know they are open for the adult games, why not for the children? Is there a differenca? A concerned mother.

LEFT TURNS ON BRIDGE ST.

Now that summer is coming, and the traffic on Bridge St. gets so bad, I'm wondering if we are still going to have left turns allowed going south on Bridge at the Clinton St. light? When the bridge goes up, there is such a pile-up of traffic you can't move. Why is the left hand turn allowed going south and not allowed going north?

Charlevoix's super city, mayor says

Charlevoix has a fan club, city officials learned Monday night.

It's the City of Saugatuck.

Exchange Day Mayor DeForest Doener of Saugatuck explained what high regard the citizens of his community have for Charlevoix during Mayor Exchange Day ceremonies Monday night.

"When I began to tell people in Saugatuck that we were exchanging with Charlevoix, the word I got from them was that Charlevoix is a super city. I never heard one bad word about your town," the honorary mayor of Charlevoix for a day said.

"Saugatuck happens to be a fan of Charlevoix's."

Mayor Doener said he had requested Charlevoix for the exchange because the two communities have many things in common. Saugatuck is currently struggling with its zoning ordinance and restrictions on condominiums and it is also constructing a waste water treatment plant.

"I learned something today," Mayor Doener said. "We're trying to bring Saugatuck up to where Charlevoix is."

Doener, who has been Saugatuck's mayor for six months and served on city council for four years before that, spoke highly of Charlevoix's sewage treatment plant.

"You've got a beautiful plant and thanks to some city officials who had it built when they did, it only cost you $2 million," he said. "Ours is going to cost us $6 million."

The exchange mayor, who was accompanied by his wife, Counciiman James Christiansen and his wife, and Counciiman Robert Jones and city employee Carol Baumbach, was also impressed with the Round Lake Yacht Basin and the city's municipal docks.

"I wish we had a municipal marina," Doener said. "Don't ever lose yours."

And the exchange mayor also commented on the city's zoning and its efforts to keep the profile of the city low.

"With the exception of one building, you have kept the city;s profile low," he said. "And that's important. You're in the people business and people want to see something in Charlevoix that they can't see in the big city.

"You've managed to keep it clear so that people can see the lake and nature."

During the Exchange Day visit, which was arranged by former Alderman Jeannine Wallace, the Saugatuck officials toured the north and south sides of town including the Charlevoix Area Hospital, the Charlevoix Elementary School, the sewage treatment plant and the three local beaches.

Police Chief Jack Mol assisted with the tours and common council members George Plumm, Ivan Whitley, Earl Muma and Stub Swanson and their wives and former Mayor Ed Hansen and his wife, met with the Saugatuck group for dinner.

Mayor Sam Supernaw and his wife and Alderman Ray Wood and his wife spent the day in Saugatuck.

CITY CLERK Judy Przybylski swears in exchange Mayor DeForest Doener during the band concert Sunday as his wife and Charlevoix Mayor Sam Supernaw look on. Mayor Doener was mayor of Charlevoix for the day Monday as a part of the Michigan Week celebration.

Air Force commander to head Memorial Day service

The commander of the U.S. Air Force Radar Station in Bay Shore will give the Memorial Day address during ceremonies Monday at Brookside Cemetery in Charlevoix.

"A Day of Tribute" will be presented by Lt. Col. Robert Hill as he heads up the Memorial Day observance, which will feature the annual memorial presentations at the cemetery, the Submarine Memorial and Memorial Park and a parade from downtown Charlevoix to the cemetery.

Also participating in the program at the cemetery will be L. Scott Swanson, Charlevoix High School student, who will make a presentation; Rev. Roger Ames, who will give the invocation; Rev. Walt Hastings, who will give the benediction; and Bon Geer, master of ceremonies.

The Charlevoix High School band will also peroform with Ken Fiedler, Geoff Nelson, Wayne Hoffman and Gene Lenhart playing "Taps."

The parade will begin at 10 a.m. at the corner of Park Avenue and Bridge Streets with Vince Olach acting as parade marshall and World War I veterans Sam King and Ed Edwards acting as honorary parade marshalls.

The parade will proceed south on Bridge to Antrim Street where the VFW and American Legion auxiliaries will toss wreaths into the lake in honor of those buried at sea. The VFW and American Legion will place wreaths at the Submarine Memorial and at Memorial Park.

The parade will then move down Bridge Street to M-66 and then to the cemetery.

In case of bad weather, attempts will be made to switch the ceremonies to the high school gym.

Tourism looks better than ever

The tourist season in western Michigan should be better than ever this summer and every season until 1990, the president of the West Michigan Tourist Association said recently.

"According to the reports I've seen, economists are bullish on the tourism market until 1990," Wesley B. Tebeau told a gathering of Charlevoix service clubs. "Things look very positive for tourism."

Tebeau made his remarks at a special Michigan Week luncheon bosted for member of the various Charlevoix service clubs by the Charlevoix Lions Club.

The tourist association head said the increase in the number of young adults in the population and the change in their lifestyles has lead to the increase in tourism.

"Young adults are more mobile than ever before and fewer of them are having children so that they can travel more," he said. "Also they tend to collect experiences instead of things so they have more money to spend on travel."

Tebeau said the tourist undustry also seemed to be recession proof and that adds to the positive feeling economists have about it.

"We found that out in 1973 when we had our recession," Tebeau pointed out. "We thought we were going to die that year and instead we had an excellent year."

The tourist association president also presented some statistics about what tourism has done for Charlevoix County.

In 1975, tourists spent more than $57 million in travel expenses in the county. The tourist business generated 1,900 jobs in Charlevoix or approximately 25 percent of the jobs in the county.

The money tourists spent in the county generated in $15 million in personal income in 1975. Last summer it generated close to $82 million in personal income in this county.

Tebeau said there were some clouds on the horizons as far as tourism in this state is concerned.

"We're seeing more and more resource use conflicts between the tourists and the environmentalists," he pointed out. "And there has been an overbuilding of tourist facilities in some communities.

"In addition we see a lot more citizen chauvinism than we use to. It's 'my fist, my park, and my deer!' My God."

He added that gasoline costs and more government regulations plus increases in the minimum wage will also put the pinch on tourism.

He explained that it is his job to combat these factors as the head of the tourist association and to keep the people coming into the west part of the state.

The tourist association does this through radio, television, magazine and newspaper ads. It also publishes a special magazine called "Carefree Days" every 90 days. The magazine describes upcoming events and attractions and encourages people to take part in them.

The books are distributed at various ski and camping shows and to chambers of commerce.

> Television news is not a substitute for the newspaper. Regular newspaper readers are found more often among people who watch television and who listen to radio news.

Beaver Island doctor marks 50 years

By PAULA HOLMES

By all rights, J.W. Christie, M.D., should be sitting back and enjoying life. After half a century of medical practice, Dr. Christie has earned the right to retire.

But retirement is the furthest thing from the 73-year-old doctor's mind. And to prove it, the doctor, whose practice covers Beaver Island and its 220 permanent residents, has embarked on an expansion program at the Island's health center.

Dr. Christie, with the fund-raising aid of the women's auxiliary, has added three more rooms to the clinic building including one room which houses a brand new X-ray machine.

But that has been the story of Dr. Christie's medical career. He has always sought new challenges and new places where he could put his medical knowledge to work helping people.

He started out in private practice as a general surgeon in Pontiac where he eventually became chief surgeon of St. Joseph Mercy Hospital.

He was then drafted in the U.S. Army and served in the South Pacific where he earned a Bronze Star. He was called back in the service during the Korean War.

Following his stint in the Army, Christie moved his medical practice to Northport when he discovered that the community hadn't had a doctor in 12 years. While he was there he helped found the Leelanau Memorial Hospital.

After the hospital was running smoothly, Christie went to Africa in 1960 at the age of 56, as a medical missionary. He worked in Northern Rhodesia, now Zambia, treating lepers.

When the political upheaval became too much, Dr. Christie returned to the United States and became the only doctor practicing in Harbor Springs. When the only physician on Beaver Island died, Dr. Christie began flying to the Island two days a week to bring medical care to its residents.

A short time after that he moved to the Island permanently and has served as the Islanders' physician for slightly more than 10 years.

Dr. Christie looks back on his half century as a physician with pride.

"To me, making a good diagnosis and seeing a patient through an illness is like making a hole-in-one," the white-haired, white goateed physician said. "Keeping up and taking care of lives is the greatest thing you can do."

Dr. Christie said his life has been completely consumed by his practice of medicine.

"There have been plenty of times when I was getting ready to go to a wedding or a New Year's Eve party and I ended up in the hospital delivering a baby or answering an emergency call.

"But you get used to it. You know it's just a part of your job."

Delivering babies is still a big part of Dr. Christie's practice. In fact, he often has to plan his schedule around the expected due dates of Island women.

"You know, I think it's a good idea for physicians to take the 50 hours of educational classes like the AMA requires now. But I do have a bit of a problem working them all in," he explained. "You've got to work around those babies."

And just as delivering babies is a big part of Dr. Christie's practice, so is making house calls.

"I'm not the last doctor around making house calls," he said honestly. "All doctors would make house calls if the patients couldn't come in to the office."

Dr. Christie personifies every cliche people hold about the old country doctor. While his manner toward his patients is professional, his attitude is fatherly.

"You learn to be a good listener as a doctor in a rural area," he explained. "In a small community like this, where you have no lawyers or anything, the doctor ends up trying to help people out with their difficulties."

Doctors often end up being counselors to children and adults alike. But Christie wouldn't trade his rural practice for a return to the city.

"You don't make as much money in a rural practice, but you have to have a little peace of mind, too," he pointed out.

"The people here are wonderful. They are great home people and wonderful to be with."

MEG WORKS slips some film in the new x-ray machine at the Beaver Island Health Center as Dr. J.W. Christie watches. The new machine is housed in the new wing at the health center.

CETA funds help employ 55 people in Charlevoix county

By PEG OHLE

Since November, 1974, Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) funds in the amount of $1,455,281 have come into Charlevoix County to provide jobs for long-term, financially distressed unemployed people.

The jobs are all in government, school, or health care-related agencies, ranging from Charlevoix County to the Native American Recovery Center.

At the present time, 55 men and women who were found to meet the standards of need set up by CETA are now working at various jobs throughout the county.

Helen Phillips, assistant director for public programs, explains that those hired must be unemployed for 15 of the previous 20 weeks, and must be in what are called "poverty level" financial circumstances. They must also be registered with the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC).

"CETA is a life-saver, both money-wise and pride-wise, for those we can hire," Mrs. Phillips says. "It does something for human dignity.

What would happen if CETA funds were not available to the various public agencies in the county? Mrs. Phillips points out that these agencies would not be able to carry on full programs. For instance, the Commission on Aging is almost entirely staffed by CETA workers. And if they did carry on their programs, the bill would have to be footed by local taxpayers.

CETA workers are paid wages ranging from $2.75 an hour to $10,000 a year, depending on the type of work they do, which ranges from unskilled labor to professional. During the month of April, the CETA payroll amounted to $48,471.96 county-wide.

CETA funds go entirely for payroll, and have been administered under different "titles". The most recent "title", which is just getting under way, is for "projects". Projects are defined as any job that may be completed during a given short period of time. So far, 25 agencies in the county have applied for funds to complete projects, such as winterizing their buildings or renovating school rooms. Under this program, CETA funds may also be used for rental of equipment.

There is a temporary freeze on project funds, according to Mrs. Phillips, but she expects it to be lifted within a short period of time. When that happens, $690,788 will become available for use in the county.

Public agencies within the county now employing CETA workers are:

Charlevoix County: Two clerks sharing County Clerk's and CETA work; two clerks in District Court; director, office girl, and two bus drivers for Commission on Aging; two employees in Sheriff's Department and two for jail security; one secretary in Probate Judge's office; two employees loaned to Department of Social Services; one employee loaned to Department of Agriculture in Boyne City; and one part-time custodian.

Charlevoix Township: One laborer.

East Jordan Public Schools: One cook's helper, one maintenance man, one teacher's aide.

Boyne Falls Public Schools: One office assistant and teacher's aide combined, one program aide, one special needs teacher, one recreation director.

Charlevoix County Road Commission: Four laborers.

Senior class plans fundraiser for trip

By LAURA GLASS

Fundraising is on the minds of Charlevoix High School seniors as they prepare for the senior trip. Several activities are planned for this week.

In December, the Charlevoix Board of Education approved a policy to no longer recognize or permit senior trips during the school year. Any such trips must be organized after graduation and must not involve the school.

This policy releases the school from any responsibility during the trips. It also makes it difficult to organize and fund the trips. Now the class not only has to pay for food and lodging but also for transportation, which means chartering buses, hiring drivers and chaperones.

Undaunted by the obstacles, the Senior Class of 1978 plans to take a senior trip to Cedar Point. The class has been raising, scraping and saving for a long time. With only 10 days left until graduation their goal is within reach.

To raise the needed funds, the seniors are sponsoring an all-you-can-eat salad luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday at the American Legion Hall. Donations are $2.25 for $1.50 for students and senior citizens, preschoolers are free.

The seniors are also holding a drawing for a General Electric microwave oven from Puffs Appliance. Donations are $1 and the drawing will be held Thursday also.

...Speaking Her Mind

I recently had the luck of the Irish (so to speak) to meet some very warm and genuine people. I visited Beaver Island last weekend and as many of you know, the island occupies a warm spot in my heart anyway. The reasons for that were brought to mind again by my latest visit.

This time I was on the island just for a day to talk with Joy Green, Lil Gregg and Mary Ann Omer about their part in arranging the upcoming visit of Novel Peace Prize winner Mairead Corrigan.

Miss Corrigan received the Nobel prize along with Betty Williams for her part in starting Northern Ireland's Peace People Movement.

Part of the reason that Miss Corrigan is coming to Beaver Island is because it is a community where Irish American Catholics and Irish American Protestants as well as Protestants of other ethnic backgrounds live together peaceably unlike strife-torn Northern Ireland.

And Mrs. Green, Mrs. Gregg and Mrs. Omer are good examples of the feeling of community that the Islanders have. Mrs. Green is 100 percent Irish Catholic and a native Islander. Mrs. Gregg is part Irish and Protestant and has lived on the island for about 18 years. Mrs. Omer is not Irish and is a Protestant and has lived on the island fulltime since January.

Together the women are planning for the visit of Miss Corrigan. Their efforts are as symbolic as Miss Corrigan's visit. The three women show that no matter what a person's background or beliefs, they can work together for the betterment of their community.

And the women are proud of that fact.

"I hope that the friendliness and our sense of ecumenicalism is something that we never lose," Mrs. Green said. "I think that is one of our greatest assets here."

I think that attitude is something every community should have no matter what size they are. People have to work together in order to improve the world around them. They have to be able to overlook ethnic and religious differences or even regional differences in order to have progress.

No man is an island, the song goes. And something can be accomplished without the aid of others.

The Beaver Islanders have learned this and their experience can help us all.

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Poor old Jimmy Carter is catching heck nowadays from all quarters: Blacks, city dwellers, country folk, Republicans, Democrats, whites, the unemployed, the employed, businessmen and the man-on-the-street.

Some say that if he doesn't shape up, he'll be one term president, particularly if inflation gets any worse, or if he allows Seafarer to be buried in the Upper Peninsula, or if he cuts taxes, or if he doesn't cut them enough. The list is endless.

And, of course, I've joined the critics from time to time. For example, I think it is the height of idiocy for Jimmy Carter to sell jet fighters to both the Arabs and the Jews. He could just as easily treat them both equally by not selling war planes to either.

But that is beside the point.

I plan to vote for Jimmy Carter again simply because he is the first U.S. President in living memory who has had the guts to stand on the rooftops of the world and shout "human rights" so often and so loud and so long that someone is bound to listen.

These are some of the ideas that crossed my mind last week as I read United Press International accounts of the trial of Yuri Orlov, the Russian dissident who had the effrontery to criticize the Soviet government. That was his only crime – no bloodied victims, no terrorist bombs, no selling of state secrets to foreign powers.

Orlov was brought to trial in Moscow and charged with "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda" before Judge Valentina Lubentsova. Throughout the trial, which was billed as "open", foreign newsmen were kept cooling their heels in the street and were able to cover the story only in the scantiest detail thanks to daily briefings by Orlov's wife, Irina.

On Wednesday, the court officials apparently felt that Irina was taking notes, because before she left the courthouse she was disrobed by six KGB agents – three men and three women – down to her bra to make sure she had made no written record of the proceedings.

Earlier, Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov and his wife were hustled off to jail in a police van when they tried to enter the courtroom.

When it was all over, Judge Lubentsova found Orlov guilty as charged and sentenced him to seven years in Siberia and five years of exile – all for so-called crimes that wouldn't have gotten past the receptionist's desk in the prosecutor's office in the United States.

At times during the past generation I have nourished hopes that time and progress were slowly civilizing those rascals in the Kremlin. After all, the Russian people are no longer up against the wall from a material standpoint. They apparently are well fed, well dressed and fairly well housed.

To be sure, they don't all drive eight-cylinder gas-guzzlers, but public transportation appears to be more than adequate.

The pinched, grubby look that Russian peasants used to present to the news-reel cameras has all but disappeared.

Furthermore, there are signs that Russian officials are willing to go half way with the western world in matters of international trade, disarmament and the sharing of scientific information.

But the Orlov trial has laid all of my optimism to rest. It was a dumb mistake to bring Orlov to trial. It was an even dumber misteke to find him guilty.

Poor old Jimmy Carter still has his work cut out for him.

Erma Bombeck

Christopher Andersen has just written a book advancing a theory I've always believed – your name can make you a winner or a loser.

It's true. I never knew a "Ginger" who wasn't born with pompom hands, a "Ruth" who didn't iron tennis shoe tongues, or an "Elvira" who didn't smile without a piece of spinach wrapped around her front tooth.

Sure enough, in Andersen's book, "The Name Game," Ginger means "cute," Ruth means "earth mother" and Elvira translates to "drab and slow."

Most people hate their names. They're always pronouncing them, spelling them, explaining them, defending them, or changing them. When you think of it, it makes good sense. Can you imagine a man tall in the saddle with a patch over one eye holding reins in his teeth and guns blazing from both hands by the name of Marion Morrison? Which is probably why Marion Morrison became John (trustworthy, very manly) Wayne.

And there has to be something catchier than Salvatore Bono and Cherilyn La Piere who opted for Sonny (athletic) and Cher (a legendary one-word name).

I always felt Erma was a fat name and rated in popularity right under Popeye and Iodine. It probably shaped my destiny because with a name like Erma, you have to laugh first and loudest. Given a choice, I would have preferred to be named Astrid (Luscious). But I didn't have the thighs for it - not even at birth.

How different things might have been if I had been named Astrid. I would never have dated Ellis (lackluster), Melvin (wilted), Rollo (mama's boy) or Lou (yawn).

I would have hung out with Bart (very macho!), Kent (a big winner) and Hank (virile and active)

I would never have been intimidated by everyone else in my neighborhood with a nickname. Names like Wheezie, Bunny, Ducky, Happy and all those other cute dwarf's names. They could have called me ... surely they would have thought of some thing better than what I got – "The Mound."

It was with some reluctance that I turned to find what connotation my name really had in Andersen's book. On page 151, there is was: Erma: sexy, but listless.

I'm not sure, but I think one cancels out the other.

10 MILL. PIE
HOW BIG OF A SLICE DO YOU WANT ?

City budget deserves review before accepted, rejected

Charlevoix residents should take a long hard look at the newly adopted city budget and increase in city millage before condemning or accepting the proposal.

At the last Charlevoix Common Council meeting, the mayor and council approved a millage increase for the operation of the city that doubled the millage from 5 to 10 mills or added $165,000 to the general fund budget. The overall millage was increased from 7 to 12 mills.

No matter how you slice it, that millage increase means higher taxes for city residents. And to a group of people that is still recoiling from recent notices of increased valuation ranging from 18 to 50 percent, the increase is a hard thing to swallow.

However, there are several things city residents should consider before they react to the proposal.

First of all, under the newly adopted charter common council will not be able to transfer any more money from the utility funds to the general fund within one year from the charter adoption date.

In the past in Charlevoix and many Northern Michigan cities, utility funds have been the goose that laid the golden egg and supported the city, not taxes. But this will no longer be true in Charlevoix under the new charter and it shouldn't be according to Mayor Sam Supernaw.

Prior to his election, Supernaw campaigned vigorously against raising utility rates and not taxes. He pointed out that taxes are deductible on income tax returns while utility bills are not. Also all senior citizen rebates center around the tax structure not utility bills.

Secondly, citizens should take a look at what the additional tax revenue is going to be used for. Mayor Supernaw said 2 mills of the 5 mill increase will be used to fund improvements to the streets.

The condition of city streets has been a bone of contention among residents for a long time. Although common councils have allocated money to street maintenance and repair each year, many times the repair has not been completed. And with rising costs the money doesn't cover as much repair as it used to.

In order to catch up on the repairs, money is needed and that money must come through taxes.

There are many other city services that people expect and which they must also pay for. There is police and fire protection, sewage treatment plant operation, recreation, and maintenance of parks and beaches. All of these things must be paid for through taxes.

If people are willing to do without these things, then taxes could probably be lowered. But if city residents want these services, they will have to pay for them.

So take a good hard look at the budget. If you see areas that you think are unnecessary protest to the mayor and your alderman.

But if you want all of the services included in the budget, then be prepared to pay for them. Only tax dollars can fund the projects.

Belated tears for a bride

The manager of the country club wanted to serve the food, but he couldn't. The bride and groom hadn't arrived yet, and it was their reception. They were an hour late. The father of the bride wasn't surprised.

A few hours earlier, the bride had gone to the beauty shop to get her hair combed. She took along her wedding veil so her hair could be arranged perfectly for the most important event of her life.

The father of the bride was always depending upon the black Ace comb in his hip pocket. It cost 5 cents in 1952 and has served him well through several weddings, including his own, and 2 White House visits. He has become so deft at whipping the comb out of his pocket, through his hair and back into the pocket, that people standing next to him don't realize they've just seen a man keeping an appointment with his hairdresser.

They think he snapped off a military salute and they often look around for a Flag Day parade.

But the father wasn't upset by his daughter's extreme concern for the cosmetics of life. He has been a father of daughters for many years, and he has 4 sisters. He remembers when his wife protected her weekly beauty appointment by buying a second wig to be attached to the drier when she had to be out of town. During the bouffant days, he once picked up the wig at the beauty salon and took it to a movie. He didn't realize he had a date with a coiffure until he noticed it wasn't eating popcorn.

So the father realizes fully that some less fortunate people made more than an Ace comb to make them beautiful. He didn't make any nasty remarks when his daughter - call her Ferd - said she had to drive downtown to get her hair combed. But he couldn't remain silent when she returned.

While her mother was agreeing that the daughter's hair was just right, and shouldn't be touched until after the wedding, the father made an interesting obligation.

"You are wearing a turtleneck sweater," he said to the bride, revealing why you call her Fere.

This caused much moaning and other types of unhappy exclaiming. How could she be so dumb? The father noted that if turtles had much fatter necks, she could pull the sweater down over her hips. He said this as he was leaving the room swiftly, and offering the loan of his Ace comb.

The father never asked, but he suspected the sweater was ultimately cut off in emergency surgery. Whatever, the bride was beautiful, and when the father had to give her away, he didn't want to.

After the ceremony, the plan was for the wedding party to motorcade through town in decorated cars, blowing horns. The bride and groom were to drive in the father's Oldsmobile with the best man at the wheel. The best man is also the bride's brother. Call him Nerd. Please.

The father and mother of the bride skipped the honking. They went on to the reception in another car. He had one set of keys to the Olds in his pocket. She had the other set in her purse. Each of them thought Nerd had asked the other for the keys.

And that's why the brice and groom were more than an hour late for their own reception. Nerd was the delivery man. The father of the bride wasn't surprised.

Many hours later, the party was over. The newlyweds had retreated to their new home several miles outside of town. The father of the bride was sitting in his kitchen, listening to the thunder of Alka Selzer dissintegrating. There was a knock at the door.

It was the bride and groom. They were locked out of their new home. Ferd had left the keys in her old home. The father of the bride wasn't surprised.

The next afternoon he accidentally read a note his daughter had left behind for his son. "Have fun without me," she told her brother, "but don't disown me. Ferd and Nerd are a set."

And that's when the father of the bride cried for the first time since the engagement was announced.

County to begin testing sirens, warning devices on monthly basis

Charlevoix County will begin a program of testing its civil defense sirens in June.

Alice Tunison, emergency services director, said sirens and other warning devices throughout the county will be blown at 2 p.m. on the first Saturday of the month beginning in June.

Mrs. Tunison said there had been many requests from people throughout the county for the test because they weren't sure what the warning signal sounded like. She approached the Charlevoix County Boad of Commissioners with the idea and they agreed to give it a try.

The signals are used to warn people to take cover. The sirens will only be sounded in the case of severe weather or military attack.

The warning signal is a three to five minute wavering tone on a siren or a series of short blasts on horns, whistles or other warning devices. When people hear the signal they should take immediate cover and they should tune into a local radio station to get more information about the situation, Mrs. Tunison said.

Mrs. Tunison advised people hearing the sirens at any other time than at 2 p.m. on the first Saturday of the month to take immediate precautions.

Ed Beutner adds comments about new state park here

Dear Editor:

Various points of view were expressed during a recent public hearing. Should Fisherman's Island State Park be established, or should the area remain as it is with minimal controls on its use? Population pressures are bound to bring changes in either case. While we look ahead and wonder about the judgement of future generations, it may be of interest to look back.

In 1838, Douglass Houghton, Michigan's first State Geologist, made a reconnaissance voyage by sailboat which took him from Detroit to the Straits of Mackinac and down along the Little Traverse Bay region in Lake Michigan. He examined rock exposures along the shore, including limestone beds north of Norwood. He noted irregular layers of chert (also called "flint") which he called "hornstone". His observations are recorded in his Second Annual Report to the Legislature in 1839. This is undoubtedly the first published report on the geology of this region.

The outcroppings were called "rediscovered" by archeologists who were studying prehistoric Indian sites. They deduced that the Norwood chert was the raw material from which early Indians fashioned projectile points, and that blocks of the chert as well as finished implements were transported by them to points south as far as the mouth of the Grand River and north to the Straits of Mackinac and the northeastern coast of Lake Huron. These rocks may be seen today as they appeared to prehistoric Indians. Their spirits are probably perplexed over the squabble about how the land shall be used for the white man's pleasure.

Teacher Feature

...Barbara Christensen

Barbara Christensen wears two teaching caps at the Charlevoix Elementary School.

She teaches third grade language arts as well as the program for the academically talented.

Language arts, for the uninitiated, are writing, reading, spelling, English, speaking – all skills that have to do with communication.

"We try to make learning an enjoyable experience," Miss Christensen says. "We use basic texts and library books, and I read to them, poetry and other things. As long as they're interested in reading, I'm happy, whether it be comic books or science."

Miss Christensen is a great believer in creative writing. "I believe in self expression, putting inner feelings on paper," she explains. "Adults have so many hang-ups. Kids shouldn't have."

And this all amounts to her goal in teaching third graders: "I try to develop a little better self-concept in the kids. If they don't have that, they won't do well in anything. They must understand their sense of worth in the whole spectrum of what's happening."

Miss Christensen's academically talented students range from first through fifth grade. They are defined as "those whose abilities, talents, and potential for accomplishment are so outstanding that they require special provisions to meet their educational needs. This is approximately two to three percent of a total school population."

"This has been a neglected population," Miss Christensen points out. "We have always helped the lower groups with remedial reading programs and so forth, but there has been nothing for the academically talented."

The program for academically talented students is really an enrichment program. The students do things and learn things that there isn't time for in the regular classroom.

"It helps them develop an acceptance of other people. Because of some of their abilities, they are often separated from groups. Also, we must remember that although they are gifted, they are children, number one, and do things typical of their ages," Miss Christensen explains.

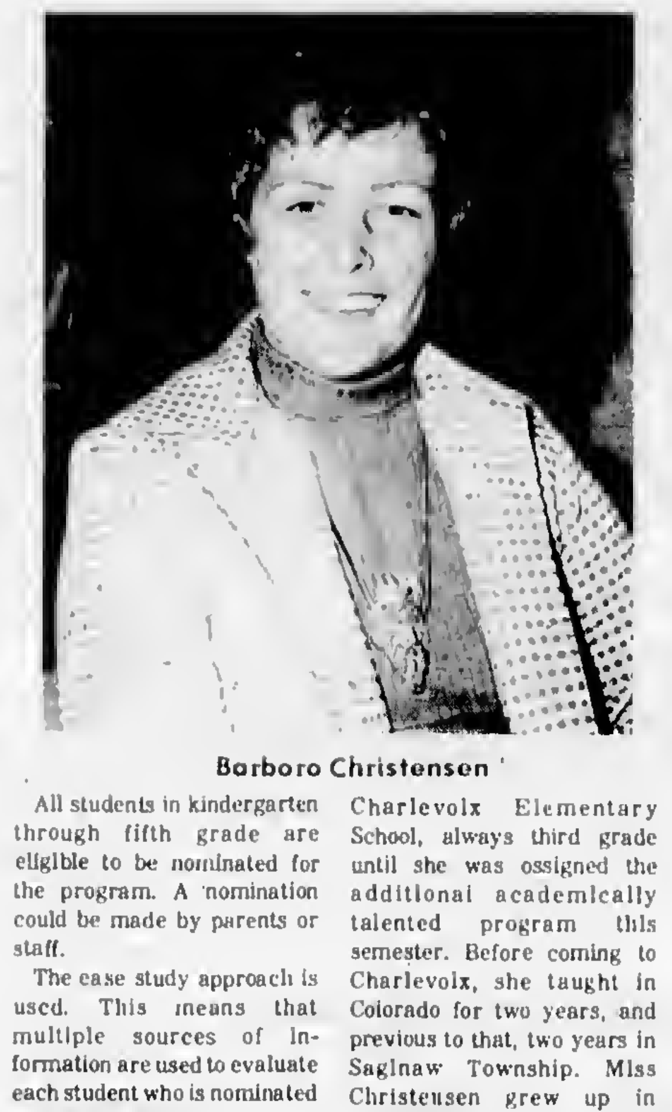
Last week, the class was studying people with handicaps. "We were talking about blindness," the teacher recalls, "and asked the students if there were any advantages to being blind.

"One of them replied, 'Yes, you aren't looking at people for outward appearances, but are getting to know them from within.' "

Another purpose of the academically talented program is to give the students an opportunity to inter-act with others who are talented. "Many gifted kids become underachievers. They need guidance and motivation. In fact, one survey showed that one out of 11 real talented kids, two were high school drop-outs," Miss Christensen reports.

What happens to these children when they leave the elementary school? Miss Christensen says that the middle school hopes to have a academically gifted program next year. "We also hope that the high school will recognize academic excellence."

There are three steps in screening elementary school students for the academically talented program:



Barbara Christensen

All students in kindergarten through fifth grade are eligible to be nominated for the program. A nomination could be made by parents or staff.

The case study approach is used. This means that multiple sources of information are used to evaluate each student who is nominated for the program.

A screening committee, made up of three teachers, reviews each case and makes the final decision of who will participate in the program.

This is Miss Christensen's ninth year of teaching in the Charlevoix Elementary School, always third grade until she was assigned the additional academically talented program this semester. Before coming to Charlevoix, she taught in Colorado for two years, and previous to that, two years in Saginaw Township. Miss Christensen grew up in Midland, where she graduated from high school, and attended Central Michigan University, where she majored in elementary education and minored in English, art, and physical education.

All sports camp slated for summer in Charlevoix

A special "All Sports Camp" will be offered to Charlevoix area youth this summer through the Youth Activities Program.

Gary Hice, youth coordinator, said the camp will consist of seven separate week-long sessions each dealing with a different sport taught by the various coaches from the Charlevoix School District.

Students between the ages of 10 and 15 are eligible for the camp and may attend as many sessions as they would like. A $15 fee will cover the instruction and T-shirt and instruction manual that will be given to each camper.

Hice said he got the idea for the program from a Congressional report on team sports.

"The report really knocked team sports," Hice said. "It claimed that studies show that student are not learning how to avoid injuries and they are not learning the fundamentals of sports through teams.

"It was my hope that these summer camps would remedy that problem by giving kids a chance to learn the basics and how to prevent injury. Also it will give them something to do for the summer."

In addition to learning the basic skills needed for the various sports, the camps will also give the students a chance to learn the philosophies, style and techniques of their future coaches, Hice pointed out.

The first session of the camp will open June 12 with Mary Gengle running a volleyball clinic. The next clinic, beginning June 19, will feature Pete Spieles teaching baseball skills.

The week of June 26, Lenny Fuller will teach soccer skills and the week of July 10, Toni Felter will teach girls basketball skills.

Beginning July 24, Hal Evans will hold a clinic on football skills and beginning July 31, Norm Probert will hold a wrestling clinic.

For more information about the camp, contact Gary Hice at 547-4471 or 526-6388.

Service organizations donate uniforms to Special Olympics group

Loving and caring are what life is all about.

Because the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club, the Petoskey Club of the Telephone Pioneers of America and others care, Charlevoix County's 10 entries in the Special Oympics at Mt. Pleasant next month will be wearing bright blue jogging suits with red and white trim when they appear on the field at Central Michigan University.

The Telephone Pioneers have assisted with the Special Olympics for several years, supplying personnel to work at the Olympics and underwriting the cost of the entry fee which this year is $35 an entry. At a recent meeting of the Kiwanis Club when two young men from Bergmann Center appeared to thank the club for the uniforms Mrs. Clarence Rabach of the Wolverine (state) Chapter of Telephone Pioneers said "When we saw participants appearing in sharp uniforms at the Olympics we decided our people had to have something equally good looking to identify them. When we returned home we started looking for an "angel", someone who would help with the cost of the uniforms.

The "angel" turned out to be the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club who devote their efforts to helping the youth of the community. The Petoskey Club joined in to purchase another 10 uniforms so that when the boys and girls from the area march in the parade that opens the Olympics and appear on the field during competiton they can be proud they represent us. They are proud that they have qualified in regional competition to attend the Olympics. These uniforms will give them that extra confidence any athlete needs to be a winner".

Ken Collins and Dale Martin of Bergmann Center attended the meeting to thank the Kiwanians for the uniforms. Other participants are from the Ironton Trainable School.

DALE MARTIN and Ken Collins (second and third from the left) attended a recent meeting of the Charlevoix Kiwanis Club to thank the members for the new jogging uniforms they will be wearing to the Special Olympics at Mt. Pleasant.

Graduates two from program

Charlevoix jail promotes education

"It feels good. I'm really proud of it."

Those words describe the feeling of a high school student upon graduation. Like most high school seniors, Rich Uhrick is proud of his accomplishment. But Uhrick got his degree the hard way.

The 18-year-old completed studies for his diploma while serving a 60-day sentence in the Charlevoix County jail for breaking and entering. He studied intensively for six weeks and then completed the graduate equivalency diploma (GED) test, thus earning his diploma the day before he was released.

"When I first started taking the test (which is a two-day exam and can last up to 10 hours), I didn't think I would pass," Uhrick recalled. "But as I went along it came back to me and then it all seemed pretty easy to me."

Uhrick's face beamed with pride over his accomplishment. He was so excited he seemed to float when he walked. He looked like he had the world by the tail.

The former inmate said he decided to take advantage of the tutoring he could get at the jail through the Corrections Employment Service because of his father.

"My dad told me no matter what else I did to get my diploma," the young man explained. "He really wanted me to get it.

"I wanted to work on it and the program was here so I did.

"My dad couldn't believe it when I told him I had gotten my diploma. I had to show him the scores."

Uhrick is the second prisoner to pass the GED test and earn a diploma since the educational program was started in the jail almost a year ago. A third inmate took the test and missed passing by one point, Sheriff Lasater said. He will be given a chance to restudy the area he is weak in and to retake the test.

"The GED program is part of an on-going rehabilitation program at the jail," Sheriff Lasater said. "It seemed like a means of getting away from the revolving door concept. It is a way to help prisoners make it when they get out instead of getting them in jail again as repeat offenders."

Lasater said in surveying the jail population it appeared that 98 percent of the people in jail did not have high school diplomas and many of them did not have jobs at the time they became involved in crime.

"There seemed to be a correlation between the lack of a degree, no job and crime," Sheriff Lasater said. "So we decided to start the classes thinking it would make the prisoners a little more able to get a job when they got out."

Lasater said once a week an educational counselor from the Corrections Employment Service comes to the jail to tutor the prisoners. When they are ready to take the GED exam it is administered through the Charlevoix Public Schools by Roy Fortin, community schools director.

The sheriff said usually the inmates serving between 90 days and a year got involved in the program. And it had been very well accepted by the prisoners.

"Many of the prisoners who have never had success at anything before in their lives are now having success," the sheriff said. "And they are very conscientious about their studies.

"Every time I have made a cell check, most of the prisoners in the program are studying. And sometimes trustees, who we have doing maintenance around the jail, will ask to be sent back to their cells when they finish with a job so that they can study instead of asking for another job.

"That's pretty unusual."

Why are the inmates so conscientious?

"Everybody has given up on these guys," Holly Girardin, education counselor who tutors the prisoners for an hour each week, explained. "So to have somebody care about them, and they know we do, is something they respond to.

"But they have to want to come to the program. They aren't forced into it and they aren't rewarded for coming. If they aren't motivated I'll terminate them from the program and they know that, too."

In addition to working toward a high school diploma, the prisoners are also taught employment skills such as how to apply for a job, how to act in an interview and how to fill out applications. They are also taught life skills such as how to balance a checkbook and how to take out a mortgage.

The employment service also helps the inmates find jobs once they have left jail. The prisoners can also continue to work on their high school degree once they have left jail, too. Ms. Giarardin has many men coming back for tutoring even though they are no longer inmates.

Does the education help the inmate get a job? Charlevoix County Circuit Court probation officer Ken Mulka thinks it does.

"The job market is pretty tight right now, so any little edge will help," Mulka said. "But the program is also good because it gives them confidence as it keeps them busy while they are in jail."

And that's the key according to Ms. Girardin.

"Through this program they have a chance to turn a negative into a positive," she pointed out. "They are in jail, they know they've blown it and this gives them a chance to make the best of it."

HOLLY GIRARDIN, education counselor, discusses the Graduate Equivalency Diploma (GED) program with a recent graduate Rich Uhrick. Uhrick completed the course which gave him a high school diploma while serving a sentence at the Charlevoix County jail.

Ironton Ferry to begin running in mid-June, commissioner says

The Ironton Ferry, which spent the winter in Traverse City getting its five-year overhaul and a new engine to replace the one that served for 42 years, should be back in operation the first part of June, according to County Commissioner Ralph Harmon.

This is later than usual for the ferry to start its trips across the South Arm of Lake Charlevoix, but the installation of the new engine has caused some problems, including the failure of the manufacturer to include engine clutches in the shipment.

The Charlevoix County Board of Commission operates the ferry for the County Board of Commissioners.

Nostalgia hits K-5 school

Planning commission begins active role in city zoning

The new Charlevoix Planning Commission has begun to take an active role in the planning and zoning of the city.

Under the direction of recently elected chairman David Strawbridge, the group of seven city residents has met four times during the last month to get organized and to act on planning and zoning matters.

The new planning commission was established following the adoption of a new zoning ordinance by the Charlevoix Common Council in March. Former Mayor Edward Hansen made the appointments to the commission in the middle of April.

Prior to the establishment of the planning commission, the mayor and the common council were responsible for handling all planning and zoning requests.

Serving on the planning commission in addition to Dr. Strawbridge are: Thomas Duke and George Baldwin for one-year terms; Ken Staley and Clement Olach for two-year terms; and Barbara Fels and June Cross for three-year terms. Strawbridge is also serving a three-year term.

The planning commission meets at 7 p.m. every other Monday in the Community Room of the Charlevoix City Hall. The commission meets on the same night as the common council's committee of the whole. The last planning commission meeting was May 22.

"I think we have an enthusiastic, hard working group of people," Strawbridge said of the planning commission. "And we've accomplished quite a bit so far."

Since its appointment a month ago, the planning commission has developed forms for applications for zoning changes, variance requests and site plan reviews, as well as acted on lot split requests and tried to develop some long-range goals.

Strawbridge attributed the planning commission's rapid progress to the experience of member Tom Duke who has served on other planning commissions and was able to help the group become organized more quickly than it might have.

"As far as the planning commission's structure is concerned, we are trying to as much as is possible to take the leg work of zoning and planning decisions away from common council," Strawbridge said. "However, we are only a recommending body and after we have studied an issue we make our recommendations to the council which has the final say in the matter."

Strawbirdge said the group had also discussed its feelings about planning and zoning and established some priorities.

"We have all agreed that we place high priority on trying to keep Charlevoix the Beautiful, Charlevoix," the planning commission chairman explained.

And what that means to the new planning commission members is minimizing the construction and build up of Round Lake, keeping Petoskey Avenue residential and working on the parking and docking problems in the city.

"We hope to be involved in making some recommendations on parking as to where and what should be constructed," Strawbridge said. "And we would also like to see some maintenance and possibly expansion of the city docks."

Strawbridge said the planning commission represented a cross section of the community and many varying thoughts on planning and zoning. However, the group was in agreement on these issues.

Strawbridge said the public was invited and welcome to the commissions meetings.

Charlevoix woods alive with signs of spring

By SARA GAY DAMMANN

Spring – coming alive, awakening, rebirth – a plethora of cliches.

And there's truth in them all.

The melting snows, the gradually more tepid rains, and the temperature which with each rush to warmth and retreat to cold ends in new highs, are reflected in grand and subtle changes in the woods and fields around us.

The subtle changes, the delicate beginnings of spring seen in the wood's earliest blossoms require a slower gait, a closer look in order to enjoy them to the fullest.

Pete Spieles, Charlevoix High School biology teacher, is a man whose love for his natural world goes beyond his professional training. Recently he treated some observers to special insights about spring in the woods and the annual reawakening.

His tour of the woods was more involved than one that most casual walkers would take, but still it was a way of seeing nature that does not belong to biologists alone.

Spieles reached out to a young wild cherry tree, near the beginning of the walking path at Bell's Bay. "That's a gall," he indicated an odd-shaped black growth wrapped around the stem in several places. "It's a good way to identify wild cherry," he smiled.

The young tree's buds were just beginning to swell.

Looking through the woods, at the sweep of birch, beech, small pines, maples and hemlock, Spieles continued.

"This is a near-climax forest. Eventually the birch will be pushed out by hardwoods more tolerant to shade."

The white birches reflected the early evening light. Most of the birches were older trees. Young birch were not apparent.

The tall man scuffed the sandy soil near the trail's beginning. "This isn't the best soil for a hardwood forest. It takes hundreds of years to create a loam soil from this."

Looking at a trail bike track which had torn up the path, destroying small growth in its edges, and gazing at a steady dribble of beer cans, Spieles grimaced. "This is why we need controls."

Tips of ferns, "fiddle headed," stood taller than most of the wood's floor growth.

"All young ferns are fiddle-headed," Spieles explained. "There is no one fiddleheaded fern."

Sandy Spieles picked one near its top. "They really don't have much taste, but they are good boiled and served with vinegar and salt and pepper."

Later Sandy picked a young dandelion green, "Only use the top parts of young dandelions. The milky part of the stem is bitter. These greens give a salad a nice bite."

Single oval shaped green leaves, thumb-sized, were everywhere on the forest floor.

"Wild Lily of the Valley," Pete explained. "You won't find flowers on those. The singles leafed ones are sterile."

By the beginning of June the trees' leaves will be out and the delicate stalks of lower growth will have produced an array of tiny flowers and berries.

Spieles reached toward a taller shrub, already in flower.

"Juneberries flower first. By June the berry will be red, purple later. It's good eating."

The flowers are white and five-petaled. The leaves are oval and toothed. The Juneberry bush stood taller than most of the growth then in blossom.

"Down here is some Partridgeberry," Spieles called, untangling a long vine, with rounded flat leaves. "It's flowers will be tiny and white at the end of the vine."

Rising he pulled a balsam fir branch down for closer inspection, "This is the Christmas Tree, know why? Look, each branch forms a cross." Spieles poked at a bump on a balsam's trunk. It burst. Sap ran down the trunk. "That's a pitch blister. Smell it?"

The aroma was unmistakeable, evoking memories of Christmas and pine forests.

Spieles was constantly on the move, one minute down on his knees sorting out a tangle of growth, the next reaching up at higher growth.

"Down here," he looked up over his shoulder, "Here's Pipsissawa, that's an Indian name." A dark shiny green leafed plant grew straight up some two or three inches. Its long toothed leaves grew in layered circles from the stem. By June its white flowers, whose buds are barely discernible now, will stand at the top of a taller stalk.

"You can tell this is an evergreen by its shiny leaves," Spieles revealed.

Nearby, ready to flower were Bearberries, also an evergreen, but whose leaves are paddle-shaped.

Wild raspberry vines were scattered down the path.

We walked toward a stand of poplars. "They're a fast growing tree, which are easily blown down. Under proper management that stand would be cut and suckers would grow making great deer and rabbit forage," Spieles observed.

"What's this smell," he asked, crushing a small carrot-top-like leaf between his fingers.

"Sort of sage like? Earthy?" was a tentative answer.

He crushed another similar looking bunch of greens.

"That's grassier smelling," the observer offered.

"Notice the carrot-like smell in the second one. The first is Yarrow, the second is wild carrot or Queen Anne's Lace."

The differences in smell were the best clue; but a careful look showed the Yarrow's greenery to be much thicker, closer to its stem, than the fingery leaves of wild carrot.

"Hold this," he handed a long stem of mint to his audience. "If you roll a mint stem in your fingers you'll feel it has four distinct sides," he rolled the stem in his fingers, "Bump, bump, bump, bump," he smiled wryly.

We came to the edge of McGeach Creek, rampaging, swollen over its banks, toward Lake Michigan. In a quite eddy Marsh Marigolds' large yellow blossoms were in full bloom, a shock of color against the water.

Spieles pulled a handful of mosses up from the bank's edge.

"Have you ever heard of alternation of generation?" the teacher parted some mosses to look closely at the long flat liverwort leaf that clung to the mossy earth. He explained that the plant's sex life has two distinct stages– the gametophyte, during which two leaves of opposite sex are necessary for fertilization, producing the sporophyte stage, which is the seed bearing stage.

Sandy called from upstream, "Look at this. Wild Lily of the Valley in bloom."

"Yes," replied Pete as he looked at his wife's find, "And you'll see that they're all double leafed."

Nearby a small toad hopped toward the creek where water striders were flitting across a calm backwater's surface.

The roots of yellow birch entangled with the roots of a cedar in the middle of the creek's path, forming a small waterfall. It wasn't hard to conjure images of brook trout in the shadows.

"You know, Indians had a lot of reverence for birch and cedar. They are 'Grandfather Birch' and 'Grandmother Cedar.' There is so much you can do with these two," Spieles observed.

"Birch bark and cedar chips, for instance, will always start a fire, no matter how wet it is. I know, I've done it many times.

"My name is German, but my grandmother was French-Indian, my great grandmother was Ojibway," he smiled.

"People used strips of cedar bark for thread. And the wood under the cedar's bark is edible."

He led his friends back down the path. "How did we ever miss this honey suckle," he stopped to examine the shrub's yellow flowers.

He stooped to point out the trailing vine of clubmoss and then stood to inspect a young beech tree whose bark had been stripped by a porcupine – the teeth marks creating a beautifully fatal pattern.

If the sun set hasn't brought a dramatic temperature drop Pete Spieles clearly could have continued for hours.

"Once you learn what's in the woods, you have much more fun," he laughed.

The best substitute for a live Pete Spieles is Roger Tory Peterson's "A Field Guide to Wildflowers."

Spieles' special way of hearing and seeing has to be nurtured.

Ostling announces candidacy

Ralph Ostling, who represents the Charlevoix area in the State Legislature, has announced that he will seek a fourth term in the House.

"I have decided to seek re-election for many reasons. First, I do enjoy the opportunity the citizens of the 103rd district have given me to represent their interests in Lansing.

"I also believe that we must elect more people who will work to hold down the escalation of government programs. We will stop governmental regulation and programs which are paid for by our tax dollars only when we stop demanding so much from government," Ostling said.

"At the same time, I believe we need people in the legislature who will attempt to hold the line on spending and fight against unnecessary tax increases. I consider myself that kind of person. I believe we must have more fiscal conservatives in this legislature before the big spenders force the taxpayers into bankruptcy or revolt," he added.

During the current term, Representative Ostling is serving as vice-chairman of the House Committee on Conservation, Environment, and Recreation. He is also a member of the committees on Corrections, Liquor Control and Corporations and Finance.

Ostling says issues that demand attention in the immediate future include property tax reform, creation of more jobs and a better business climate, and reform of the legislative process.

"I would hope that this legislature will present a fair and meaningful proposal to the voters on property tax reform. In the past, the public has been asked to consider proposals that were garbled with other issues such as the graduated income tax. I hope we can offer them something that is understandable and equitable. I will work for that kind of proposal," Ostling said.

"I would also like to see some concrete reform of our legislative process. We don't need to be meeting eight or nine months a year in an effort to create the image of a full time legislature. We can be full time by being in our districts and not constantly legislating in Lansing. I think we should be able to get our work done in five or six months and then get back to the districts where the people can have easier access to us," Ostling said.

"We don't need 33 committees. We can set a schedule and deadlines for the passage of budget bills. We can and should have the school aid budget established prior to teach contract negotiations so that teachers and administrators alike know just where they stand financially. We can cut back on legislative traveling. All of these things will benefit the taxpayer," he said.

Ostling was a school teacher for 20 years and served as clerk of Gerrish Township in Roscommon County for 17 years. He is a graduate of Gerrish-Higgins High School and Central Michigan University. He served in the U.S. Navy in World War II and is a member of the Veterans of Foreign Wars and AmVets. He is married to the former Thelma Dean and they have one son, Jurt. Ostling is a member of the Messiah Lutheran Church.

Weight program designed to prevent athletic injuries

KIP CINNAMON works on his squats with the free weights to develop his quadraceps in the upper leg. Charlevoix High School athletas have the use of weight training machines and free weights to help develop their strength.

Charlevoix athletes should be stronger and less prone to injury in the coming years.

The high school weight room has been outfitted with a set of five new Nautilus weight machines designed to specifically exercise crucial muscle areas. The machines exercise leg muscles, upper body muscles, triceps, biceps, hip and back and neck muscles.

The weight machines are used in conjunction with the free weights that were purchased for the weight program last year with funds donated by the community to help athletes fully develop their muscles.

The purpose of the weight program is to help high school athletes condition their muscles so that they will be less prone to injury, Coach Plus Presnell explained. Conditioning and strengthening muscles also helps the athlete recover from injuries more quickly in addition to making the student a better athlete.

The machines were purchased through funds donated by the Charlevoix Sports Boosters, members of the community and through the sale of the old Universal machine. Parents and friends of Doug Smith also donated in his memory funds for the purchase of one machine.

The weight room is also being opened up to members of the community who are interested in weight training, Presnell said. Anyone who is interested in learning what the weight program can do for them should attend a special class at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the high school.

For more information contact Presnell at 547-4513 or 547-6491

Rayders capture regional title during Class C-D tennis match

It's off to the Class C-D state finals for the entire Charlevoix Rayder Tennis team. The Rayders qualified the maximum number of players it could for the finals during the regional competition this weekend in Traverse City.

The Rayders, coached by Chuck Wright, captured 25 out of 28 possible points in the regional meet. The team's closest rival, Maple City-Glen Lake, came in second with 19 points.

This is the second time in five years that Charlevoix has won a regional title. The last time was 1975. Many individual players have advanced to state competition since then although the team has not won a regional title.

Coach Wright said his team came through the regional meet the hard way. The players drew several byes for the first round and then were paired with opponents they had met and lost to during the regular season.

"The fact that we had to play four, three-set matches will give you an idea of the competition we were facing," Wright explained.

The entire team had qualified for the state meet after the first day of regional tournament action with a total of 21 points. The Rayders were tied for the regional title at that point.

In the opening round of play, Erik Lundteigen and Mark Lignell, No. 1 and No. 2 singles players and the No. 1 doubles team of Dave Morgridge and Tom McNamara met opponents they had split matches with earlier in the season.

Lundteigen defeated Tom Coates of Elk Rapids 6-2, 6-2 after losing to him earlier; Lignell defeated Marty Merillot of Elk Rapids 6-4, 1-6 and 6-4 after splitting with him during regular play and the doubles team of Morgridge and McNamara defeated two doubles teams they had split with earlier, Jerry Carpenter and John Strehl of East Jordan by scores of 6-3, 7-5 and Randy Haines and Mark Rubini of Leelanau 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

On the finals on Saturday, with 21 points to their credit, the Rayders players took a decisive lead to capture the title.

Lundteigen defeated Doug Roberts of Glen Lake 7-5, 2-6, 6-3. Roberts had defeated Lundteigen in the finals last year and had him down 5-2 before Lundteigen came back to win.

Lignell came through with a 7-6, 7-5 win over Joe Gillen of Glenn Lake while Dave Taylor lost to Glen Lake's Al Leinbach 6-3, 6-0 and Denny Morgridge to John Miller of Glen Lake 7-5, 7-5.

In the finals in the doubles Dave Morgridge and McNamara lost to Sutherland and Weisen of Leelanau 6-0, 6-2 but Jeff Cockfield and John Grooters dumped Duane Carpenter and Denny Nessel of East Jordan 6-4, 6-2 and Geoff Nelson and Ed Engstrom won over Bob Marinos and Joe Krause of Leelanau 6-2, 7-6.

COACH CHUCK WRIGHT and members of the 1978 Rayder tennis team celebrate the winning of the regional tennis crown during an intermission at the band concert Sunday in East Park. The Rayder netters qualified the entire team for the state match.

It was a fourth place finish for the Charlevoix Rayders in the Michigan Huron Shores Conference meet last week.

The Rayders captured three first places in the 16 events with Neil Dziedzic holding down two first place finishes and Tom Jones taking the third.

Dziedzic had a first in the high jump with a jump of 6 feet 1 inch and a first in the 100-yard dash with a time of 10.75 seconds. Jones put the shot 51 feet 1 inch to take the conference.

The Charlevoix Rayders lost to Elk Rapids 7-1 during a pre-district game Saturday.

Spieles said Elk Rapids is favored to win the district title.

RESOLUTION

Commissioner Graham offered the following resolution and moved its adoption, seconded by Commissioner Korthase.

WHEREAS, a petition was received by the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County, Michigan asking for the absolute abandonment and discontinuance of a portion of the Charlevoix County Highway known as Lake Shore Drive and all of the Charlevoix County Highway known as Branch Road, both situate and being in the townships of Norwood and Charlevoix, and being described as follows, to wit:

All that part of the Charlevoix County Road known as Lake Shore Drive, having a center line described as: Beginning at a point on the line common to Sections 27 and 34, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, just to the west of the common corner of Sections 27, 34, 28 & 35, T33N, R9W; thence, northerly across Sections 27, 23 and 14, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, to a point of ending on the line common to Sections 14 and 11, T33N, R9W, near the north-south ¼ line of said Section 14, T33N, R9W, being in all some 3.1 miles in length.

In addition, all that part of Lake Shore Drive, Charlevoix County having a center line described as: Beginning at a point on the line common to Sections 1 and 12, T33N, R9W, Norwood Township, distant approximately 1,000 feet west of the north-south ¼ line of said Section 12, thence, northerly and easterly across Section 1, T33N, R9W, and Section 6, T33N, R8W, Norwood Township, and across Sections 31 and 32, T34N, R8W, Charlevoix Township to a point ending at the Charlevoix County Road known as Bell's Bay Road, being in all some 3.6 miles in length.

In addition, all of that Charlevoix County Road known as Branch Road, having a center line described as: Beginning at the corner common to Sections 1 and 12, T33N, R9W, and Sections 8 and 7, T33N, R8W; thence, northwest to the intersection of said Lake Shore Drive, being some 0.5 miles in length.

WHEREAS, after full hearing thereon, and this Board being fully advised in the premises, this Board has determined that it is advisable to absolutely abandon and discontinue the said parts of said roads as herein described for the purposes set forth in said Petition and for the best interest of the public.

WHEREAS, Mr. Lester A. Wheeler, a signer of the aforesaid petition who owns property abutting and serviced by the aforesaid Lake Shore Drive has been assured access to his property by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, as evidenced by two letters dated September 25, 1975, and September 30, 1975, addressed to Mr. Wheeler and signed by Mr. O. J. Scherschligt, Chief, Parks Division, Michigan DNR, which letters are attached hereto and made a part hereof;

September 25, 1975

Mr. L.A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

Our District Park Supervisor, James Andrus, informs me that he visited you recently relative to our proposal to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public road. He reports that you are generally supportive of this concept and believe as we do that a managed and controlled park is the answer to much of the misuse of the area's public and private lands.

Road closure petitions require by law the signatures of seven land owners in the county. Preferred are those such as you who reside on or near the road considered for abandonment.

Mr. Andrus reports that you are seeking assurance that you and your family and friends retain continued free access to your property, a very understandable position and one which I have no reservations in honoring. Although we have no immediate plans to charge for park entry, it's possible this may occur someday. Arrangements can be made at that time to accommodate your concerns for free and uninhibited access.

By copy of this letter, I am advising Mr. Andrus of this position asking that he again visit with you. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to notify this office if you have other concerns.

Sincerely,
O.J. Scherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

September 30, 1975

Mr. L. A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

This will acknowledge your September 28, 1975, letter which seeks additional assurances relative to our petition to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public thoroughfare.

I agree to your request for appropriate, free, uninhibited and unimpeded access to the whole of your 400 foot lake frontage. I also agree that such access will not be limited to you, your wife and visitors personally, but will extend to the whole of the property and to and for the use and benefit of such assignees, grantees and successors as may acquire through you.

If all goes well, we expect to operate the campground next spring as a state park. Hopefully, some of the misuse can be reduced by having appropriate park staff on duty. Your cooperation in assisting us is much appreciated.

Sincerely,
O.J. Scherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of County Road Commissioners for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, that the portions of the Charlevoix County Highways known as Lake Shore Drive and Branch Road, as herein described, be abandoned and discontinued as of May 8, 1978, as county roads, and cease to be part of the County road system, and that said Board determines it to be to the best interest of the public that said highways so abandoned and discontinued should be, and the same is hereby absolutely abandoned and discontinued.

That a notice of this determination be given by the Clerk of the Commission to the proper highway authorities and the Charlevoix and Norwood Township officials and be published in the Charlevoix Courier, a newspaper published and circulated in said county, once each week for three consecutive weeks.

That pursuant to the provisions of Act 48 of Public Acts of 1963, as amended, being M.S.A. 9.118, the portions of county roads, as herein described, shall be absolutely abandoned and discontinued as county roads.

Resolution adopted by the following yea and nay vote:
YEAS: Commissioners Korthase and Graham
NAYS: None
ABSTAIN: Commissioner Mousseau

I, the undersigned Deputy County Clerk and Clerk of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the part of the proceedings of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County on the 8th day of May 1978. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 12th day of May A.D. 1978.

Maureen Peltier weds Ron Trumble

Maureen Kay Peltier of Marshall became the bride of Ronald L. Trumble of Jackson May 20 at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Earl F. Peltier of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom's parents are Everett L. Trumble and Mrs. Helen Silveus, both of Jackson.

The double-ring afternoon ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. Dale Magoon before 200 guests. The church was decorated with an altar arrangement of white gladiolus with daisies and baby's breath and a bouquet of white daisies, baby's breath, and yellow roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a gown of all-over Chantilace with a fitted bodice and long fitted sleeves. Chantilace also scalloped the Sabrina neckline. The skirt was a cascade of Chantilace ruffles that swept to the floor in a full cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion was attached to a headpiece of white silk roses and pearls. She carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies, baby's breath, and yellow roses.

Traditional wedding music, as well as John Denver and Beatles selections was played and sung by Marina LaBlance.

Mary J. Lewis of Grass Lake served the bride as maid of honor. Her gown was of mint green dacron organza.

Diana H. Bradley of Jackson and Mrs. Bethany Prime of Buy City, cousin of the bride, were bridesmaids. Their gowns were of light yellow dacron organza. All of the attendants' gowns were fashioned with a yoked bodice, long sleeves, pleated cumberbund, and flounce at hem. They wore matching picture hats trimmed with the same fabric and lace, and with matching ribbon streamers. Their bouquets were cluster trios of white daisies with a whisper of baby's breath.

Christine Golombek of Jackson, niece of the bridegroom, was flower girl. Her street-length dress was of mint green chiffon. She wore a white picture hat with green streamers and carried a white wicker basket of yellow and white daisies and baby's breath.

Richard C. Gray, III of Jackson was best man, and groomsmen were Frederick W. Born, IV of Saugatuck and Robert W. Hipp, Jr. of Jackson, brother of the bridegroom, were groomsmen. The groomsmen also seated the guests.

The reception following the wedding was hosted by the bride's parents at the American Legion Post Home in Charlevoix. It was catered by Betty Tisron of East Jordan. The rehearsal dinner was held at the Weathervane, hosted by the bridegroom's parents.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Peltier wore a long peach chiffon gown, and the bridegroom's mother wore a long sea green chiffon gown.

Following a wedding trip to Florida, the newlyweds will be at home in Marshall. The bride is an energy management consultant with Consumer's Power in Kalamazoo, and her bridegroom is a project administrator with Commonwealth Associates, also in Jackson.

Jail garden planted to help ease budget pinch

Fresh vegetables will soon fill the kitchen at the Charlevoix County jail.

A jail garden has been planted on Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department property to help ease the expense of feeding the prisoners, Sheriff George Lasater said.

Sheriff Lasater said the department has been feeling the pinch of rising food costs in its budget because of the increased number of prisoners it has had to feed this year. The number of meals served at the jail this year has more than doubled, jumping from 2,486 meals served as of May 1, 1977, to 5,334 meals served as of May 1 this year.

"The number of felony warrants issued last year increased 264 percent," Sheriff Lasater explained. "What we're seeing now in increased prisoners and meals is largely the result of increased felony arrests by county police agencies. They've been through the court system and now they're in jail."

Laster said the decision to plant the garden was made after several other cost cutting measures were taken by jail cook, Marge Warner.

Laster said he knew food prices were rising at an incredible rate because of comments his wife had made, but he wasn't aware of how great the increases were until Mrs. Warner began pointing them out.

"Mrs. Warner was constantly bringing to my attention the increase in prices," Sheriff Lasater recalled. "She was concerned with staying within the budget."

The cook had some cost cutting suggestions such as using dry milk instead of whole milk and buying bread locally instead of from a jobber. [illegible] something else needed to be done.

"Prices have gone up every week," Mrs. Warner explained. "Oh, some weeks they may have stayed the same on certain items, but usually there's been an increase.

"We thought by having a garde[illegible] would be able to cut down on our cost, and stay within our budget while still providing good meals."

Sheriff Lasater pointed out that there was plenty of space around the jail for the garden and there were lots of built-in gardeners.

"It's kind of a novel idea for jails in this area," Sheriff Lasater said. "And hopefully it will cut down on expenses."

Lasater said one trustee who is serving a nine-month sentence has been put in charge of the garden and he will be assisted by other prisoners when he needs help. People assigned to the county work program by Judge David Fershee will also help work on the garden.

Mrs. Warner, who grew up on a farm, and Harry Potter, head maintenance man for the county and a former farmer, will supervise the garden.

Potter prepared the garden for planting and supervised the planting of the potatoes, onions, corn, beans, peas and cabbage. He also has loaned some of his tools.

"Most of the tools we already had on hand for chores around here," Sheriff Lasater said. "The rest we will borrow from Potter."

MARGE WARNER, Charlevoix County jail cook; and Harry Potter, head maintenance man for the county; discuss the planting of the jail garden with a prisoner. The jail garden is a cost cutting measure designed to ease the budget pinch caused by rising food costs and jail population.

HOW JUSTIFY EXPENSE

How can the City of Charlevoix justify the expense of having two coppers out wearing the streets out which are already so full of bumps and chuckholes that it jars the teeth in your head? They put over 100,000 miles a year on these cars that taxpayers buy for them. Then they turn around arresting those same taxpayers for going five or ten miles per hour over the speed limit while playing with their expensive newfangled radar toys. Why not sell at least one of those cars from this pompous regime and put an officer out walking the beat?

One good thing that a night patrolman could do is to keep those young, whippersnappers from hanging around various spots in this town. Furthermore, my wife and I used to enjoy going to the Michigan Beach part at night to watch the sunset. Now the noise from hippie-types and their wacky music turned wide open is enough to rattle your bones. Are our mighty cops afraid to lock someone up for loitering?

Signed,
Lost and in search of a new horizon.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The police can only help people who ask for it. If you are bothered by noise at Michigan Beach, you should call the police and ask them to check it out. The city police have been praised by many other members of the law enforcement community and city residents should be proud of the job they are doing.

WHY GARBAGE LAW NOT ENFORCED?

Why don't the Charlevoix City Police enforce the garbage burning ordinance? Petoskey enforces and fines $25 for garbage burning.

PUT GARBAGE CANS OUT!

I would like to make my comment on "Why aren't there any garbage cans in the city parks and beaches". Right now, the city parks and beaches are really showing the toll of garbage. I think it's about time we get some garbage cans out to these places, because there are lots of beer and pop cans setting around and I think it's about time we had something to throw them in. Thank you.

WHY NO CITY MANAGER?

During the last mayoral campaign in the City of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Courier and the now mayor, Sam Supernaw, were very high on the kick of a new city manager. And Mr. Supernaw's main theme was that as soon as he was mayor we would have a city manager. When Mr. Supernaw beat Mr. Hansen in the primary, he knew he was going to be mayor, and as yet, we have not seen a city manager. I feel that since the Courier was so hepped up on getting a city manager, that it was the main political issue, why are they not printing anything now that we don't have a city manager or any candidates?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Charlevoix Courier ran a story in the May 17, 1978 edition about the mayor and council's progress on the hiring of a new city manager. The store may be perused at the Courier office, upstairs in the Market Mall, or at the Charlevoix High School Library.

Changing population affects health program

By PEG OHLE

Population changes in the area have affected the programming of the District Health Departments Personal Health Services Division, according to the department's annual report.

"The percentage of senior citizens making up our total population is nearing double the state average," the report states. The health problems associated with old age, including higher rates of chronic disease and need of long term care, as necessitated the Health Department to establish such programs as Home Health Care Services, Nursing Home Patient Evaluation, Hypertension Control, and Senior Citizens Health Screening.

Changes in the make up of area population and the general social changes of the last decade have also had impacts upon the young population of the district, the report continues.

"This should be reasily observed in such statistics as the climbing V.D. rate, the number of births to teenage mothers, and evidence of youthful experiences and abuse of alcohol and other substances.

"In response to these needs, the department was able to initiate such programs as Community Health Education, Teenage Expectant Parent Classes, Expanded Family Services, and Preventive Substance Abuse Services."

Illegitimate births in the district (Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet, and Otsego Counties) rose to 9.5 percent in 1976, the last year for which figures are available. This is higher than in any of the past ten years. Over 17 percent of all births were to mothers 19 and under. The number of gonorrhea cases has more than tripled in the last eight years

Other services provided by the district health department have increased with the population, including immunizations, environmental health programs, and health education.

Environmental health statistics appear in an adjoining column.

ANN WILLIS, the new meter reader for the Charlevoix Electric Department, poses with one of the meters she checks on a monthly basis.

Meter reader's job has its hazards, too

There can be a few problems connected with being the City of Charlevoix's first female meter reader since World War II, as well as some fun.

Just ask Ann Willis. She's been on the job since last Tuesday.

The first hurdle Miss Willis had to get over was making people believe she is a meter reader. The next one was convincing people it isn't the parking meters she is reading.

"It really hasn't been too bad," Miss Willis said.

"I've been going around with Al Bergmann for the last week and when he introduces me as the new meter reader, people just say, 'Well, here comes women's lib,' or something like that," she laughed.

"It's been funny, too. When I tell people I'm the new meter reader, they ask me not to give them a parking ticket. I just explained that I read the water and electric meters."

But convincing city residents that she's a meter reader is not nearly as hard as convincing their pets. The 27-year-old Miss Willis listed dogs as the biggest hazard facing a meter reader.

"Many people tie their dogs up right near the meters," the 1969 graduate of Charlevoix High School, explained. "That makes it hard to get close enough to the meter to read it.

"Or, if there is a dog in the house and the meter is inside, the dog won't let you in."

Miss Willis said it doesn't matter what size the dog is or how friendly it is, they can be equally as dangerous. She said she hasn't been bitten yet, but she's had a close call

"Al got bit the other day," she said, a faint smile crossing her lips. "The dog was friendly and he played with it, but when he turned around, the dog bit him."

The second greatest hazard facing the new meter reader is snakes. She said the snakes are harmless, but they do startle the unsuspecting meter reader when they slither out of the bushes or underground pits where meters are located.

Miss Willis said she was interested in becoming the city's only meter reader because she likes the outdoors. She is an avid deer hunter and fisherman and she also enjoys softball and cross country skiing. And so far, the weather has cooperated with the new meter reader.

"But they tell me to watch out for winter," she said.

Books, discipline, PR, Lemerand's priorities

Books, discipline and public relations should be the top priorities of the Charlevoix School District, according to Larry C. Lemerand, candidate for the Charlevoix Board of Education.

Lemerand, 38, believes the school district should work toward purchasing more learning materials, improving the discipline in the schools and improving the relationship between teachers and parents.

"There is now a shortage and there always will be a shortage of good learning material," Lemerand explained. "I think good material is hard to come by and that a big effort should be put into getting the best and most for our kids."

As far as discipline is concerned, Lemerand would like to see the teachers given more control over the students and he would like to see the teachers backed 100 percent by the administrators on discipline matters.

The school board candidate would also like to see the school district make a greater effort in involving the community in the operation of the school.

"I think we should make a greater effort to have the people in this community more interested in the every day workings of our schools, not just when they attend Parent-Teacher conferences, but all the time," Lemerand said.

The candidate also said he would support an expansion program at the high school with limitations.

"I agree that more classrooms are needed," Lemerand said. "So if an expansion program came before me that was to close in the breezeways between the two buildings with classrooms, a larger, better equipped library and cafeteria and possibly enlargement of the present band room, I would definitely be in favor of it.

"I could not in my own mind justify an auditorium, new bandroom or a second gymnasium. These to me are secondary to education."

Lemerand, who with his wife, Joan, has two sons in the Charlevoix schools, said he felt qualified to run for school board because he is a taxpayer and a parent in the school district.

He said he decided to run for office because he was not happy with the way tax monies are being spent in the school district. He said he was more aware of the spending because he is a former employee of the district.

In discussing other weaknesses in the school district, Lemerand cited the lack of interest in the school operations by the people in the district.

"Our strength in education lies in the attitude and knowledge of our teachers and the support we give them," he pointed out. "We have some very educated and fine people trying to teach our children, but without our support, their attitude and our children's education will suffer greatly."

Lemerand and his family have lived in Charlevoix for the past nine years. He is currently employed as a shift supervisor for Medusa Cement Co.

Lemerand graduated from Wyandotte High School and Henry Ford Community College.

Candidate Otis Elliott plans to return schools to taxpayers

Returning the school system to the taxpayers is the goal of Otis L. Elliott if he is elected to the Charlevoix Board of Education.

"Things are getting out of hand," Elliott said. "I think it is time to put the schools back in the hands of the taxpayers.

"The taxpayers have had their ideals misunderstood and forgotten and this has led to more severe taxes and less education. I think it's time to get this straightened out."

As far as priorities of the school district are concerned, Elliott would like to see more emphasis on the basic

Charlevoix grad seeks school board seat

A native of Charlevoix and a graduate of the Charlevoix School system, James J. Haggard is seeking election to the school board to ensure that Charlevoix students get a quality education.

"As a native of Charlevoix and a graduate of the Charlevoix school system in the 1950s, I was provided with an excellent background to go on to college and receive two degrees," Haggard explained. "I feel the high standard of conduct and great stress on math, science, literature and writing at that time is what we must return to today.

"My desire is to make sure that every child is given the best education we can provide."

Haggard said he believed stressing the three Rs, should be given priority in the Charlevoix School System.

"If we can give every child an excellent grounding in the elementary school with the traditional formula of reading, writing and arithmetic, we have half the battle won," the candidate said. "And the basic three Rs should be continued throughout our educational system.

"We have to demand plenty from the students and set tough educational standards that the students must work hard to meet. This phrase "allowing children to work at their own speed" to me is a cop-out."

Haggard contends that one of the biggest weaknesses in the school district is the lack of emphasis on the three Rs, particularly reading. He points out that the school district spent $17,976 during 1977-78 for a reading program at the middle school and plans to spend $11,000 in the coming year.

"What does this tell you?" the candidate asked. "Why are our children at the sixth grade level such poor readers?

"The basic programs must be initiated beginning with the first grade and any problem a student has should be cleared up as soon as it is evident. With the basics all students would be given the opportunity of meeting higher educational goals."

Haggard said he supported the proposed expansion program. He believes closing in the breezeways will correct the poor design of the school and provide the needed classroom space:

"We are already out of room in the present building and we all have to face the fact that these additions are necessary," he said.

The school board candidate would also like to see closer communication between the three schools and better coordination of curriculum. He also feel an academic honor society should be formed immediately to encourage students to achieve the highest standards of academic excellence.

Haggard, 39, is an architectural and interior designer and holds a bachelors degree in architectural and interior design and an associates of applied arts degree in advertising.

He and his wife, Diane, have three children in the Charlevoix School system.

Dennis Kusina plans improvements for schools

A desire to improve the educational system and the community is what prompted Dennis W. Kusina to seek election to the Charlevoix Board of Education.

"The hub or life of any community is its people, but close behind that is the school system. I feel to attract more people to the area and to keep the ones we have, we must try to have the best school system in the north," Kusina, 29, said.

"We won't attract business and especially industry, unless we have a good school system."

Kusina believes the top priority of the school district should be to give the children of the community the best education through efficient use of available resources.

"I think the school system has done a good job at this, but I also feel that there is room for improvement," the candidate explained.

In addition, Kusina feels another major priority of the school board should be to educate the public about the school system, what it offers, where the tax money is spent and how the students in the system compare with students in other districts.

"I think one of the weaknesses of the system is that the people don't know enough about it," Kusina said. "The Charlevoix school system has come a long way and it has done a lot of work.

"I am impressed with the reading program that has been started at the middle school. I think Charlevoix is taking a positive step. They aren't going to be caught having kids that can't read in their schools.

"But I think more can be done. I don't have all the answers, but I am willing to help."

As far as an expansion program at the high school is concerned, Kusina believes more classrooms are needed at the school.

"I think we need to expand the high school especially when you look at the projected enrollment figures," he said. "But everyone in the school district is facing higher taxes and higher prices due to inflation. The people are the ones who have to pay for the addition and I don't know where they are going to get the extra money out of their budgets.

"There's no doubt in my mind that the money the school system receives is being well spent. And I believe that the one mill the school board is seeking approval for in June is necessary and that it should be passed.

"But that's just one mill. It's going to take a lot more than that to expand the high school and I don't know where the people are going to get it from."

Kusina said it is important to change the tax system and the means of supporting the schools.

"Something's got to be done about the tax system," the candidate said. "I don't have the answer, but if elected I will work with others to improve it."

Kusina feels the many contacts he has with area residents through his business, Kusina Motors Inc., and the fact that his wife, Peggy, is a teacher in the Petoskey school system, help to make him aware of the concerns people have about education and qualify him as a candidate for the school board.

He also feels his business experience and education would make him a valuable part of the school board especially in the planning and budgeting areas.

Kusina holds a bachelor's degree in marketing from Northern Michigan University and an associate degree in automotive marketing from Northwood Institute.

Providing top notch education goal of William Kenifeck

Providing the best possible education for the students is the goal of William Kenifeck if he is elected to the Charlevoix Board of Education.

Kenifeck believes providing the best possible education for the students should be the top priority of the school district. He also feels the board should continually work to update methods and techniques at the schools and that an active curriculum committee should be operated in the district.

The school board candidate advocates completing a long range study and preparation of a plan for the future operation of the district and perhaps a redirection of expenditures.

"The current declining enrollment at the K-5 and middle schools may be the indication of the need to redirect our expenditures to updating and refurbishing and purchasing much needed books and learning aids rather than toward expansion," Kenifeck said.

Kenifeck, 41, believes his background in both small business and industrial management would allow him to assist school officials in budgeting and forecast planning.

Kenifeck would also like to see the school district work on its communications.

"We need to create better communication between teacher, parent and students," the candidate said. "Often times the parents are not alerted to learning problems until they become serious enough to prevent advancement."

Although Kenifeck feels there is room for improvement, he also felt the school district had some strengths, too.

"The district's strengths lie in the quality level of the teaching body and their overall ability to create the high level of education that is offered today," he said.

Kenifeck is a salesman for Thomas Real Estate and a director of the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

He attended Waterford Township High School and General Motors Institute. He and his wife, Terri, have two children in Charlevoix Schools.

Ardeth Wieland seeks election to second term on school board

Seeking re-election to the Charlevoix Board of Education is Ardeth Wieland. Mrs. Wieland is seeking election to her second term on the school board.

The school board member has decided to seek another term because she enjoys the challenge of seeking solutions to the difficult problems facing school systems today.

"I believe providing the best education possible for each young person is one of the most important responsibilities that faces a community," the candidate said. "They must be ready to take their place in society and carry their share as a responsible citizen and a taxpayer.

"I also think each member in the community should share in seeing that this task is accomplished. With our four children receiving their education here, I think the least I can do is to give my time to help with making this possible."

Mrs. Wieland listed working to improve the quality of education, increasing efficiency and establishing careful hiring practices as the top priorities of the school district.

"I believe we should make every effort to continue to improve the quality of the education we are providing," she said. "The emphasis has to include coordinating the curriculum through all buildings so the individual can be advanced from where he or she is to the next level of challenge.

"We also need to constantly look for ways to be more efficient as utilities and fuel continue to rise in cost.

"And we should do a careful job of hiring new people to all school related jobs so they can bring not only their skills but also their qualities as an individual."

Mrs. Wieland felt the school board should work to improve communications within the district, too.

"In my opinion, our one biggest need is better communication," she said. "Misunderstandings between the staffs of school buildings, the parent and a teacher or administrator, the student and the teacher or the employee and the school board all make for difficulty in doing a superb job."

Mrs. Wieland wholeheartedly supports the expansion program at the high school. She pointed out that as more and more regulations are issued and special things must be done to accommodate handicapped students, more space is needed.

"People talk about getting back to the basics instead of spending money on classroom space," she pointed out. "And we do teach basics, but what was basic even 10 years ago isn't enough for the student to meet a world that gets smaller every day."

Mrs. Wieland is a former teacher in the Northern Michigan area and has lived in Charlevoix for 25 years. She graduated from Boyne City High School and Michigan State University.

The 49-year-old woman and her husband, Tom, have four children.

In addition to serving on the school board, Mrs. Wieland participates in program planning for a weekly television series "Accent Agriculture" and is serving on the County Tax Advisory Committee.

Parking dilemma needs solution soon

Well, here it is summer again. And just as sure as the lilacs will bloom, the tourists and summer residents will be heading north again.

And just as soon as those cars with foreign license plates show up, people will begin to complain about the lack of parking space in downtown Charlevoix.

Once again, city officials – the mayor and common council aldermen – have made it through fall, winter and spring without a single move toward alleviating the parking problem on city streets.

Likewise, none of the merchants in the downtown area have come up with a single idea for solving the problem. And while the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce has been urging that something be done about the problem, that body has yet to make any suggestions, either.

Oh, there have been rumbles from city officials along those lines, but most of them have been about the fact that the one parking lot the city did build in the downtown area within the last 10 years isn't being used by the merchants, their employees, the tourists or the shoppers.

But, aside from that no action has been taken to see why people don't park there and no moves have been made to try and encourage people to use the parking lot.

The solution might be as simple as posting a few signs indicating that a city parking lot is located at the base of Clinton Street.

The time to act on parking is now. The city has a newly formed planning commission that is an active interested body. Although it is still organizing, it would probably have some time to devote to planning for parking areas within the city.

A few public hearings on the parking situation held by either common council or the planning commission might unearth some creative suggestions.

Also a review of the various proposals made by the city building and parking commission several years ago, might shed some light on a solution to the problem.

Action should be taken soon, however. The parking problem is only getting worse. It is fast becoming a year around problem in the downtown area.

In addition the cost of constructing a parking lot or a parking ramp will only get higher. The City of Petoskey is currently planning to construct a $1.1 million parking structure, a year's delay on that project will increase the cost in the neighborhood of 10 percent.

Another reason Charlevoix should get going on planning for parking area is that a few of the churches in the downtown area are considering putting in additional parking as are the banks. And there is some property available in the area that could be purchased for parking.

A coordinated effort between the businesses and the city could result in a well-planned, much needed parking lot and a happier summer for us all.

...Speaking Her Mind

I was most interested in the comments made by Saugatuck's Mayor DeForest Doener when he was in Charlevoix for Mayor Exchange Day during Michigan Week.

Mayor Doener couldn't say enough nice things about Charlevoix. In fact, his flowing praises of the city were almost overwhelming. It's been a while since I have heard so many positive things said in a row about Charlevoix.

But it was good to have an outsider point out some positive things about our city. Too often we get so bogged down dealing with the problems that we forget our city has much to be proud of.

A few of the things that Mayor Doener pointed out were the excellent zoning that the city has followed and the curb it has kept on condominium development, the city marina and the three beaches, the excellent sewage treatment plant and pipe system, and the dedication of the city officials.

I'm sure that once Charlevoix residents started thinking about all of the super things we have in the city that list would multiply 50 times before they were through. There's no way to list them all but perhaps the city band shell, the park system, the golf course, Mt. McSauba and the tennis courts could be added to those things already mentioned.

Mayor Doener also warned Charlevoix residents to take care of their resources and to make sure that they are around 25 years from now for the people to enjoy.

"It may cost you some dough for some of your projects, but it will be worth it in the long run," he said.

"Charlevoix and Saugatuck are in the people business. And that's one of the nicest, cleanest businesses to be in, but that means you've got to provide them with something they can't get anywhere else.

"Here you have a view of the water, municipal marinas and nice beaches. It costs a lot to keep them up, but it's worth it in the long run. We spend as much money on our parks as we do on the police department."

And the man has a point. If you have nice resources you might as well spend the money to keep them nice, not only so the tourists can enjoy them, but also so the residents that support them can enjoy them.

And taxpayers should remember the words of Mayor Doener about the sewage treatment plant the next time they are upset about the common council spending money to purchase things for the city.

"You had a forward looking government that decided to build that plant," he said. "You got your plants for $2 million it's going to cost us $6 million."

We have been lucky in Charlevoix. We do have super resources and we have had many dedicated city officials. While taxpayers shouldn't accept everything their elected officials do with out question, they should remember that some forward thinking several years ago has gotten us where we are today.

I don't know why I'm so excited about Mariead Corrigan's visit to Beaver Island next weekend, but it certainly is going to be one of the nicest things to happen in Northern Michigan this summer.

At this point Miss Corrigan's stay among the island's Irish doesn't threaten to be "earth-shaking" "momentous" or even mildly "important." But it does have all the earmarks of being "nice," which is probably more important than the other three.

Miss Corrigan, as you know, comes from battle-scarred Northern Ireland and won the Nobel Peace Prize last year because she believes there is an alternative to violence as a way of life.

When her brother's three children were killed by an automobile in the aftermath of an Irish Republican Army (IRA) raid, Miss Corrigan and Mrs. Betty Williams launched the Peace Peoples Movement – the first significant peace effort in Northern Ireland after eight years of civil and religious strife between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

And the efforts of the pair certainly seem to be showing results, or so it appears from this side of the Atlantic. The IRA no longer makes headlines on a daily basis in America.

Last Thursday, for the first time since 1972, the steel security barriers guarding downtown Londonderry from terrorist bombings and other attacks were removed.

Between the hours of 8 a.m. and 7 p.m., pedestrians and vehicles are allowed to enter the heart of 'Derry without being stopped and searched for weapons and explosives by armed police backed by British troops.

Londonderry is the eighth city in the province of Ulster to have its protective barriers taken down as a result of what officials call a "downward trend" in the violence that has torn Northern Ireland apart for so long.

However, Belfast, the capital, still has 14-foot-high steel fences cordoning off the "internal security zone" in the central city.

Although I have never been to Northern Ireland, my great-grandmother came from Ballymony in Ulster and it has taken three generations to weed out the religious factionalism she brought with her from the Auld Sod.

Unlike Miss Corrigan, who is Catholic, great-grandma was fiercely Protestant and fiercely Orange in the way she looked at life in general. She brought her prejudices with her to Canada and managed to pass them on to her children. I remember her daughter — my grandmother — going into a towering rage when my uncle announced he was going to marry a Catholic girl. The wedding never came off.

I also remember my great-uncles in Ontario turning blue when I insisted on wearing a sprig of green in the Orange parade.

Today the old prejudices have vanished, at least among those of us whose families have immigrated to the States. Moreover, we have some beautiful Catholic branches on our family tree.

Although Beaver Island is largely Irish and largely Catholic, island natives live in peace and harmony with their Protestant neighbors, sharing the ups and downs of community life as one people.

I hope Miss Corrigan has a "nice" visit with them.

One never knows how painfully average they are until they go to rent something and discover they are out.

It's always been that way with me. At the roller rink, I always had a choice of skating shoes: size 3 or size 11. At the ski slopes it was either the 18-foot acrobatic skis or nothing!

Somehow, when I rented a horse, I knew before I got there they had just let out the last "gentle" one who was at that moment ambling along the path as its rider rode side-saddle with the reins gently resting in one hand. I invariably got one called "El Diablo" who had never been ridden in his life and had been severely whipped by a woman who was a dead ringer for me.

I used to naively think we were the only ones in the world who wanted to rent an inexpensive compact car for our vacation with an adequate trunk, four doors, air conditioning and low gas mileage.

By the time they got to us, they were down to a car that had everything but a body, purple flag on the fender, and a police escort.

Some of the extras included electric doors, carpeted windows, piano bar, and a revolving disco mirror. It also got three miles to the gallon.

I could have predicted a scene that took place at the bowling alley the other night.

"I'd like to rent a pair of bowling shoes," I said.

"What size?"

"Six and a half."

"That's an average size. We're all out. Could you fluff up your socks and try a size 11?"

"Well, I..."

"In men's?"

"I don't..."

"Left-handed? I suppose you want a light ball? (I nodded) So does everyone. Right-handed? (I nodded.) With three holes? Those all went in a hurry."

I ended up with an 85-pound ball used only on weekends by a left-hander with a thumb the size of a ballpoint pen.

My husband came up behind me and said to the girl, "Do you have men's shoes, size 11, left-handed, and a heavy ball with a rather small thumb?"

She winced. "Gee, as a matter of fact, we don't. That's a real average size, you know."

A clay lined retreat

Everyone agrees. Poisoned people, the same as poisoned cows, must be put somewhere. They can't be ignored, and they can't be discarded carelessly.

But where can they be put? The poisoned cows can't be buried in Gov. Milliken's backyard. The poisoned people can't be put in the cul-de-sac suburbs. The water would be contaminated, and property values would fail.

There are different types of poison. The poisoned cows are tainted by PBB, a chemical they ate by mistake. The poisoned people are tainted by old age and poverty. Usually the poverty is contracted by mistake. In the beginning, poor people have something else in mind, such as wealth. But old age is expected, and only a few people try to avoid it.

Old people and poor people are often the same people. This is because it is impossible to grow old without growing poor, unless you are Nelson Rockefeller. But it is possible to become poor while still young. Many people are born poor, which is about as young as you can get.

All poor people, young or old, have one thing in common. They pay taxes. This is because they can't afford to buy loopholes. If a person doesn't have any loopholes, he must pay taxes. That's the law.

The only poor people who don't pay taxes are those people so poor they have no income at all. These extra-poor people must live on welfare programs financed by taxes collected from average-poor people who can't afford loopholes.

In view of these circumstances, a compassionate government has decided that it would be fair to use some of the poor people's tax money to subsidize decent housing for people. Hardly anyone argues against this idea. Even rich people with loopholes say poor people shouldn't have to live in snowbanks.

The same compassionate government is willing to spend the poor people's tax money on housing for old people. Again, everyone says hurrah! Everyone loves old people, especially when they have apartments of their own and don't clutter up the passing lanes.

But there's a problem. Federal and state officials are suggesting that poor and/or old people should be scattered throughout the pretty suburbs where the people with loopholes live.

This is unacceptable, of course. It's a matter of principle – the poison principle. And any stupid mayor who doesn't recognize the poison principle should be recalled quicker than a Chevrolet with three wheels.

Suburbs are accused of objecting to poor and/or old people because they often look different than people with loopholes. Many poor people have black skin, and some old people make click-clack noises when they talk. But it's unfair to accuse suburbanites of being prejudiced against blacks and loose dentures.

The problem isn't people; it's the poison. This mysterious poison oozes from these people and spreads through the entire community in which they live. It attacks houses blocks away and causes their values to fall.

Residents of these stricken homes are in such a hurry to flee the poison that they sell $150,000 homes for $130,000. And they accept the $20,000 loss as confirmation of their ability to hear a property value fall from poison.

"See?" they say. "I told you my house was poisoned. We should never have let those people live in town."

No one can argue with the logic of a $20,000 loss. But what of the carriers of this invisible poison – the poor and/or old people? Where can they be put?

The State of Michigan is spending $1.5 million in taxpayer's funds to house PBB tainted cows in a clay-lined pit in Mio. Gov. Milliken says the PBB won't seep through the clay and poison the community.

Maybe it would be safe for poor and/or old people to live in suburban homes made of clay – with no loopholes in them, of course.

Defends sheriff's association in state trooper funding dispute

To the Editor:

Over the past few weeks the Michigan Sheriffs' Association has been under constant attack in the media through the efforts of several ill-informed and misguided individuals claiming to "represent" the State Police Troopers Association.

As briefly as possible we wish to point out the facts Gordon Gotts, President of the Troopers Association, and Representative Ernest Nash have elected to ignore or misrepresent.

1. S.B. 1517 does not reduce jurisdiction or increase jurisdiction of either the Michigan State Police nor the 83 sheriff departments of the state.

2. The Michigan State Police will retain full authority to patrol all county roads and freeways, as will the sheriff departments. The bill provides which police agency will be primarily, not exclusively, responsible and accountable for the various categories of roads in Michigan.

3. Not one penny is being diverted from the Michigan State Police budget (1978-79) to any or all of the 83 sheriff departments of Michigan. In fact the proposed next year's state police budget shows an increase of approximately $29,000,000. Sgt. Gotts and Representative Nash chose to ignore this point in their letters. S.B. 1517 is concerned with an appropriation of a total of $12,500,000 to cover one and a quarter years. This money would augment local county funds in all 83 counties, not just Wayne County, for the purpose of improving public safety on local roads.

4. The State of Michigan shares costs with counties in such areas as courts, mental health, public health, social services, education and many others. We thus fail to comprehend the reasoning of the state police that all state monies appropriated for law enforcement should go exclusively to them. It should be obvious to anyone that an increase from $101,000,000 to $130,000,000 hardly indicates an attempt by anyone, including the Michigan Sheriffs' Association, to close state police posts or reduce state police responsibilities or personnel. In fact, we categorically deny any such efforts by this Association.

5. Every citizen of this state should be aware of the fact that "there is no such thing as a free lunch." Without criticizing the state police for the policing job they have done on Detroit's freeways, we point out that when Governor Milliken sent approximately 84 troopers to Detroit in 1976 on "temporary" assignment the state also sent $2,600,000 along to cover expenses from October 1, 1976 to March 31, 1977, a six month period. Their job was to patrol 135 miles of freeway.

Since that time the state has appropriated $4,200,000 for the April 1, 1977 to September 30, 1977 period; and $5,400,000 for the October 1, 1977 to September 30, 1978 period, or a total of approximately $12,200,000 in round figures.

We ask in all candor; who is the Michigan State Police Troopers Association, Governor Milliken and Representative Nash trying to fool?

Very truly yours,
Jack P. Foster

Reservation applications may be obtained from any state park or at most DNR field offices. They may also obtained by writing to the Parks Division, DNR, Box 30028, Lansing, Michigan 48909.

A check for the $3 reservation fee and for the total camping fee, which is $5 per night at most parks, must be returned with the application form to the park you plan to visit at least 15 days before your intended arrival date.

All camping reservations must be for a minimum of four and a maximum of 15 nights. Half the sites at any particular state park may be reserved on a first-come, first-serve basis.

NEIL DZIEDZIC approaches the high jump during the recent Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet. Dziedzic took top honors in the event and is headed for competition in the state meet this week.

Track team places 2nd in relays

The Charlevoix Rayder track team came in second in the Class C division of the Petoskey Relays last week.

The Rayder runners were edged out of first place by a mere three points. The Rayders scored 47 points and the first place Rogers City team had 50 points.

The Rayders captured one first place and four second places in the seven-event meet.

The sprint medley team of Neil Dziedzic, Steve Schuch, Jack Cross and Kerry Speer took a first place with a time of 1:11.

In second place in the three-quarter mile medley was the team of Todd Williams, Pat Klooster, Cross and Wayne Hoffman. Also in second place was the 440-yard relay team of Klooster, Dziedzic, Schuch and Speer.

The mile relay team of Hoffman, Pat Schmidt, Ron Paul and Williams came in second and the 880-yard relay team of Cross, Klooster, Speer and Schuch came in second.

In fourth place was the mile medley relay team of Schmidt, Norbert, Scharenbrick, Paul and Jeff Drenth.

The seventh and eighth grade relay team of Ross Carey, Randy Schnackenberg, Dave Buday and Mike Beaadoin tied with the Petoskey team for fifth.

Dziedzic took a fifth in the 100 yard dash, the only individual event in the meet.

A TRACK OFFICIAL indicates how many laps are left during the two-mile run to Charlevoix participant Mark Russell during the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet. Russell came in fourth in that race behind Jeff Drenth who was third. Drenth qualified for the state meet.

HANDING OFF THE baton during a relay race at the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet is Pat Klooster to receiver Kerry Speer. The 880-yard relay team qualified for the state track meet this week.

IT TAKES A LOT of determination to win the 100 yard dash. Finishing in first place during the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet as Neil Dziedzic. He also qualified for the state meet.

TOM JONES puts the shot during the Michigan-Huron Shores Conference meet. Jones captured the conference title, the regional title and has a good shot to take the state Class C title in the field event. The state meet will be held Saturday.

Meet Charlevoix

...Vince Olach

By PEG OHLE

Vincent Olach is business manager of the Charlevoix Public Schools and participates in many activities around town. This week the Courier talks with him about his job and other things.

COURIER: What do you do as business manager?

OLACH: My job is budgeting expenditures, collecting revenues, transportation, bus routes, hot lunch programs, maintenance, purchasing – and anything else that nobody wants.

COURIER: How large is your budget?

OLACH: $2.5 million dollars a year. I put the budget together for school board approval and they approve the expenditures from there on out.

COURIER: How many bus routes do you have?

OLACH: We have 18 routes. The drivers travel 968 miles a day transporting 1,284 students. We have 15 drivers for the 18 routes because three drivers cover two routes. During the year they cover 177,000 miles on regular routes and 18,000 miles for extra curricular activities – field trips, band, sports, etc.

COURIER: How many custodians do you have?

OLACH: We have 15 in custodial and maintenance work. They take care of the three school buildings, the bus garage, the vocational education auto shop, the central office, the four portable buildings, and the public library.

COURIER: How many people work on the hot lunch program?

OLACH: Ten.

COURIER: How much state aid do the Charlevoix schools receive?

OLACH: Because of our high state equalized valuation, we do not receive any membership state aid but do receive categorical state aid. For the year 1977-1978, we received approximately $152,000 for special education, vocational education, and transportation. Theoretically we received 75 percent of authorized transportation expenditures, but last year we received only 68 percent, and this year it will probably be the same. Most of our revenue comes from taxes.

COURIER: What are your big expenditures?

OLACH: In additon to teachers' salaries and curriculum, maintenance and custodial care cost $325,000. This includes such expenditures as $48,000 for heating fuel, $40,000 for electricity, $46,000 for general maintenance, and the rest distributed for supplies, replacement of small parts, equipment, water, sewage, trash, etc.

COURIER: How much does transportation cost?

OLACH: This year, $151,000, which includes $22,000 for gas, oil, and grease. Vehicle replacement parts cost $4,400. Next year we'll have to pay $36,000 for two new buses. They used to cost $7,000 or $8,000. Now they're up to $18,000. We don't pay any tax on fuel oil or bus gas, but the gas that used to be 22 cents a gallon is now 45. The same is true of heating fuel and electricity. We do what we can to contain costs. The cost of everything continually goes up. Food for the hot lunch program this year showed an increase of 100 percent on many items.

COURIER: Do you make a profit on the hot lunch program?

OLACH: We average 85 cents a meal on costs and make about .4 percent profit per meal. This money is put back into food service for new equipment and upgrading the service.

COURIER: How much does actual instruction cost?

OLACH: Of our two and a half million dollars, $1.6 million goes for instruction – curriculum, teachers' salaries, supplies, etc. $880,000 goes for support, including bus drivers, maintenance, etc. Another $46,000 goes for vocational education, Indian education, and extra curricular activities such as coaches' salaries, class advisors.

COURIER: Do you plan any changes for next year?

OLACH: The curriculum will be about the same. We would like to see the bond issue pass so we can put the addition on the high school. It's costing 68 cents a square foot to heat the portables as compared to 65 cents for the other buildings. We also need the extra space. The high school now has 600 children and it was built for 400.

Vince Olach

COURIER: Is the school population growing?

OLACH: It went down from 1,800 to 1,719 this year and will probably go down a little next year, but then we expect an increase. We are getting industrial re-locations, people are moving here and starting businesses, and the young people from local families are staying here. All of this means more children in the schools.

COURIER: What are you doing at the middle school?

OLACH: We should have the heating system finished this summer. This will help with fuel economy, along with individual room controls and new windows.

COURIER: What about the other buildings?

OLACH: School buildings need maintenance just like homes. The high school was built in 1958 and the elementary school in 1968. They both need replacement furniture. Some of the floors are beginning to deteriorate, too. The heating system in the elementary school needs upgrading for cost containment. Much of the audio-visual equipment needs replacement. If we can do all this gradually, it is easier than in one swallow. The nice things we would like to have are out of the question, so we are asking only for renewal of existing millage. We feel we can continue keeping our fine standards of education with that. People often ask me why, with state equalized valuation going up, we need this millage. The answer is that costs are rising faster than the SEV because of inflation. It is a constant struggle on cost containment.

COURIER: Don't you receive some help from school organizations?

OLACH: Yes. If it weren't for the Band Boosters, it would be hard to carry on our band program. Last year they bought $10,000 worth of instruments and they are now working on replacement of band uniforms. The same is true of the Sports Boosters. They have purchased equipment and paid for transportation for minor sports. We couldn't afford the variety of sports we have without them. None of this comes from the tax dollar. The parents' group at the elementary school is purchasing bleachers for the gym. Because of the infrequency of use, we have not bought any, but when they are needed they are really needed. All in all, we get much support in the community from groups as well as individuals, which helps with our programs.

COURIER: How long have you been business manager of the schools?

OLACH: Three years.

COURIER: What did you do before that?

OLACH: I was born and raised in Charlevoix and graduated from high school in 1946. Then I joined the army and was in for 27 years, leaving as a Chief Warrant Officer IV. On returning here, I became executive director of the Chamber of Commerce and was there a year and a half.

COURIER: What do you do in your spare time?

OLACH: Umpire Little League games, play golf, fish, and work with radio-controlled model airplanes. I helped organize the Charlevoix area BUFFS, made up of model airplane buffs of all ages. I like all sports and try to participate and spend as much time as possible with my family.

COURIER: How large a family do you have?

OLACH: Three. David is 17, Dori is 16, and Darren is 11. They are all in Charlevoix schools. My wife is the former Joni Henry.

Open house planned at Voc. Ed. home

7, T33N, R8W; thence, northwest to the intersection of said Lake Shore Drive, being some 0.5 miles in length.

WHEREAS, after full hearing thereon, and this Board being fully advised in the premises, this Board has determined that it is advisable to absolutely abandon and discontinue the said parts of said roads as herein described for the purposes set forth in said Petition and for the best interest of the public.

WHEREAS, Mr. Lester A. Wheeler, a signer of the aforesaid petition who owns property abutting and serviced by the aforesaid Lake Shore Drive has been assured access to his property by the Michigan Department of Natural Resources, as evidenced by two letters dated September 25, 1975, and September 30, 1975, addressed to Mr. Wheeler and signed by Mr. O. J. Scherschligt, Chief, Parks Division, Michigan DNR, which letters are attached hereto and made a part hereof;

September 25, 1975

Mr. L.A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

Our District Park Supervisor, James Andrus, informs me that he visited you recently relative to our proposal to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public road. He reports that you are generally supportive of this concept and believe as we do that a managed and controlled park is the answer to much of the misuse of the area's public and private lands.

Road closure petitions require by law the signatures of seven land owners in the county. Preferred are those such as you who reside on or near the road considered for abandonment.

Mr. Andrus reports that you are seeking assurance that you and your family and friends retain continued free access to your property, a very understandable position and one which I have no reservations in honoring. Although we have no immediate plans to charge for park entry, it's possible this may occur someday. Arrangements can be made at that time to accommodate your concerns for free and uninhibited access.

By copy of this letter, I am advising Mr. Andrus of this position asking that he again visit with you. In the meantime, please do not hesitate to notify this office if you have other concerns.

Sincerely,

D.J. Seherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

September 30, 1975

Mr. L. A. Wheeler
Bells Bay Road
Charlevoix, Michigan 49720

Dear Mr. Wheeler:

This will acknowledge your September 28, 1975, letter which seeks additional assurances relative to our petition to seek abandonment of Bells Bay Road as a public thoroughfare.

I agree to your request for appropriate, free, uninhibited and unimpeded access to the whole of your 400 foot lake frontage. I also agree that such access will not be limited to you, your wife and visitors personally, but will extend to the whole of the property and to and for the use and benefit of such assignees, grantees and successors as may acquire through you.

If all goes well, we expect to operate the campground next spring as a state park. Hopefully, some of the misuse can be reduced by having appropriate park staff on duty. Your cooperation in assisting us is much appreciated.

Sincerely,

O.J. Scherschligt, Chief
Parks Division

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Board of County Road Commissioners for the County of Charlevoix, Michigan, that the portions of the Charlevoix County Highways known as Lake Shore Drive and Branch Road, as herein described, be abandoned and discontinued as of May 8, 1978, as county roads, and cease to be part of the County road system, and that said Board determines it to be to the best interest of the public that said highways so abandoned and discontinued should be, and the same is hereby absolutely abandoned and discontinued.

That a notice of this determination be given by the Clerk of the Commission to the proper highway authorities and the Charlevoix and Norwood Township officials and be published in the Charlevoix Courier, a newspaper published and circulated in said county, once each week for three consecutive weeks.

That pursuant to the provisions of Act 46 of Public Acts of 1963, as amended, being M.S.A. 9.118, the portions of county roads, as herein described, shall be absolutely abandoned and discontinued as county roads.

Resolution adopted by the following yea and nay vote:

YEAS: Commissioners Korthase and Graham

NAYS: None

ABSTAIN: Commissioner Mousseau

I, the undersigned Deputy County Clerk and Clerk of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the part of the proceedings of the Board of County Road Commissioners of Charlevoix County on the 8th day of May 1978. In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 12th day of May A.D. 1978.

THE U.S. COAST GUARD was out in full force last week, but they were off duty. The crew members of the Mesquite and the men at the Lifeboat Station turned out to paint the home of Fran Martin on Nichols Street. The Coast Guard Wives adopted Miss Martin on Mother's Day and included a coupon good for one housepainting in the card they sent her. The house was repainted gray and white, but just to let everyone know the Coast Guard had been there, Miss Martin's mailbox was decked out with the insignia of the group.

education of the young people which stresses reading, writing and arithmetic. The candidate believes the young people should be prepared for facing tomorrow's society by the schools.

Elliott said he opposes any expansion of the high school at this time.

"I have to say we should conserve our funds at this time," the school board candidate said. "And I don't think we should threaten the public by saying it is the obligation of the parent to the student for better education to spend money."

This is the second time Elliott has sought election to the school board. He feels that having been a taxpayer in the school district for the last 12 years and having a daughter in the high school qualified him as a candidate.

"Because of this I feel as though I can help to ease some of the heartbreak that has been inflicted on the public in recent years by the school board," he said. "And also I can understand the needs of the public and the student.

Elliott, 40, is self-employed, and has lived in the area with his wife and daughter for 17 years. The candidate completed 10½ years of public school, leaving to join the U.S. Army in 1953.

Community Sing held by church

The Community Church of God will host a community sing at 8:30 p.m. Sunday.

Entitled, "An evening with Fanny Crosby and Her Music," the hymn sing will feature Ms. Crosby's hymns. She is known as the queen of the hymnwriters. She completed approximately 8,000 hymns in her lifetime and she didn't begin writing them until she was 44.

The life story of Ms. Crosby and the background of many of her hymns will be incorporated into the service along with the special numbers performed by the combined choirs of the Community Church of God and the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix.

The community sings are sponsored by the Charlevoix Ministerial Association on a quarterly basis to foster fellowship within the local Christian community.

Mari Jo Goss marries J.C. Bascom at Congregational Church

Mari Jo Goss and J.C. Bascom were married the afternoon of May 27 in the First Congregational Church of Charlevoix.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Goss and the late Mr. Goss of Charlevoix, and the bridegroom's parents are Mrs. S.A. Bascom and the late Mr. Bascom, also of Charlevoix.

Two hundred guests witnessed the double-ring ceremony performed by the Reverend Raymond Giffin before an altar decorated with a bouquet of pastel flowers.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Vance Wood, and her mother. Her wedding gown was of white dacron polyester organza fashioned with an empire bodice accented with embroidered lace, high lace neckline, and bishop sleeves with lace cuffs. An A-line skirt extended into a chapel train with bride lace around the bottom. A Juliet cap of lace held a fingertip imported illusion veil which was edged in lace. She carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies and carnations, pink sweetheart roses, and baby's breath.

Toni Wood, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor, and Debby Smith, Laura Johnson, and Laurie Burry served as bridesmaids. Their gowns were of blue floral print with white dotted Swiss over blue taffeta fashioned with an empire waist, scooped neckline, and short puffed sleeves. Each had a ruffled apron effect cascading to the back with a bow tie and deep ruffled flounce at the hemline. The attendants carried colonial bouquets of white and blue daisies, pink and yellow sweetheart roses, and baby's breath, and wore hairpieces to match.

Charles Bascom, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man, and groomsmen were Richard Bascom, another brother of the bridegroom, John Gibson, and Greg Garten. Ushers were Randy Goss and Robert Heise, both cousins of the bridegroom.

Music for the ceremony was furnished by Vincent Chew and Mrs. Charles Bellinger.

The bride's mother hosted the reception at the Charlevoix Yacht Club. The bridegroom's mother hosted the rehearsal dinner at the Weathervane Inn.

Following a wedding trip to the Upper Peninsula, the newly-weds are at home in Charlevoix, where the bridegroom is associated with Site Planning and Development. The bride works in the Boyne City Elementary School.

Borths brothers bag bowling title

The Borths family in Charlevoix really knows what family togetherness is all about.

For the last six years, the Borths family has fielded a bowling team in the Monday night Senior League. And for the first time this year, the six brothers captured the league title.

They are the first family team to take a title since the Paul Bunyan Lanes opened its doors in 1960. They clinched the title in a nine-game rolloff with Puffs May 24.

Bowling on the team, sponsored by their mother, Angie Borths, were Mike, Bob, John, Jim, Charley and Rich. Jim was only able to complete half a season, however, before he left for active duty with the U.S. Navy.

A seventh brother is also a bowler, but he participates in the Saturday morning middle school league.

"The boys just like to bowl," Mrs. Borths, a mother of seven sons and four daughters, said. "So we decided it would be fun to have our own team."

And fun the brothers have, but not without a few family squabbles.

When asked if her sons fought on occasion during a bowling match, Mrs. Borths laughed.

"Oh, yes," she said. "They're just like a normal family."

Mrs. Borths said she doesn't do any coaching of the team, in fact she only watches them bowl every once in a while.

"I play Bingo on Monday nights."

The brothers had a good season. Both Bob and John had 600 series with Bob rolling 650 and John 636. Rich had the highest game at 244.

The family plans to continue bowling next year, but it will be a little harder. Both Rich and Jim will be in the service, unless they can get some leave time for the bowling season.

Historical society to elect officers

The next monthly meeting of the Charlevoix Historical Society will be held Tuesday, June 6, at 8 p.m. in the Community Room of the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

A nominating committee will report on a slate of officers for the next year, and special summer events will be discussed. All members are urged to attend this meeting.

The program of the evening will be scrapbooks and albums relating to early Charlevoix. Mrs. Carl Kohler will show a scrapbook that belongs to her cousin, Mrs. Mildred Lamphar. One interesting item in the book is a news story about Martha Ayres of "Haunted House" fame.

Mrs. Richard Meyer will show Charlevoix High School yearbooks of the 1910-1912 period. Other members and friends are invited to bring memorabilia which throw light on people and events that shaped history in the Charlevoix area.

School board seeks millage renewal Monday

Charlevoix School District voters will go to the polls Monday to vote on two millage requests and to select two new members of the board of education.

The school board is seeking a renewal of 2.75 mills for three years to cover operating costs of the school district and 1 mill for one year for maintenance.

Superintendent Gordon Van Wieren said the school district hoped to be able to cover its expenses with just a renewal of the millage because of the increase in property valuation in the school district.

"With the overall increase in SEV (State Equalized Valuation) we hope to get by on the present millage without asking the taxpayers for an increase," Superintendent Van Wieren said.

Due to the increase in valuation 1 mill levied in property tax in the school district will bring in $96,925 next year. Last year one mill brought in $86,266 to the school district.

Van Wieren pointed out that just as property valuation has increased, so have school district expenses. The cost of school buses has increased 80 percent during the last five years and the cost of insurances, supplies and equipment has also skyrocketed.

But even with the increased costs, Van Wieren said school officials were hopeful that the district could operate within the amount of tax dollars it would be receiving with just a renewal of the millage.

The Charlevoix School District has one of the lowest operating millages in the area. In a comparison study of millages done last August, Charlevoix schools total operational millage was 25.35 mills. Boyne City had the next lowest millage at 26.9 mills while East Jordan had 27.5 mills, Ellsworth had 29.5 mills and Petoskey had 27.35 mills.

The superintendent also urged voters to renew the 1 mill request to cover maintenance in the school district.

"I think the school district was very accountable in the way it spent the 1 mill after the voters approved it last year," VanWieren said. "We spent it the way we said we would and we will do the same thing this year."

"The 1 mill for maintenance was a very good investment for the taxpayers last year and I think it will prove to be a good investment again this year."

The school board plans to use the 1 mill or $96,925 on various projects at each of the three school buildings. At the elementary school part of the funds will be used to upgrade the heating system, to repair the roof and to erect a fence on the playground along the edge of the golf course property.

At the middle school, a portion of the funds will be used to upgrade the middle school cafeteria which is also used as the band room, to continue the new reading program started at the school this year and for roof repair.

At the high school, the funds will be used to purchase new furniture, which has not been replaced since the school opened in 1958, to insulate and bring the vocational education auto shop up to OSHA safety standards and to repair the bus garage roof.

In addition to the two millage requests on the ballot, voters will be asked to select two new school board members. Ardeth Wieland is running for reelection to her seat and a second seat, held by the late Claire Martin, is also up for election.

Candidates in the school board race include: Otis Elliott, James Haggard, William Kenifeck, Dennis Kusina, and Larry Lemerand.

Information about each of the candidates was printed in the May 31 issue of the Charlevoix Courier. Copies may be obtained at the Courier office in the Market Mall.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday at the Charlevoix Elementary School. All school district voters will vote in booths at the school.

Mayor, common council mull over city managers

Charlevoix has moved a step closer to hiring a new city manager.

Mayor Sam Supernaw and the Charlevoix Common Council met last Thursday to sift through the 77 applications the city has received for the position and picked the top five or six candidates.

Supernaw said the council is in the process of sending letters to the selected city manager candidates to find out if they are still interested in the position and when they will be available for an interview.

The mayor pointed out that even after the interviews are completed it will be some time before a new city manager is hired because references will have to be followed up.

"I know there has been some criticism because I haven't taken action on hiring a city manager," Supernaw said. "But I had two labor contracts to settle and a budget to write in May and I just couldn't get to it like I had planned."

Supernaw took office the second week in April and has been working on and off on the city management problem since then.

Charlevoix has been without a city manager since November when Allen Sandberg resigned upon request after holding the position for less than a year.

It had taken six months to hire Sandberg following Bob Wexstaff's resignation.

Environmentalist group seeks prevention of Medusa construction

An environmentalist group has filed suit in Charlevoix Circuit Court to prevent any further construction at the Medusa Cement Company plant on Bells Bay Road.

The Committee for Preservation of the Environment filed suit in circuit court Monday seeking an injunction against any further construction on the site. The suit, filed under the state environmental protection act, claims construction at the plant will harm the environment of the community around the plant.

A hearing on the issue is expected to be held within the next two weeks.

According to John Michael, who along with Bernard Mindell, filed suit for the environmentalist group, the committee would like to see a comprehensive environmental impact study conducted by the state before the cement company embarks on its renovation and expansion program.

"The committee feels it is extremely important to have an impartial state agency conduct an environmental impact study on the proposed new cement making process, before any construction takes place," Michael said "They are vehemently opposed to Charlevoix being used as an experimental area for this new process."

Michael pointed out that the new cement making process Medusa is proposing to use at its Charlevoix plant has never been used in the United States before. Only one other plant in the nation is in the process of being retooled to switch to the new process.

No other plants are currently using the dry process of cement making except those in Japan, where the process was invented, Michael said.

Medusa Corporation announced plans in September to convert the Charlevoix plant from a wet to dry process cement plant. The conversion and modernization plan was estimated to cost around $50 million. Along with the conversion from the wet to the dry process, Medusa officials said the dry process would reduce emission of dust and other particles from the plant by about 20 percent.

Also the sulfur oxide emissions, which create the rotten egg odor that residents of Charlevoix can smell on certain days, would be cut in half. And the familiar plume which can be seen pouring from the 220-foot stack at the plant would become a sight of the past. Medusa also requested a property tax break on its new addition which it was granted by Charlevoix Township.

The members of the environmentalist group are also opposed to the construction of new buildings on the property including a tower some 36 stories high, Michael said.

The suit also charges that Charlevoix Township illegally issued a zoning permit to pave the way for the construction of the addition to the new plant. The suit asks that township officials get the old permit and reissue one in accordance with the township zoning laws.

The Committee for Preservation of the Environment, a Michigan nonprofit corporation, was started last fall and is composed of about 15 people in the area who are concerned about the Medusa expansion. Mindell is the incorporating officer for the group and he, Michael and Dick Aull are on the board of directors of the organization.

Medusa was scheduled to start around-the-clock construction of cement silos Monday. However, due to labor problems, that construction has been postponed.

Middle school youth lobby for skateboards

By PAULA HOLMES

They may be Charlevoix's future politicians, but right now they're just a couple of middle school-aged boys with a problem.

Mike Baer and Randy Skiver are avid skateboarders. Each young man has invested close to $100 in his skateboard and has also purchased the necessary safety equipment including helmets, elbow pads and knee pads.

No amateurs these guys. And consequently they need some place to use all of their equipment.

Until recently they have been using the streets of Charlevoix. But the Charlevoix Police Department has begun to crack down on skateboarders, enforcing a city ordinance that prohibits skateboarding in the street.

"The police won't let us skateboard in the streets and the sidewalks are in poor condition and dangerous," Skiver explained.

"What we need is a small skateboard park where kids can go to skateboard safely," the 12-year-old said.

So the boys formed a committee (Little Charlevoix Sidewalk Surfers), and took their problem to the only people they knew of that could help them, the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners and the Charlevoix Common Council. The boys had read about city and county-owned skateboard parks in various skateboard magazines.

"It was kind of scary," Baer and Skiver said recalling their appearance before both of the boards. "But we're glad we did it."

And it was probably a little disconcerting for the various board members, too. It's not too often that a group of students armed with 100 signatures on a petition, as well as numerous pictures and estimated cost figures appears before either board.

At first the elected officials were a little skeptical of the boys request but as the young men's presentation continued, the officials became convinced the request had been well thought out.

At the county commission meeting, the boys were referred to the Parks and Recreation Committee headed by Oscar Ward. Ward then took the boys to the common council meeting where Mayor Sam Supernaw also referred the request to the Parks and Recreation Committee.

"We thought a skateboard park could be built either at Ferry Avenue Beach, Depot Beach or on some property on M-66," Baer explained to the council. "You can get fiberglass forms and put them up on flat land."

Supernaw asked the boys to assist the council in studying the request by getting cost estimates.

"I'm sure there are a lot of children in the city who would use the park and I think it is something we should look into," the mayor said.

And the boys agree.

"There are a lot of kids who have spent more than $100 on their skateboards," Skiver said. "I'm sure they would use a skateboard park."

And the students believe a skateboard park would reduce the injuries and possibly even the deaths caused by skateboard accidents.

"At skateboard parks you are required to use safety equipment. If you don't have it, they'll rent it to you," Skiver said.

And that's one way the skateboard park can make money, the boys told their elected representatives. The parks can also charge admission and rent skateboards.

While the boys have their hopes up about the possibility of the city constructing a skateboard park, they are willing to settle for a compromise.

"If they would close off a street someplace that everyone could use, that would be good, too," Skiver said.

"But a park would be so much better," Baer added.

GET THE BIKES OFF

Get them off! I think it's about time that the city fathers did some looking into the law books to see if it isn't against the law to ride bikes on the sidewalk of the city. I am sick and tired of dashing for an open doorway of a store to keep from getting hit by some halfwit on his or her ten-speed. In a city of this size, all bikes should be licensed. That way, the riders would know the law and how to ride his or her bike, or they wouldn't be able to ride. This doesn't mean kids only. I have seen people in their 40's and 50's doing the same thing. So let's crack down on this foolish sport. It's dangerous. A disgusted taxpayer.

COMPLIMENTS SUPERNAW

I would like to compliment Mayor Supernaw and our present councilmen for their efforts to improve our city. However, my big question is why an outsider, namely Mayor Doerner of Saugatuck, to convince Miss Holmes that our prior administration under Mr. Hansen were dedicated officials who worked for new facilities and the many improvements Mayor Doerner admired. Too, I feel it unjust that the editorial writer, who, in the past, in this continuing criticism of our city and our officials, isn't gusty enough to identify himself. Signed, a member of the loud minority.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The editorial writer is Paula Holmes.

MORE PRAISE FOR SUPERNAW

I would like to say that Sam Supernaw has done an exceptional job as mayor so far. And I would just like to say that I don't think it's fair for everyone to be picking on him. Thank you.

Let's Talk Real Estate

by Jim Thomas

Your house should provide a safe environment for your family and for others who may occupy it later. Think about safety when buying, building, or remodeling. The elements of design that make a house safe generally make it liveable, too. Safety sometimes can be achieved by good management, but often it simply involves inches and feet of space. Space is expensive, but so are accidents. Good arrangements of rooms and clear, free passageways between them allow safe traveling from one activity to another.

A visit to the office of THOMAS REAL ESTATE, 101 Bridge St., 547-4494 can save you time and money in your search for a home in this area. Our experienced staff can show you just the right home for your family and can give you detailed information on the neighborhood and community services. We are also able to help you obtain financing. Stop in and check our selected listings of choice properties in all price ranges. "Do Business Where Business is Being Done" Hours: Daily 9-5, evenings and Sun. by appointment.

Common council raises dock rates

The Round Lake Yacht Basin and the city municipal docks headed the agenda for the recent Charlevoix Common Council meeting.

Council members increased the docking fees slightly for the coming season. Alderman Ray Wood said his committee had reviewed the rates, which had not been increased since 1974, and made a comparison study of the Petoskey and Harbor Springs dock fees.

The committee recommended the fees be increased slightly to fall between the Petoskey and Harbor Springs rates. Effective last Thursday the fees will be: under 20 foot boat, $3 per day, an increase from $2.50; 20-30 foot boat, $5.50, up from $3.50; 30-40 $8, up from $5.50; 40-50 $11, up from $7; 50-60, $13 up from $9; and 60 feet and up, $18, up from $12.

A $10 deposit will also be required for shower keys and the pump station fee will remain the same.

In other action, the council purchased a ship to shore radio for the dockmaster's office. Mayor Sam Supernaw explained that Michigan Waterways Commission funds are available for up to 50 percent of the cost of the radio.

Mayor Supernaw said he felt the new radio may prevent unnecessary bridge raisings because boats would be able to radio in for dock information instead of sailing in.

Dockmaster Jim Ance added that the radio would help keep the docks full. He said many boats sail by Charlevoix thinking the docks are probably full when they aren't.

The mayor said he had checked with construction companies about building additional city docks. Money has been budgeted for the construction which will begin in the fall.

Charlevoix County Humane Society plans annual dog show for June 11

The second annual Charlevoix County Humane Society Dog Show will be held Sunday at the humane society grounds behind the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department offices.

Entries will be allowed in four divisions of the Puppy Class, 2-4 months, 4-6 months, 6-9 months and 9-12 months.

In the Adult Class there will be four divisions for obedience, subnovice, novice, graduate novice and open. There will also be a junior handling class for children 8-12 years old and 13-16 years old.

A Litter Class will be judged with entries consisting of two or more puppies from the same litter and there will be a Parade of Champions.

Mixed breed dogs will be able to enter only the obedience classes.

Judges for the event will come from Ossineke, Montague, Elk Rapids and Manistee. Ribbons, rosettes and trophies will be awarded. Hot food will be served throughout the event.

Tiny woman shoulders big responsibility

By PAULA HOLMES

She's a tiny person, Mairead Corrigan is. A wisp of a woman.

The reddish hue to her hair and the fire in her ice blue eyes belie the peace she feels. A raging energy emanates from deep within her and keeps her going at break-neck speeds.

This incredible energy also helps her carry the weight of the world on the shoulders of her 5 foot 2 inch frame.

At age 32, Mairead Corrigan is a Nobel Peace Prize winner, an honor she does not take lightly.

"It's a great responsibility," Miss Corrigan explained, the words rolling off her tongue in a thick Irish brogue. "There's much to be done."

And part of her work includes making the actions of the Irish Peace Peoples Movement known to Americans and other citizens of the world.

Miss Corrigan was on Beaver Island over the weekend carrying her message of peace to the 165 members of that staunch Irish community and to hundreds of others who came to listen.

The visit to Beaver Island, 32 miles out in Lake Michigan from the shores of Charlevoix, was one of many stops Miss Corrigan has made during her second tour of the United States.

Her trip to the island was arranged because of the island's rich Irish history and because it is one place where Irish Catholics have lived in peace with Protestant neighbors for years.

Miss Corrigan's trip started in New York where she and Betty Williams were given the Woman of Achievement award at the United Nations. Miss Corrigan also attended disarmament talks and then went to St. Louis, Mo., where she received the Spirit of St. Louis award.

Although she has repeated the story of the Peace Peoples Movement and the 75 percent reduction in violence it has brought to Northern Ireland during the last 22 months, millions of times, she never tires of talking about it.

"We in the peace movement work from early in the morning until late at night, seven days a week," she said. "That is the price you must pay for peace and we are prepared to pay it."

Deeply religious, she draws her strength from her Catholic convictions.

"Those of us who are Christian believe the success of the movement is the work of the Holy Spirit," Miss Corrigan told the Beaver Islanders who are also deeply religious people.

"When we first started this movement, people asked me if I believed in miracles and I said, 'We live miracles'."

She also seems to draw strength to carry her through her grueling schedule from the Nobel Peace Prize medal she carries everywhere with her.

She often thrusts the solid gold medallion into the hands of children saying, "If you work hard for peace, some day you, too, may win a medal like this."

She began carrying her medal with her after an experience in her hometown.

"After I won the peace prize, I became a sort of celebrity," she said with charming humility. "And they would ask me to visit schools and hospitals and I would take my medal with me to show the people.

"When I saw how much joy it brought to people, I said I would never lock it away in a safe, that I would always carry it with me."

It was a sad series of events that catapulted Miss Corrigan from her position as secretary to the general manager of Guinness beer company to Nobel Peace Prize winner.

Miss Corrigan was vacationing on Achill Island off the west coast of Ireland when she felt a sudden urge to return to Belfast. Upon her return she learned that three of her nieces and nephews, her sister's children, had been killed when an automobile driven by a member of the Irish Republic Army careened across the sidewalk as the man tried to escape soldiers of the British army.

Betty Williams observed the tragic event.

On the day of the childrens funeral the two women came together to found the peace movement.

"There had been many others who tried to get peace movements started and I, sadly, think we just came along at the right time," the Nobel Prize winner said. "After nine years of war and death, the people were ready to say no more."

And it has been the Irish people who have brought the battling to an end, Miss Corrigan believes.

"Fear is contagious, but so is courage," she said. "And that courage is spreading. People are saying to the illegal armies, 'We don't want you to protect us. We don't need it. Put down your arms.' And they are putting down their guns."

The Northern Irish have also begun to work toward uniting their communities, village by village, people are building neutral community halls where the members of the two cultures can meet and work out their problems peacably.

The community halls are constructed with funds provided by the government and by the peace movement. When Miss Corrigan and Mrs. Williams did not receive the Nobel Peace Prize in 1976, the Norwegian people were incensed. They quickly raised more than $200,000 which they gave to the women as a Friendship Award. This money was put in a public trust for the peace movement.

The next year the women received the Nobel Peace Prize. Miss Corrigan has been living off the prize money as she works for the movement.

"My advisors told me to keep the money to live off of," she said. "But I have given more than one-half of it away to people who have no means of support.

"I figure I will run out of money by the end of the year and I don't know what I will do then.

"But I'm not worried. Things will work out."

Will she ever be able to do anything else besides work for the peace movement?

"I don't think so," she said smiling. "I don't think so."

Nobel winner telegrams President with peace request

Mairead Corrigan works for peace no matter where she is or what resources are available to her.

And she decided to take another positive step for peace Sunday by sending a telegram to President Jimmy Carter from Charlevoix.

Miss Corrigan, Irish Nobel Peace Prize Winner, had met with President Carter in March and discussed the Community of Peace Peoples Movement with him.

He told her, "We are of the same mind. If ever you think I am not doing right get in touch with me."

So Sunday Miss Corrigan scribbled out a message to President Carter on the back of a paper plate and then telephoned it in to Western Union.

The text of her message was:

Dear Mr. President:

May history record that under your leadership America led the world and took the first steps to seriously disarm. Please attend the special U.N. session and lead!

Your friend,
Mairead

MAIREAD CORRIGAN shows Michael Thomas Himebauch of Beaver Island the solid gold medal she received as part of the Nobel Peace Prize.

ABOUT 200 PEOPLE marched through the streets of St. James, Beaver Island, from the ferry dock to the Holy Cross parish hall with Nobel Peace Prize winner Mairead Corrigan Saturday in a demonstration for peace. Miss Corrigan addressed the gathering at the hall.

SHAKING HANDS with some people on the Beaver Islander, motorship, is Mairead Corrigan, Irish Nobel Peace Prize winner. She took the ferry to the island to address the community.

Editorials/Opinions

Clockwise

by Bob Clock

Beaver Island does strange things to time. Once you set foot on the Emerald Isle after an extended absence, the years have a way of disintegrating before your very eyes.

This happened to me Saturday afternoon while I was walking down the main street in St. James. It has been four years since the Clocks spent the summer on Beaver Island, but I suddenly had a strange feeling that I had never left.

Bridge Street and Dixon Avenue in Charlevoix seemed as remote as the Champs Elysee and the Place Pigaile in Paris, which I have never seen.

But I knew every crack in the sidewalk in front of the Shamrock Tavern and the buildings fronting the harbor in St. James were as familiar as the Weathervane Inn and the Charlevoix City Hall.

And it is not because St. James hasn't changed. The Shamrock is twice as large as it was when we lived on the island, the Castaways Restaurant has become a private home, and there appears to be plenty of new construction and remodeling on every hand.

St. James even has a brand new industry. Three years ago Walt Wojan built a lumber mill on the back road to utilize some of the island's fast-maturing stands of timber.

Saturday night as Judy and I were walking back to our rented cottage after spending an evening at the Shamrock with Nobel Peace Prize winner Mairead Corrigan, I told Judy that Charlevoix had become only a dim memory for me in only a few short hours. She said she had the same feeling, but then she has always been big on Beaver Island.

Then suddenly, in the dark, I stumbled over an unfamiliar piece of broken sidewalk near the King Strang Hotel.

"That wasn't there four years ago," I complained.

"Yes, it was," Judy answered. "I used to have trouble with it on my bike."

I AM SURE that all of us who shared Mairead Corrigan's weekend on Beaver Island – mainlanders and islanders alike – will have pleasant memories of her visit for as long as we live. I am happy that my kids had an opportunity to shake hands and compare notes with such a gracious lady.

Beaver Islanders, who are warm and accommodating to total strangers, were especially anxious to please their Irish kinswoman from Belfast. They had prepared a schedule designed to distill the essence of Beaver Island into 24 short hours, with time left over to sample the easy-going lifestyle that islanders themselves enjoy all year long.

The only people in a hurry were the press photographers and reporters eager to catch the best shot or jot down the most quotable quotation from a very quotable lady.

And we are sure that Miss Corrigan will return to Ireland next week butressed by the knowledge that the kind of peace she seeks for her friends and neighbors not only is possible but well within reach. Beaver Islanders demonstrated to her that peace already is an established fact on America's one little scrap of Irish sod.

Support school mill request at the polls on Monday

Taxes. Nobody likes them and we all grumble when we pay them. Unfortunately, taxes are as certain in life as death.

But there is a difference in the type of taxes that are paid. You can pay taxes to governmental bodies that spend them foolishly, or you can pay them to elected officials who attempt to be prudent in their spending and business-like in their budgeting.

Next Monday, the Charlevoix Board of Education is asking school district voters to renew two millage proposals, one for operations and one for maintenance.

The operational millage request is for 2.75 mills for three years and the maintenance millage request is for 1 mill for one year. Each mill levied in the school district brings in $96,925.

The school board members and school officials have worked hard during the last year to spend tax dollars as wisely as possible. They have thought through each project and each millage request thoroughly and carefully before taking any action.

And they should. After all, they are taxpayers, too.

During the past year, these officials have had new energy saving windows and doors installed at the middle school and high school and an energy saving device was placed on the high school furnace to cut down on fuel waste.

Other maintenance type projects were also embarked on during the year to prevent the three buildings from deteriorating. And that only makes sense. Homeowners maintain their homes on a yearly basis so that they won't be hit with out-of-sight bills when the thing finally falls apart due to lack of maintenance and public buildings should be kept up in the same manner.

But not all the money went to improve and maintain the buildings. Some of the money was spent on the students, too. And it should be, the purpose of the school system is to educate the students of the district.

So, a new reading program was established at the middle school to help the slow readers and to encourage the good readers to keep up the good work.

A new track and playground area was installed at the middle school. The playground improvements added to the gym classes and also took care of drainage and safety problems at the school. New playground equipment was also installed at the elementary school.

Many other things were done for the students, too, to continue their education and further their growth.

The school board and school officials have shown that they are fiscally responsible. They have kept the taxpayers, who are stockholders in the school district, well advised of how their money is being spent.

And due to the recent increases in valuations, the school board has decided not to seek millage increases. They are going to tighten their belts along with the rest of the people.

The school board deserves the support of the people and renewal of the millage requests. Vote yes on Monday.

My best friend, Mayva, is a grandmother.

She called me yesterday to tell me the news. "I'm not going to be one of those grandmothers who bore you to death, but honestly; she does not look like a newborn baby."

(I got a mental picture of a baby with a full set of teeth sitting under a hair dryer drinking milk from an old-fashioned glass.)

"And she's alert! You would not believe how she follows you around the room with her eyes." (Probably saying in perfect English, "You seem restless. Could I offer you a drink?")

"And good! You have never seen a child so respectful with such regard for people's feelings. (I could imagine a phone ringing and the baby saying, 'I'll get it.'")

Just when I thought I had tkaken all the happiness my system could absorb, she paused and said, "I'm old."

"Nonsense," I said. "You're not old, you're just getting more adept at lying."

"Don't kid around," she snapped. "I never realized how having a baby has changed. I couldn't relate to anything. I never realized how out-of-touch I am."

"Like how?"

"They breathe them out now. Everything is natural and your husband is with you throughout the birth, helping. Remember how it was with us?"

"Do I ever!" I said. "I became hysterical, frightened and begged for sedation!"

"And that was at your pre-natal visit."

"Be fair," I said, "You'd have been upset too if your doctor had just completed a pelvice examination and wandered around mumbling, 'Has anyone seen my fountain pen?' "

"It's still a new ballgame," she sighed. "Super-absorbent throwaways, shoulder slings to carry them around, no bottles to fiddle with and it's a new relaxed atmosphere that babies are born into."

"You're overreacting," I giggled. "Surely women having babies today still have their hair done on the way to the labor room. I mean would you deliver with greasy hair?"

"I don't think she thought one minute about her hair."

"Next thing you know you'll tell me she isn't going to stay in bed 30 days to get her strenth back! Mayva! Mayva! You there?"

Lum fantasy coming true

My favorite fantasy is coming true, and that's no fun. It was bad enough when the Lum General Store reopened, but now there is a Lum International Golf Course.

There really is.

It was last February that I first told the truth about Lum, after 20 years of lying. I confessed there really is no Lum International Airport, no Lum Sheraton and no Lum Center for Continuing Arts.

Lum is in Lapeer County, 60 miles north of Detroit. I began lying about Lum when I was editor of the county newspaper. I wanted to improve Lum's image as a tourist attraction.

Lum was not completely unknown outside Lapeer County before I started lying about it. Old-timers will remember a popular radio show called "Lum and Abner". People used to send letters to Lum to be postmarked with the name of their favorite radio character, the same way people like to have Christmas cards postmarked in a town named Christmas.

In those days, the Lum Post Office was a small operation and the letters had to be postmarked by hand. The postmaster did it with a black crayon. An old person was always appointed postmaster so the stamps would be canceled with naturally wavy lines.

And if you believe that, you'll believe that in 1962 a federal grant made it possible for Lum to construct a subway system which ran through the entire town and on out to the airport. This was many years after the demise of Lum and Abner but, in their memory, the subway was called the Black Crayon.

When I published these lies in the county newspaper, local people didn't believe them. They knew Lum's civic improvements were all in my soggy imagination. And if they had any doubts, all they had to do was drive through downtown Lum and note there was still no wick in the streetlight.

But my lies reached outsiders and they believed, they believed! Tourists came to Lum to dine in the revolving restaurant on top of the Lum Space Needle. They went home licking ice cream cones from Lum General Store. They amused their city friends with folksy stories about the country editor who had lost his mind but was apparently harmless, and the local people humored him by not shooting him for writing stupid lies about their town.

And the lies had survived, years after the editor was transferred to outpatient status in a neighboring city. Recently the mail brought me a handsome T-shirt from R. Peter Thompson, who is principal of the Lapeer County Vocational Technical Center. On the front of the shirt is a large passenger plane. And under the plane, in large letters, the wearer of the shirt is identified as a flight attendant at Lum International Airport.

At least, I think Thompson is lying on my shirt. Maybe not. I haven't been to Lum in 5 years. I was wrong last February when I wrote that the Lum General Store was closed. Several Lum residents sent me indignant letters pointing out that the store recently reopened and business is great. None of the letters were written in black crayon.

And then last week my old newspaper told about Joe Hawald, a migrant plasterer who moved into Lum 7 years ago and began hacking away at a jungle behind his home. He was building a golf course.

The course opens in August. At first, Hawald said, he was going to call it Lum Valley. But townspeople convinced him he'd get more publicity if he called it Lum International Golf Course. And now I've given him tremendous publicity. This column is read all over my Aunt Madeline's apartment building.

It's easy to see what's happening. Fantasy is becoming fact. If there really is a Lum International Golf Course, how long before there'll be real flight attendants gulping lunch in the Lum and Abner fast-food outlet in Lum International Airport?

Too bad. There's nothing funny about commuting to work on the Black Crayon if you really have to do it.

Gerald Ohmer charges rip-off in equalization

To The Editor:

The property owners of Charlevoix County have been "Ripped off" by the Charlevoix County Equalization Department and the County Board of Commissioners, with the exception of Commissioners Ward, Hansen and Haggard.

Equalized valuation of property for Charlevoix County has increased by a total of more than 24 percent for the years 1977 and 1978.

While the Charlevoix County officials have stuck their property owners with a large 13.7 percent increase in equalized valuations for 1978, Emmet County officials recommended a 5.8 percent increase for their property owners. The Emmet County recommendation has been approved by the State Tax Commission. This means the property owners in Charlevoix County will have their taxes increased on the average, nearly two and one half times more than the property owners in Emmet County will have theirs increased.

There can be no excuse for such a difference, since the valuation of propety in both counties should increase by approximately the same percentage.

There is good reason to believe that the State Tax Commission would have also approved an increase of around 5.8 percent in valuations for Charlevoix County, since their approval of the Emmet County increase indicates that it was what the State Tax Commission thought was proper for this area of the state.

The residents of Charlevoix County can no longer afford the luxury of county officials who appear to be irresponsible and incompetent. I believe the Cunty Equalization Director, The Assessors, and the twelve commissioners responsible for the large increase in property taxes must be replaced by people who can do their job properly.

The people can recover the excess taxes by turning down all requests for millage increases or renewals by the county or the school district, until the excessive taxes imposed by our county officials are recovered.

The school districts have been the major recipient of the increased property taxes and will be getting a large increase in tax money from the 1978 increase in property valuations, so should not be hurt by a reduction in millage.

Northwest Shrine Club says thanks to area businesses for help

To the Editor:

The Northwest Shrine Club consisting of members of the Saladin Shrine have contributed immenseley to the crippled and burned children within their four county area of Antrim, Emmet, Charlevoix, and Kalkaska.

The Club is presently helping five boys and eighteen girls, who are locally receiving orthodonic, orthopedic, cosmetic, and speech corrections, plus transportation and lodging for the children and parents going to the Shrine Hospital in Chicago.

The monies spent to date on these children is $25,674.00, which is approximately one-fifth of the total amount spent by the club, since the club formed in 1972. This money does not include any of the hospital expenses, which is given by all Shriners in the United States.

The members work hard to raise the funds and one of the best efforts is the Shrine Band Concert, which will again be in the Charlevoix Gym in October.

The Club is very thankful to the business people, who purchase advertising and the donations from individuals, all of which make it a great success.

It is also a tremendous pleasure for the Shrine Club to take the Sixth Grade children from the area schools to enjoy the Shrine Circus in Grand Rapids each winter.

There is no greater joy than to help crippled children or to give to the healthy children a memory of a group travel to a wonderful circus.

Sincerely,
Ray Wood,
Northwest Shrine Club

Karl Waldner charges new law on open meetings violated here

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to Gov. Milliken by Karl Waldner asking for help in enforcing the new open meetings act in Charlevoix County. Waldner believes that many political bodies in the county are not following the law.

Governor
William G. Milliken
State Capitol
Lansing, Michigan

Sire:

Our Michigan Constitution sez you can institute investigations of questionable behavior in practically any branch of state government. Thus publicly, we herewith ask that such a process be started in the case of Charlevoix county's judicial delinquencies.

The enclosed appeal brief gives you a peek at the nipple of the misaction. Local citizenry are continuously burdened with what appears to be collusive judicial political sabotage. Officials who are locally elected, hired, and appointed apparently believe that accountability of their actions/nonactions to their citizen employers is unnecessary...

Specific documentation in the particular instance, as outlined in the brief, is available to your or your follow-up people.

Awaiting your prompt reply AND ACTION to stop our feudalistic local lordships.

County applies for LEAA grant

Charlevoix County, through the Department of Social Services, has applied for a grant designed to keep young people aged 10 to 15 out of Juvenile Court.

The grant would cover 95 percent of the cost of the program, or $20,274, and the County would contribute the remaining $1,015.

Young people accused of certain misdeeds would be processed through the program, called a "Youth Diversionary Program", rather than through the courts.

Senior class sends thanks

Louis Harris survey shows editors underestimate readers

If a recent Louis Harris survey is correct, newspaper editors and other media people are seriously underestimating the interest of their readers in hard news and greatly over-estimating the public's interest in sports.

The Harris poll involved not only the public, but editors, news directors, and reporters of various newspapers and news organizations, as well. The survey was conducted among a national cross section of 1,533 adults, 86 top editors and news directors, and 76 well-known reporters and writers.

Following is a comparison showing how news personnel and the general public rated their interests in the categories which were surveyed:

Teacher Feature

...Glen Taylor

By PEG OHLE

One of the "three Rs" taught in high school is called "math", and math is divided into several different categories. Glen Taylor teaches four different kinds of math at Charlevoix High School – geometry, advanced algebra, trigonometry, and advanced math, and he thoroughly believes in the usefulness of all the courses.

"Geometry is unique in that it develops a logical thought process," Taylor says. "That is one reason we teach it, in addition, of course, to the subject matter."

As far as useful subject matter is concerned, Taylor believes that trigonometry provides the most for use in later life. "It's uses are many, in shop work, surveying, and as a foundation for college math," he points out.

Advanced algebra is a course between beginning algebra and the study of further properties of the number system. It makes it possible for students to spread into other areas and is needed in physics, chemistry, shop work, and college math, Taylor explains.

The advanced math course that Taylor teaches is basically an introduction and groundwork for college courses.

Other math courses offered at Charlevoix High School are basic math, general math, algebra I, consumer math, and shop math. Only two math courses are required for graduation, and students elect those two or more courses depending on their future plans.

The number of boys and girls taking Taylor's math courses is about equal, he says, and a large number of girls take four years of math, thus dispelling the idea that advanced math is for a man's world.

Looking back on his years of teaching, Taylor says he finds that today's students are academically equal to those he first taught, but are different discipline-wise. "They are tougher to teach," is the way he explains it.

Besides teaching, Taylor is the starter at high school track meets, and has been since he came to Charlevoix. He was a runner at Ellsworth High School, as well as a baseball player. In fact, he was a good enough second baseman to try out for the Tigers at camp in Cheboygan upon high school graduation.

"At the time I was disappointed at not being signed," Taylor recalls, "but looking back on my ability, I can understand why I wasn't," he says.

Taylor is still active in the slo-pitch league in Charlevoix, playing center field for Tri-County Well Drilling. Six or seven years ago, while playing for the Wood Shed, he received the Larry McBride Sportsmanship Trophy.

Although he "retired" from playing independent basketball a year ago, Taylor still bowls in the Church League, plays golf, skis cross country, fishes for lake trout, and grows an organic garden. And he hasn't lost his love for the Tigers, whose wins and losses he follows closely. Other interests include the Methodist Church, where he is treasurer of the Sunday School, and the Charlevoix Education Association, of which he is a past president.

When Taylor came to Charlevoix to teach almost 14 years ago, it was like returning home because he grew up in Ellsworth. He attended Central Michigan University, where he majored in math and minored in chemistry and physical education. He also has a master's degree from CMU and credit for additional hours of work at Lawrence College in Appleton, Wisconsin, where he studied under a National High School Institute Scholarship.

Glen Taylor

Taylor's first teaching job was at Crosswell-Lexington High School, near Port Huron, where he stayed for six years before coming to Charlevoix. He took six months out of his teaching career at Crosswell-Lexington to serve in the Army Artillery at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and later spent eight years in the Army Reserve.

Taylor's mother taught in Boyne City for several years, and undoubtedly had some influence on his choosing teaching as a career, he says.

Taylor is also married to a teacher, the former Marcia Kirkpatrick of Deckerville. After ten years of teaching as a career, she now is on the substitute list.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have two children. Daughter Karen Sue is a ninth grader, and son James is a fifth grader. They live in Norwood Township.

Cheboygan man announces for seat

A Cheboygan County commissioner has thrown his hat in the ring as a Democratic candidate for the state House of Representatives.

Bill Everard will be seeking the Democratic nomination for the 106th District seat currently held by E. Dan Stevens. Stevens has announced he won't be seeking re-election.

The 106th District covers parts of Charlevoix County including Boyne City as well as Antrim, Alpena, Presque Isle, Cheboygan, Montmorency and Otsego counties.

As a state representative, Everard would work to establish a senior citizen tax relief program, to promote an economic climate that encourages businesses instead of forces them to leave the state, and would work to limit ever increasing taxes.

Everard has served two terms as a county commissioner and terms on the Board of Review and as a township supervisor.

He is presently chairman of the Cheboygan County Equalization Committee, the Emergency Central Disptach Committee and the Salaries, Personnel and Judicial Committee.

He is vice chairman of the Criminal Justice Committee of the Michigan Association of Counties and serves on the Criminal Justice Committee of North East Michigan Council of Governments. He also serves on that group's Natural Resources Advisory Committee.

He also has been active in securing grants for various law enforcement projects on the Northeast side of the state and is heading up the efforts of Taxpayers United for Tax Limitation.

Everard is a graduate of the University of Michigan and the FBI Academy. He is a former special agent with the FBI and is an advertising counselor at the present time.

He makes his home in Wolverine Michigan.

Look at what's new in Charlevoix

LINDA MASON and Marty Stillings take a moment to relax in their new store Charlee's. The specialty store is open in the Market Mall.

New specialty store has everything for the home

A wide variety of items for the home fill the display shelves of Charlevoix's newest business, Charlee's.

Described as a specialty shop featuring items for the home, Charlee's offers everything from utensils and dishes to lights, furniture, fabric and plants.

The shop, located in the Market Mall on Bridge Street, is owned by Linda Mason and Marty Stillings. The women are both interior designers and have been working for other businesses in the area.

They have filled their own store with items for decorating homes and offices that they could not find in Northern Michigan but which many people had inquired about having.

In addition to providing items for decorating homes, the new store will also offer a Bridal Registry for young couples just setting up their homes.

"We have everything imaginable for the kitchen," Mrs. Stillings, who is also the manager of the store, explained.

Among the kitchen items are: Calphalon cookware, nonstick, nonscratchable commercial aluminum cookware, Trend Pacifica dishes and glassware from San Francisco, Heller plastic dish sets, custom made napkins and placemats, custom made

Ski instructors plan to summer in Charlevoix at Parkside

By PEG OHLE

Leo and Gladys Markel are new managers of the Parkside Restaurant.

They are operating the 43-year-old restaurant for Lila West, who spends her summer in Charlevoix and winters in Arizona.

The Markels come to Charlevoix from Leo the Lion Golf Course in Walloon Hills, of which they were managers and part owners. Both the Markels have also been ski instructors at Boyne Mountain.

Tom Schumacher is joining the Markels as chef. He has previously worked at the Playboy Resort Hotel in New Jersey, the Hotel Ponchetrain in Detroit, the St. Regis Hotel in New York City, and the Bijou Restaurant in Southfield.

"I got my best training at the Bijou," Schumacher says. "The first two years I was there, the Bijou was rated by the American Restaurant Association as the best in Michigan."

The new managers hope to keep the Parkside open longer than just the summer season. Their menus will feature home cooked foods, fresh not canned or frozen. "We will even grind our own beef," Schumacher says of his plans. "We want to bring the finest and best food possible to the people of Charlevoix at fair prices."

The Markels live in the apartment above the restaurant. They have two children, Mark, 20, and Gloria, 17, who will also be working in the restaurant.

Old World dining comes to Charlevoix

German food is on the dinner menu at the Antrim Dells clubhouse. Eva Mann, manager of the clubhouse and a German native, has added German entrees to the dinner menu.

Mrs. Mann said her sons, Walter and John, convinced her to try her hand in the dinner business. She has been managing the clubhouse and serving golfers luncheons since last July 4th, but she just started the dinner business a month ago.

The dinner menu includes three or four German dishes each night plus American stand bys such as steak, chicken and shrimp. Some of the German entrees include: sauerbraten, wienerschnitzel, stuffed cabbage, beef stroganoff, bratwurst and Hungarian goulash.

Accompanying the entrees is german potato salad, German sweet and sour cabbage and German desserts.

Although this is Mrs. Mann's first attempt at offering German entrees in a restaurant, she is not new to the business. Her mother was a cook in the German Social Club in Detroit.

Mrs. Mann is also assisted by her husband, John, also of German descent. Mann works at the Gulf and Western Super Tool plant during the day and helps introduce people to German wines and wines from other countries at Antrim

New procedures surround social security

From now on, persons applying for Social Security cards will have to submit complete information about themselves, including evidence of age, identity, and U.S. citizenship or lawful admission status.

Gordon Sattelmeier, manager of the Petoskey office of Social Security, says that these procedures are intended to help protect the applicant's social security record, assure that it is complete and accurate, and prevent anyone else from misusing or abusing the person's social security number.

In addition to needing the evidence listed above, a person 18 or over who is applying for a number for the first time, must apply in person.

The best evidence of a person's age and U.S. citizenship is a birth certificate, Sattelmeier said. This should be submitted if at all possible. If it is not available, other documentary evidence can be used.

Evidence of identity should include documentation which shows the person's picture, signature, date of birth or age, or other identifying information.

It takes three to four weeks to issue a Social Security number after all required evidence has been submitted because final processing is done in Baltimore, Maryland.

Applications for numbers are available at local post offices.

Student profile shows 56 percent to attend college

More students from Charlevoix High School are pursuing a higher education this year than ever before.

Of the 148 members of the Class of '78, 83 students or 56 percent have indicated that they plan to pursue their education beyond high school, according to a recent survey of the senior class.

In 1977, 54 percent of the students chose to seek more education and in 1976, 47 percent made such a choice.

The survey, conducted by the high school counseling department, found 51 students are planning to enroll in a four-year college baccalaureate degree program and the remaining 32 will enroll in two-year programs that may lead to additional study.

The college-bound students are headed towards careers in business, math, science, health and social studies.

The Class of '78 will continue the tradition set by other classes with the majority of the students attending either Central Michigan University or North Central Michigan College.

This year 19 students plan to enroll at NCMC and 10 are planning to go to CMU.

Another 10 students are also planning to attend Northern Michigan University while 9 will be attending Michigan State University and 8 will go to Ferris State College.

"Traditionally, the majority of Charlevoix students attend either CMU or NCMC," Counselor Chuck Bentley explained. "This tradition was broken with the class of 1978 when 10 students chose Michigan State University and only 4 went to Central. The class of 1977 saw 12 students go to Ferris and 11 to MSU.

"This year tradition seems to have prevailed."

The number of students attending NMU is larger than the number of the three previous years combined, Bentley said.

Of the remaining 65 students, 34 have indicated that they have a job now and will continue with that same job following graduation, another 13 said they have a job but they intend to seek a different job. And 9 students said they are currently looking for a job.

Also 9 students said they planned to enter the Armed Forces following graduation.

Shuttle service helps boaters to inland waters

Boaters will soon be able to take their small boats from Lake Michigan to the Inland Waterway via a "shuttle service" operated by Windjammer Marina on Crooked Lake.

Windjammer reports that it will pick up boats in Harbor Springs and trailer them to the marina ramp at Oden, about 15 minutes away. They will be able to handle boats up to 25 feet in length.

"This cut-off overland in Northern Michigan's popular boating area is claimed to save many miles and hours of travel around the hazardous Gray's Reef and Waugoshance Point region in the Straits of Mackinac. The trip through the waterway is in itself a major scenic attraction and now can be easily reached by Lake Michigan boaters," Windjammer says.

Beaver Island Medical center seeks donations

The Beaver Island Medical Center is conducting a campaign to raise $20,000 to complete the addition to the Center.

"Thanks to generous contributions from property owners and others, an addition to the Center is nearing completion, and equipment is being installed," says Mrs. Helen Cooper, chairperson for funds for the project. "Contributions to date amount to $31,383, but it will cost another $20,000 to finish the whole project."

The new improvements will supply better X-ray, an emergency room, dental care, more beds, entrance ramps for the handicapped, therapy equipment, a whole list of needed health facilities, according to Mrs. Cooper.

Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Cooper at the Beaver Island Medical Center, St. James, Michigan 49782.

THREE MEMBERS of Charlevoix County 4-H clubs plant tomato plants in a garden at the Grandvue Medical Care facility. The students will maintain the garden for use by the kitchen.

4-H members plant garden for Grandvue residents use

Charlevoix County 4-H club members will be helping some senior citizens enjoy fresh fruit and vegetables this year.

The 4-H members are planting and caring for the garden at the Grandvue Medical Care Facility in East Jordan.

"Grandvue didn't have the manpower to put their garden in this year," Bob Bellairs, 4-H program assistant, explained. "So the kids decided to help put the garden in as a service project."

The 4-H members will plant, weed and water the garden all summer lung, according to a work schedule. The vegetables and fruit will be given to the kitchen at Grandvue and whatever is left over will be split up among the students.

"We're pleased to be able to help the community in this way," Bellairs said.

Sign-up for 4-H clubs slated Thursday for Charlevoix

Charlevoix County children and their parents will have a chance to learn more about the 4-H program and how it operates during 4-H Sign-Up Week next week.

A series of meetings will be held at five different locations in the county between June 12 and 16. At the sign-up locations, families will be able to view slide shows about 4-H, look at 4-H project materials and talk to 4-H personnel about the program.

Children will be given the opportunity to sign-up for summer projects that may be entered in the 4-H Fall Achievement display Sept. 9.

Bob Bellairs, 4-H program assistant, said the sign-up meetings were as much for the parents as they were for the children.

"We are always in need of parents to act as club leaders and helpers," Bellairs said.

Only children accompanied by a parent or guardian will be allowed to sign up for summer project.

Recommended dietary goals represent change for diet of many Americans

If you like a lot of meat, dairy products and sweet desserts, you may not be too happy with the dietary goals recommended for the United States. If your diet is already high in cereal and grain products, but low in meat and fats, your eating habits won't need to change much.

The U.S. Senate Subcommittee on Nutrition (of the Senate Agriculture Committee) has made an attempt to provide guidelines for preventing and/or curing diseases considered to be public hazards by developing a list of dietary goals.

"It's a rather strong recommendation for change," according to Mary Zehner, Michigan State University Extension food marketing specialist.

"If these goals are implemented, they could produce radical changes – not only in our eating habits, but also in the U.S. food supply," she says. "However, there appears to be no clear mandate for change right now."

The following menu sample is one of a series compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. It contains the daily meal requirements for men, 29-54 years old, if the Senate committee recommendations are followed:

2½ - 3 cups of cereal
13 slices of bread
2½ cups of vegetables, fruit
½ egg
5 oz. lean meat, oultry, fish
1½ cups skim milk

Most Americans d[illegible] normally eat those foods in the quantities described, according to Zehner. The USDA has calculated that if this sample menu was chosen, consumption of grain products would increase 89 percent, consumption of fruits and vegetables would increase 25 percent, consumption of sugar and sweets would decrease 50 percent, and consumption of meat, poultry and fish would decrease 25 percent.

Would consumers be willing to make such extreme changes in their eating habits? "If they did, the changes would be very gradual," Zehner believes.

The Senate subcommittee has said that in the last century, the American diet has changed for the worst, and killer diseases (cancer and cardiovascular disease) are related to that diet change. Sen. George McGovern, chairman of the committee, publicly stated that 85 percent of all cancers in this country are diet related.

However, Dr. Gilbert Leveille, chairman of the MSU Department of Food Science and Human Nutrition, disagrees. He says there is no evidence to support that statement. "Cancers probably do result from something in the environment, but to say that diet is at fault is totally incorrect," he states.

Goloviches capture coyote following death of calves

A coyote, which had killed two young calves on the John Golovich farm in Hayes Township, was shot and killed late Friday when it returned to retreive its kill.

The loss of the calves was first discovered Friday afternoon when the oldest son, Craig, 18, sighted the coyote over the young calf and frightened it away. Later in the day, Craig and his brothers, David and Scott, were checking the feeder cattle that were grazing on the hilly meadow and found a second calf that had apparently been killed and partially eaten by the wild animal.

They returned to the house to report their find and prepared to shoot the coyote if it returned to the site of its most recent victim. Mrs. Golovich, with binoculars, scanned the area until she sighted the coyote returning.

The three boys, meanwhile, surrounded the area and, when the coyote started to run away, shot and killed it with a .22 cal. rifles and a shotgun.

A veterinarian was called to vertify that the two calves, which were approximately two weeks and a month old, had been killed by the coyote.

This is the first reporting of a domestic animal being attached by a coyote in this area.

Senior citizens may get property tax relief next year

Senior citizens in Michigan may be receiving some property tax relief if the Legislature approves a package of bills reported recently from the Senate Finance Committee.

It is estimated that the bills (Senate Bills 101, 270, and 1387) would provide an additional $50 to $60 million in tax relief for senior citizens under the state's property tax rebate program.

Unless further changed, the bills would:

–Lower from 65 to 62 the age of eligibility for all senior citizens property tax relief programs, thus enabling an estimated 100,000 more senior citizens in the state to qualify for such relief.

–Increase from $3,000 to $10,000 the maximum household income a senior citizen could receive to qualify for a full rebate of property taxes paid on a homestead or as a part of rent, up to a maximum of $1,200; and provide, on a sliding scale, property tax relief for those with household incomes of $13,000; and –Exempt senior citizens from all property taxes if they earn less than $10,000 a year when they apply for their exemptions through their local assessing officers. The state would be required to reimburse local taxing units for revenue lost due to these exemptions.

Days of homesteading property are over in U.S.

Remember reading about the good ole days when you could homestead on public lands? A lot of people would still like to get free or cheap land from the federal government and wonder how they can go about doing it. doing it.

To help answer consumer questions about land owned by the federal government, the U.S. Department of the Interior's Bureau of Land Management has published a new pamphlet, Can I Really Get Free or Cheap Public Land? For a free copy of this publication, send a postcard to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 678F, Pueblo, Colorado 81009.

Despite advertisements you may see in magazines or newspapers, the blunt truth is that the days of homesteading are over. According to the U.S. Department of the Interior, by 1976, Americans had been granted or sold 287,500,000 acres of public land under the Homestead Act of 1862. This Act has been repealed for all States except Alaska.

The Homestead Act will continue in Alaska until 1986, but not until after the land has been divided among Alaskan Natives, the State, and various Federal agencies. So, it will be several years before any land opens up.

Occasionally, public lands are sold; but, in 1976, only 3,641 acres were sold in 79 public auctions. And, the land is not cheap. No public land is sold for less than fair market value, and often, it's sold for prices higher than comparable private land in the same area.

So, when you see those intriguing advertising claims offering free or cheap government land, beware. Each year, people spend thousands of dollars on questionable services and information about public land, when they could get official information at no charge from the U.S. Government.

If you're interested in public lands in a particluar State, you'll need to write to the State Office of the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Department of the Interior. The addresses are listed by state in the free pamphlet.

When you send for a copy of Can I Really Get Free or Cheap Public Land? (Free), you'll also receive a copy of the Consumer Information Catalog. The Catalog, published quarterly by the Consumer Information Center of the General Services Administrtion, lists more than 200 free or low cost federal publications of consumer interest.

FAITH WROTE THE HISTORY OF THE FLAG WE WAVE

A nation's flag is not an object of intrinsic value in itself, but the symbolic worth of that rectangle of fabric waving in the breeze is incalculable. Into the blend of colors and patterns is written the turbulent history of our nation's struggle for freedom, depicting the saga of faith, sacrifice and a determination to succeed at any cost. By attending the Church of your choice, you will learn of this faith in God and belief in the liberty of man, which is emphasized in many passages throughout the Bible. The display of the flag on special occasions should serve to remind us of our priceless heritage of freedom which we must in turn help to maintain, so the next time you see our nation's banner go by you should stop and salute it, with a grateful remembrance of its lesson in what faith and courage can accomplish.

Candidates file petitions for city, county

With less than eight hours until the deadline, only a handful of people have filed nominating petitions at the Charlevoix City Clerk's office for the upcoming city elections.

Mayor Sam Supernaw has thrown his hat in the ring for another term in that position and First Ward Alderman Ray Wood and Second Ward Alderman Ivan Whitley have also announced that they will be seeking reelection.

In the Third Ward, George Plumm is stepping down after serving six years as alderman. Shirley Roloff has filed nominating petitions for the Third Ward seat. This is her second race for the seat.

All three men representing the City of Charlevoix on the County Board of Commissioners have filed petitions for re-nomination, and, as of Monday, they had no opposition.

Donald B. Meggison represents the first ward, Oscar W. Ward represents the second ward, and I. Lee Moerland represents the third ward. Meggison and Moerland are Republicans and Ward is a Democrat.

Five other incumbent County Commissioners had filed petitions at the end of the week: Martin Paul, Boyne City; Ralph Richardson, Eveline and Wilson Townships; Ira L. Davis, Bay and Evangeline Townships; Larry D. Matthew, Melrose and Chandler Townships; and Oral E. Sutliff, Boyne City.

No room for science students in freshman classes at CHS

More than 40 students entering Charlevoix High School as freshmen next fall won't be able to enroll in science courses, the Charlevoix Board of Education learned Monday night.

Vane H. Smith, high school principal, said the students won't be able to take science because of the lack of classroom space for the subject which requires laboratory as well as classroom area.

The present science department is in use every hour of the day, Smith said, which would eliminate the use of the facility by additional students.

The school board members directed the administration to find a solution to the problem and make recommendations at a future meeting.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Mann came to the United States when they were 16. Mrs. Mann had been born in Yugoslavia and Mann was born in Hungary. They met in Detroit and were married and then like many other Michiganders, began to vacation in the North.

After a while, they decided to move North permanently, and become a part of the community here.

The dining room at the Antrim Dells clubhouse is open from 11 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. for lunch and from 6 to 9:30 p.m. for dinner.

The napkins and placemats are made by a woman in Gaylord and the tables are made by a woman in Harbor Springs specially for Charlee's.

Another feature of the store is a complete line of Marimekko fabrics. Designed in Finland, the fabric is 100 percent cotton and hand screened. The heavy cotton material may be used in upholstering, for drapes, wall hangings and for clothing, Mrs. Stillings said.

The store also offers George Kovac lighting and Baylerian plastic stackable furniture as well as Otto Gerdau chairs to people looking for accessories for their homes.

Mrs. Stillings said she and Mrs. Mason decided to open Charlee's three months ago after going to Chicago on a buying trip for another store. They saw the Crate and Barrel in Chicago, a store similar to Charlee's, and they decided to establish their own store in Northern Michigan.

Beginning next week, Charlee's will expand its hours to 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays.

Rent assistance acquired for Charlevoix Apartments

Rent assistance has been found for some residents of the Charlevoix Apartments.

Frank Vaydik, owner of the apartment, said the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) had awarded the Charlevoix Apartments rent subsidies for 16 units in the complex in May. Vaydik said application had been made for the subsidies last December when they first became available.

Shirley Roloff, counselor to the senior citizens living in the apartment complex, has been trying to find ways to ease the burden of a 25 percent rent increase levied at the complex for more than a year.

Mrs. Roloff and three senior citizen residents even filed a suit in U.S. District Court charging that the citizen's constitutional rights had been violated when the rents were increased.

Under the new FmHA subsidy program, low income residents of the complex are required to pay 25 percent of their monthly income minus a utility allowance for rent. The rest of the rent cost is reimbursed through federal funds.

"There is a tremendous amount of paperwork involved in the rent subsidy program. In fact, it has almost doubled," Vaydik said. "But we went ahead and applied because we wanted to help the people in the apartments."

Vaydik said the rent subsidies were awarded to apartment residents based on income. The 16 residents with the lowest income received the subsidies.

"These subsidies take care of everyone in the apartments that we were concerned about," Mrs. Roloff said. "There were about 10 people who moved out because they couldn't afford the rent and now the remaining ones are getting the subsidies."

Vaydik explained that a housing subsidy program had been set up during the Nixon presidency for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and FmHA. However, the program received very little funding from Congress and it was difficult for needy people to get assistance.

The Charlevoix Apartments were constructed during this time, the apartment complex owner said.

Following Jimmy Carter's election as president, more funds for the subsidy program were made available to both HUD and FmHA.

Last summer, HUD allocated subsidy money to the Department of Social Services in each state and the monies were then allocated to each county. Charlevoix County received enough funds for four units.

Then in December, FmHA received rental subsidy funds and made them available to housing projects like Charlevoix Apartments. Vaydik received more subsidies than any other project in the state.
